Lord Lawrence, who was loudly cheered, said: Mr. Prime Warden, your Serene Highness, my lords and gentlemen—I beg to thank you for the great honour you have done me this day in bringing my name before this most distinguished assembly. That honour is greatly enhanced in connecting my name with the prosperity of the Indian Empire. (Cheers.) That empire was won by the valour, intelligence, and self-denial of Englishmen, and it is to me a great honour to be placed, however humbly, in the ranks of those great men by whose great exertions the vast dominions of India have been brought under the rule of this country, not from the lust of conquest, but from the unavoidable concurrence of circumstances over which no man in India could have any control. That rule, I firmly believe, was most beneficent, and had converted the country from a condition of bloodshed, anarchy, and misery into one where order and security existed, where wealth increased, and intelligence had its rightful appreciation. (Cheers.) But as education and civilisation advanced no doubt we must still further improve our system of government. I am persuaded that was the object of the great men who preceded me in India. I can only say that when I was in the position of the chief magistrate of British India it was in support of these principles that I conducted the administration. (Cheers.)

Miscellaneous.

STATUE OF THE QUEEN.—Amongst the works of sculpture that will be placed before the public in the ensuing Exhibition of the Royal Academy is the model of the large statue of her Majesty, by Mr. Weekes, R.A., for India.

THE LATE FINANCE MINISTER FOR INDIA.—Mr. William N. Massey, formerly Chairman of Committees of the House of Commons, and subsequently Finance Minister in India, has been elected a director of the National Bank.

AGRA BANK.—At the annual meeting on April the 14th of the proprietors of the Agra Bank (Limited) the report of the directors was adopted, and a dividend of 9 per cent. declared on the A shares. A meeting was also held of the shareholders in the Agra and Masterman's Bank, when the accounts and report were adopted. It was resolved that the sum of £7,500 shall be awarded to Mr. James Thomson, the chairman, out of the first surplus that accrues after the realisation of the assets. Mr. Thomson referred in hopeful terms to the prospects of the bank.

LORD LAWRENCE.—A Parliamentary paper has been published relating to Lord Lawrence's annuity. The paper contains the following resolution of the Council of India:—"At a meeting of the Council of India, 2nd of April, 1869, resolved unanimously—That, as a special mark of the high sense entertained by the Secretary of State for India in Council of the great services rendered to her Majesty's Indian Empire by the Right Honourable Sir John Laird Mair Lawrence, G.C.B., G.C.S.I., &c., in the course of a long and distinguished career, and with a view of providing for the due maintenance of the dignity of a baron, which her Majesty has been graciously pleased to confer upon him, the annuity of £2,000, granted to him by the East India Company for the term of his natural life, be continued to his eldest son or other next successor to the title."

AIDES-DE-CAMP TO THE QUEEN.—The Government have for some time had under their consideration the question of an addition to the number of paid aides-de-camp to her Majesty, in consequence of the increase to the British Army, resulting from the transfer of the various corps from the Indian forces. With a view of carrying this measure into effect, it has been determined that the whole number of aides-de-camp to her Majesty during the time of peace shall in future be as follows:—British Army, paid, 6; unpaid, 6; Indian Army, 4; Militia and Yeomanry, 12; total, 28. In this classification the Indian Army is held to comprise officers of the local service, the Staff Corps, the Royal (late Indian) Artillery and Engineers, and the new Line Regiments. Of the four aides-de-camp allotted to the Indian Army two will be paid, their allowance forming for the present a charge upon Indian revenues. Colonels Tapp and Orr have, under this arrangement, been brought on the establishment of paid aides-de-camp to her Majesty. On the occurrence of a vacancy, by the promotion, resignation, or death of either of these two officers, the next in seniority of the aides-de-camp chosen from the Indian Army will succeed to the allowance, but an officer of the Indian service will not have a claim to the position of paid aides-de-camp in consequence of any vacancy among those chosen from the British Army, even though he may be senior among the unpaid aides-de-camp to the Queen.

DR. LIVINGSTONE.—Reports had been received at the Cape, by the arrival on the 8th of March at East London of her Majesty's ship Peterel, with dates of the 18th of February from the Mozambique Channel, that Dr. Livingstone, the great African explorer, had been reported at Zanzibar as being both alive and well, and about proceeding to England. The Cape Standard of the 19th ult. remarks:—"No official notification of the subject has been made yet. The report, brought down as it is by one of her Majesty's vessels, is received with general credence and great satisfaction. The story needs confirmation, and is open to considerable doubt, especially as this was not the plan which the great traveller had marked out for himself; but, on the other hand, it should be remembered that the many difficulties of African travelling may have compelled the doctor to deviate from his proposed route." The South African Advertiser and Mail of the same date says:—"From Zanzibar, via Mozambique, the Cape colonists were delighted last week to learn by a telegram from her Majesty's ship Peterel, at East London, that Dr. Livingstone had turned up at Zanzibar 'in January,' and had gone by the overland route to Europe. No further particulars have yet come to hand, because the Peterel immediately turned back from East London for the Mozambique coast again. The French ironclad Bellequeuse, now in Table Bay, put into Zanzibar about the 27th of January, and she reports that Dr. Livingstone had been there in the earlier part of the month, but had left to make his journey to Egypt by the overland route—that is to say, back again between the equatorial lakes, and thence down the Nile through Abyssinia and Nubia. There must be some mistake about the information altogether."

BANKRUPTCY OF AN INDIAN TRADER.—Thomas George Adams Palmer, of 7, Sackville-street, Piccadilly, and formerly of Cawnpore, India, ironfounder and contractor, applied to the Bankruptcy Court on April 12 to pass his examination and for an order of discharge. He came before the Court on his own petition, and from his preliminary statement it appeared that until the end of the year 1866 he carried on business in India, when, owing to depreciation of securities and commercial losses, he was compelled to suspend payment. Many meetings of his creditors were held, and ultimately he was required to execute two assignments for the benefit of his creditors. By the deeds, which were prepared by the committee of the creditors, he conveyed all his property, movable and immovable (except his wearing apparel), to Cecil Stephenson, Samuel Bird, and another for the benefit of his creditors. He left India in 1867 and came to England, where he had been sued by one of his non-assenting creditors, Alfred Preston. He had no funds to contest the validity of the deeds in England. He had given up all his property for the benefit of his creditors, and he was compelled to seek the protection of this Court. The accounts filed by the bankrupt returned debts of £154,980, with assets, consisting of property surrendered to the trustees, £298,000. Mr. R. T. Latley, a creditor, in person opposed, and contended that the bankrupt, having given up his property to trustees in India, might properly seek his discharge there, and he had no right to petition this Court. From the bankrupt's evidence it appeared that he made a post-nuptial settlement either in 1858 or 1859. The settlement comprised some houses and some land in Oude. The trustees were in India, and so was the property; he was pressed in India. He submitted all the accounts to his creditors, and then made deeds of assignments. The year before the assignment he expended £1,200. The Court held that no valid objection had been shown to the discharge, which was accordingly granted.

THE LATE COLONEL NEWMARCH, R.E.—Lieut.-colonel Charles Douglas Newmarch, R.E., whose death appeared in the papers as having occurred at Suez on the 20th of March, 1869, aged 41, on his homeward voyage, was an officer of the Royal (late Bengal) Engineers. From earliest boyhood he evinced great precocity of intellect, and an intense desire for the army, more particularly the Engineer or scientific branch. He was only fifteen the very day he entered Addiscombe, and Sir Charles Pasley, the public examiner, wrote discouragingly to a friend of the young lad's, saying, "Though a very clever lad he was a mere boy, and could not hope to contend with young men two or three years older than himself, who had been educated at special schools; whereas he was brought up at home, under his mother's eye, and therefore I should say his chances were small for engineers." The boy, however, bade his mother "Never fear. What I know I have been solidly taught; cramming does not stick; wait till the end." In December, 1844, in his sixteenth year, he passed out first engineer, with "the sword of good conduct"—the youngest, and the first in a term of unprecedented talent; and Sir Charles Pasley was the very first to acknowledge such a success had never been achieved since the college had existed. His career in India corresponded with his early promise; he went out with high testimonials, and always held appointments beyond his age and beyond his rank; ever respected, esteemed, and highly considered, energetic and determined, he shrank from no responsibility and no duty. Moral courage he possessed in an eminent degree; and to that may be attributed his great success in life, for quiet determination and sound judgment were added to his natural and acquired gifts, and made him so valuable an officer to the Government under which he served, and the very talented corps to which he belonged. In the latter end of 1867, on his return to duty, on reaching Bombay he met with a fearful accident, being thrown from a carriage and dangerously injured; and to the injuries then received his subsequent illness and death may be traced.

THE INDO-EUROPEAN TELEGRAPH.—The scheme for effecting communication between England and India by an overland system of telegraphs is likely to be completed within the present year. The lines from London to Nordeney, which constitutes part of the system, are in working order, and from Nordeney to Thorn, on the Prusso-Russian frontiers, two wires are being constructed by the Prussian Government. From Thorn to Balta, via Warsaw, the section will consist of 800 miles of line, which will be laid on posts of heavy timber. From Balta the system will be continued via Odessa to Kertch, on through the Crimea to Ecaternador, and thence to a point which will correspond with the northern end of the Black Sea cable. This section, which will, as far as regards the land part, be constructed on iron posts, will be about 750 miles in length, and will comprise two cables—one fifteen miles long, which will be submerged in the Straits of Kertch, and another, four miles long, which will cross the river Dnieper. The continuation of the system proceeds towards Tiflis and thence to Teheran, where it will join existing lines. In its course it may be added that it will comprise a three-wire cable of about 100 miles in length, ending at Soachum Kaleh, the conductors of which will be of stranded wire covered with alternate layers of the mixture known as Chatterton's compound and gutta percha, and will weigh a little over 270lb. per knot. In order that the means of communication with India may be as complete as possible, it is intended to improve the lines from Teheran to India. These agencies of correspondence proceed from Teheran via Ispahan and Shiraz to Bushire, on the Persian Gulf, and from that point to Kurrachee. The improvements to which reference has been made will include the substitution of iron for wooden posts on the lines from Teheran, the submergence of a cable about 500 miles long, from Bushire to Jask, and the completion of a land line from Jask to Kurrachee. The result of these extensions will be that two cables between Bushire and Jask, and a cable and a land line from Jask to Kurrachee, will duplicate the facilities of communication through the whole of the Persian Gulf. The shore ends of the Black Sea cable, which will probably be laid during the approaching summer, are to be sheathed with heavy galvanised iron wires protected by tarred jute. The section of which Teheran will form the eastern terminus will, it is expected, be completed by the end of next July.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS, MONDAY, April 19.—GOVERNMENT OF EAST INDIA BILL.—The Duke of ARGYLL, in presenting a Bill with respect to the government of East India, argued, in reply to some observations made on a former occasion by Lord Salisbury on the evils of a veto which the latter had stated that a majority of the Council of India possessed on the Secretary of State's financial measures, that the supposed veto did not, in fact, exist. Since the establishment of the Board of Control the East India Company had enjoyed no such veto; and the Act of 1858, which transferred the remaining powers of the Company to the Crown, could not have been intended to limit the powers already belonging to the Crown. But this would be the case were Lord Salisbury's opinion well founded that the Act had conferred such a veto in financial matters on a majority of the Council of India. Direct grants or appropriations to persons were the only subjects in which, under Mr. Pitt's Act, the Secretary of State was not supreme; and he did not believe that the Act of 1858 had increased the restrictions on the Secretary of State's discretion, for the exercise of which that officer remained now as formerly individually responsible to Parliament. Nevertheless, although the Council had not this veto, and ought, he thought, not to have it, it was most expedient that this body, to whose services he paid a warm tribute, should be as strong as possible. But the proper supply of new blood could not be secured for it under the present condition of life tenure. The Government, therefore, proposed by the present Bill to reduce the tenure to ten years, with power to the Secretary of State to reappoint for an additional term of five years. He saw no reason for raising the salary. The Bill would also enable the Secretary of State to recommend the present members of the Council for a pension of £500 a-year under proper circumstances.

Lord SALISBURY expressed his satisfaction with the Duke's explanation as to the veto supposed to be enjoyed by the members of the Council. He regretted, however, that the Bill laid on the table did not propose a change in the present anomalous mode of nomination to the Council. He saw no ground why the appointments should not be made directly by the Crown. He doubted, moreover, the power of the Government to procure the best men, when the office was made temporary, for a salary of £1,200 a-year without a pension. Parsimony in this matter might be bad economy for India.

Lord HALIFAX remarked on the peculiar necessity of a Council to a Secretary for India coming, as he generally must, fresh from a Parliamentary life to so novel a sphere. He did not share Lord Salisbury's apprehension of a difficulty of obtaining fit men under the new conditions.

Lord LYVEDEN thought the Bill far too circumscribed in its scope. He suggested various modifications which he would have been glad to see introduced on the subject of the constitution of the Council. He considered it was at present too numerous. He proceeded, in accordance with notice, to ask the Secretary of State for India—first, whether the Indian Government had in any way implied any guarantee of the maintenance of the present Sovereign of Afghanistan on the throne; secondly, on what terms the subsidy had been made to him; and thirdly, whether provision had been made for the establishment of any consulate or agency in that State. Caution was necessary to prevent this country being drifted into war.

The Duke of ARGYLL, so far as the Government possessed through the telegraph any information, could reassure Lord Lyveden. Lord Mayo had entirely adhered to the principle of non-intervention. He maintained, against Lord Lyveden's criticisms, the propriety of having a numerously composed Council.

Lord LAWRENCE, who rose amidst cheers from both sides of the House, signified his approval of the Bill. So far from diminishing the number of the Council, it might, he thought, be wisely even increased. He recommended the increase of facilities by the grant of pensions for the retirement of worn-out members of the Council. On the subject of the relations with Afghanistan, he earnestly repudiated the notion that there was a danger of our being compromised by Lord Mayo's subsidy to the Ameer, referring in support of his conclusion to the course he had himself taken as Governor-general. Lord Mayo had but continued the policy he had himself initiated.

The Governor-general of India Bill was read a third time.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S (Ex. Army Med. Staff)

C H L O R O D Y N E

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE. The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Remedial Uses and Action.

THIS INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of Opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Colic, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

Those exhaustive diseases—Fever, Ague—so common in tropical climates, are rapidly arrested, and the cold stage in a few moments checked by a timely dose, when warmth and a general glow of the system is established, and comfort secured.

As a Sedative, Neurotic, and Antispasmodic, it is unequalled by any other known Medicine, and not to be surpassed in its specific effects.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec. 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered, the patient recovered.

Mrs. Forbes, wife of the Chaplain at Paris.—"I cannot speak too highly of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne; I have not in any single instance been disappointed with the result, even in aggravated cases of Indian Cholera."

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not supply a want and fill a place."

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

CHLORODYNE, the Great Remedy for CHOLERA.—See Report in the Times, Sept. 6, from the Malta Correspondent, who states, August 24th, that "108 cases and eighty-one deaths occurred at Messina; 60,000 people fled from the town, which is in a most deplorable condition; that Chlorodyne has been found most efficacious as a remedy, and a number of persons are reported to have been saved by its use."

Now as there are various imitations sold under the name of Chlorodyne, containing Indian Hemp, Morphia, &c., ingredients highly adverse to the cure of Cholera, the public are cautioned against the use of any compound under the name of Chlorodyne, unless it bears the name of Dr. J. Collis Browne, who coined the word Chlorodyne to designate his wonderful discovery, which he has fully tested for many years in her Majesty's Service before introducing it to the public, the wonderful success of which has given rise to various imitations totally different to genuine Chlorodyne. See the decision of Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood, reported in the Times, July 13th, 1864.

The extraordinary medical reports on the efficacy of Chlorodyne renders it a subject of most vital importance that the public should obtain the genuine, which is now sold under the protection of the Government of Great Britain, authorising a stamp, bearing the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne," without which none is genuine. Sold in bottles, 1s. 1d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d., by all Chemists. Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

MEDICINE FOR THE SPRING.—Diseases latent in the system throughout the winter will manifest themselves on the approach of warmer weather, unless the blood be freed from impurities and the body generally from noxious matters. Holloway's Pills have long since established the highest reputation for the full and efficient manner in which they accomplish this purifying purpose. These excellent Pills search every organ, pervade every tissue, and successfully grapple with all deleterious substances, either by neutralising them or expelling them. Holloway's medicine promotes comfort, cheerfulness, health, and strength. The medicine is admirably adapted for the weak and delicate, whose frames are relaxed, whose nerves are unstrung, whose digestions are upset alike by spring variations and summer heats.

A SPECIFIC for the CURE of RHEUMATISM, LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, SPRAINS, CONTUSIONS, WEAKNESS of the JOINTS, CHILBLAINS, &c. It is also an excellent remedy as a stimulating application to the surface of the chest and back in bronchitis, inflammation of the lungs, pulmonary consumption, and whooping cough. When the liver is inactive, rubbed over it, its stimulating properties have a beneficial effect, and in all cases where counter irritation is desirable, it will be found invaluable.

In bottles, small, medium, and large.

WILKINSON'S BRONCHIO-THORACIC LOZENGES.

Prepared from the receipt of an eminent Physician, and experience has fully justified their recommendation as the most speedy remedy in irritation of the throat, catarrhal coughs, bronchitis, incipient consumption, spitting of blood, &c., &c. To public speakers and vocalists they will be found invaluable, as they impart a clear and beautiful tone to the voice. Free from any preparation of opium, and of an agreeable taste, they are applicable to all.

In bottles of one uniform size.

WHITMORE'S STOMACHIC DINNER PILLS.

AN ENTIRELY NEW METHOD of FIXING ARTIFICIAL TEETH, without springs or wires, or any painful operation, more natural and durable than any introduced, giving a facility in mastication and speech hitherto unattained. To be had only of Mr. ALFRED JONES, Surgeon-Dentist to their late R.H. the Princess Augusta, the Duchess of Gloucester, &c., 64, Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square. At home from Eleven till Five.

PAINFUL TEETH, or DISEASED STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN. No chloroform, and perfectly safe.

"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body."

It is no secret that of late local anaesthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1866.

TEETH PAINLESSLY STOPPED with Permanent Enamel Cement of the exact natural colour. Guaranteed not to turn black, or make the Teeth look unsightly.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection impossible, and it is entirely free from taste or smell. Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.

INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS.

Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvements would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and sets to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the mouth and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. WEBB'S residence, free of charge.

His Treatise, "Dental Mechanics and Surgery," which explains the above painless and inimitable system, free by post, or on application to Mr. WEBB, 27, NEW BOND-STREET (late with Mr. ESKELL, Surgeon-Dentist, 8, Grosvenor-street).

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

PUBLISHERS' NOTICE.

The writer of these volumes—an accomplished member of a family whose name is conspicuous in Indian story—being now resident in India, they have not had the benefit of her final corrections. It is hoped, however, that this inevitable drawback will detract but little from the pleasure to be afforded by the perusal of the tales, which are, indeed, what they profess to be, stories of English Homes in India, represented as such homes are in different parts of the country and under various social and professional aspects. They endeavour fairly and without exaggeration to illustrate Anglo-Indian life as it is, in its many varying phases, and to bring upon the scene, in their everyday costume, many kinds of Anglo-Indian workmen, from the Resident at a Native Court, to the subaltern officer and the railway employé; and it is believed that all who have visited the countries described will recognise the truth of the portraiture.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, April 3; Agra and Calcutta, March 30; Madras, March 29.

The topic of the week is of course the interchange of visits at Umballa between Shere Ali and Lord Mayo. Unluckily those tiresome telegrams have long since rubbed the gloss of novelty off an event which has given our Indian contemporaries as fine a field as they could desire for any amount of descriptive enthusiasm. Shere Ali's progress through Lahore and Jullundur was magnificent enough, but all previous splendours paled before the reception awaiting him at Umballa. On the afternoon of the 24th March he arrived at that station, where Sir W. Mansfield did the honours pending the Viceroy's arrival on the 27th. A grand review on the 25th gave the Ameer a good opportunity for studying the appearance and discipline of our troops. The native regiments were well drilled, he thought, but not otherwise very remarkable. For the Europeans however he had nothing but flattering speeches. At Jullundur he had been specially struck by their excellent rifle-shooting. Here he repeatedly dwelt on their splendid appearance, their thorough discipline, their perfect equipment. Of their physical comeliness he had not so high an opinion, if it be true that he complained at Umritsur of not having set eyes on a handsome man within the British border. His admiration of our guns and the men who handled them seems to have been unbounded. The whole scene stirred his Afghan blood, as the sound of shillelaghs was wont to stir that of the typical Irishman. "There's nothing like fighting"—he exclaimed. "Look at the scene spread out like a beautiful garden, with those splendid guns for the flowers!" He was frequently heard to wish that he could have some of our English officers to drill and discipline his own troops.

LORD MAYO's arrival was greeted by a grand parade of troops, who formed a street two miles long from the railway station to his camp; our own soldiers being strengthened by a motley gathering of the retainers of Pattiala, Jheend, Nubba, and Kuppooorthulla. On the afternoon of the same day, the 27th, he held grand durbar; his own brilliant retinue contrasting strongly with the simpler costumes of the Afghan party. Shere Ali and his score of followers in long dull-coloured chogas and conical sheepskin caps looked like anything but personages of high rank. The Ameer himself is described as being short and thick-set, with a smooth sallow face, black beard, and hawk nose, and a general expression of resolute watchfulness. On entering the durbar-tent he seemed for a moment to "halt and cast down his head as if abashed" by the unexpected grandeur of the scene. Lord Mayo greeted him in his own courtly way, uttered a few words expressive of the goodwill borne by his country to the Ameer, and invited him to the seat of honour on his right hand, the Ameer's son, a good-looking boy of nine, being placed on his left. In the talk that followed, Shere Ali declared himself thoroughly delighted with the welcome he had everywhere received. The journey by rail, he said, was "like travelling in one's own house." After some conversation about horses, arms of precision, and so forth, the Viceroy had the trays of presents brought in. Among these was a richly-wrought sword which he himself girded round the Ameer's waist. On the 29th Lord Mayo returned the Ameer's visit, presenting him with his own sword, and on the 30th Shere Ali's warlike proclivities were indulged with a grand field-day of all the troops.

SHERE ALI left Umballa for his homeward journey on the 3rd April. One good effect of his visit seems to have already come out in the news just telegraphed from Bombay, that all the Turkistani Sirdars have promised allegiance to the Ameer of Kabul, and that the ex-Ameer's son has consequently fled across the Oxus. For the present therefore Shere Ali remains undisputed master of Afghanistan. Even the rumours of threatened resistance by the Khyberies to his homeward march have been utterly falsified by the event, for we are now told that these turbulent hill-men escorted him from Jumrood into his own kingdom.

The Russian journals seem hardly pleased with the results of the Umballa meeting. The Moscow Gazette, however, takes comfort in the thought that after what we have done to secure the friendship of Afghanistan we cannot quarrel with Russia for doing as she likes in Bokhara. What she is doing there is not particularly clear. According to the latest accounts, which are more than three months old, the Ameer of Bokhara is on the best terms with the Russians, who have been inflicting a severe defeat on his rebellious son. It is said that they have sent more troops to Karshi, and that no articles of Indian merchandise save indigo, tea, and muslin are allowed to pass the Oxus, and these only at a heavy toll.

The Commission of Inquiry into the accident on the Bhore Ghaut incline have given in their report. They ascribe the accident, it is said, to some want of due caution on the part of those in charge of the train, and to the engine-driver's mistake in releasing his brakes and reversing his engine while the train was rushing down the incline. They advise the doing away with the reversing station, and the carrying of the line round the hill. There is no need, they think, to adopt Fell's central rail for the Bhore Ghaut incline.

SYUD SELIM, the dethroned Imam of Muscat or Sultan of Oman, whichever is the more proper title, seems to hold on to the hope of regaining his kingdom under the most discouraging prospects. Turned out of Bunder Abbas through the cunning of his minister, Haji Ahmed, with the loss of his last remaining vessels and their contents, he has found an asylum at Debay, on the Arabian coast, with a Wahabee chief named Sadairee, who holds that part of the country for the Ameer of Riad. There Syud Selim is supposed to be plotting with the Ghaffries of Oman against the successful usurper Azan-binghez. Meanwhile his brother, Syud Toorkie, whose great influence among the Ghaffries might really be turned to account against their common enemy is still "detained at Bombay by the Indian Government." So at least says the Times of India. If that be true, there must surely be sufficient reasons of State for such an interference with a foreign prince. Meanwhile Sir Leopold Heath with three men-of-war sailed from Bombay on the 1st April for the Persian Gulf, with orders to look in for further instructions on the Residents of Bushair and Muscat. Probably this has something to do with the still unsettled difference between Muscat and Zanzibar.

STORMY weather in various parts of the Punjab and Bengal has undone some of the good effected by the previous rains. A severe hail-storm at Lahore, following a smart shock of earthquake, sent up the price of grain there to about Rs. 12 a seer, with every chance of its still rising. Storms and earthquakes are also reported from Jullundur, Mooltan, and other of the Punjab stations. At Sasseram, in the Shahabad district of Bengal, the hailstones were very large. In some parts of Bengal the violence of the wind was great enough to burst open "the well-bolted doors of bungalows."

FROM Bombay we hear that Sir Seymour Fitzgerald has gone on a ten days' trip to Mahabeshwar. The accumulating mud at the mouth of the Indus seems to be causing uneasiness in official quarters. Sir W. Merewether was on his way down from Sukkur to meet and consult with the Collector of Kurrachee on the question whether a change had taken place in the course of the river near its mouth.

In the High Court of Bombay several changes are coming off. On Sir J. Arnould's retirement his place will probably be filled by the present Advocate-general, Mr. Lyttelton Bayley, who will in his turn be succeeded by Mr. J. S. White. Justices Tucker and Newton, the former appointed to the Council, the latter about to retire, will probably be replaced by Messrs. Lloyd and Maxwell Melville, of the Civil Service, the latter of whom was one of the Commissioners on the Bombay Bank Failure.

FROM Madras we hear that Lord Mayo has subscribed Rs. 200 a-year each to the Monegar Choultry and the Civil Orphan Asylum, institutions specially recommended to him by the Governor, Lord Napier, and that the Indian Government has notified to Prince Azeem Jah the stoppage of further advances on account of his debts, unless he shall have made terms with his secured creditors before the 30th June. Here is another peg for the worshippers of native princes to hang another grievance upon. What, by the way, is to be done with the unsecured creditors, who have equal right to payment with the secured?

THE subject of Indian fisheries has at length been earnestly taken up by the Indian Government. "The time"—says Lord Mayo—"has come when" questions of this sort "are beginning to be more fully and clearly appreciated"—by whom, we are not told. In India the question has long interested a good many people, especially on the Madras side. Experiments in pisciculture have been carried on there for some time past, and Dr. Day was commissioned by the Madras Government to consider and report on the best means of preventing the great waste of fish caused by irrigation-weirs and other circumstances. From Madras Dr. Day was afterwards allowed to extend his inquiries to Orissa and Midnapore. The subject still growing under his hands, he has now been ordered to carry on his researches all over India, and to take the sea-fisheries also into his sphere of work.

A CALCUTTA telegram of April 20 announces the result of the tenders for the Government loan of £2,000,000. The tenders received amounted to £5,250,000, of which £1,670,000 is offered to be taken up at more than 90. To tenders above 90 the full amount of their offer will be allotted, while tenders at 90 will receive 54 per cent. of the amount applied for.

THE old lawless spirit of Bengal zemindars seems ready to blaze up again on the smallest provocation. Six zemindars of wealth and influence were charged before the magistrate of Serampore with gross oppression of one Halimudin Shaik, a ryot and small landholder in the village of Paharpore. The latter had sold to some one else a piece of land which one of the six wanted to buy. The disappointed landowner went with his labourers to the poor man's hut, and, after binding one of his kinsmen to a tree, proceeded to carry off all the ryot's goods, including money, papers, poultry, heaps of grain, cooking and washing utensils, and to drive off all his cattle, in the presence or with the countenance of the other zemindars. Mr. Ryland committed the defendants for dacoity, deeming the evidence against them irresistible, the more so that it came from Mohammedan witnesses. A Hooghly jury however acquitted the prisoners in spite of a charge for conviction from the judge, Mr. Bright. One cause of the impunity with which outrages like these can still be committed, is traced in Mr. Ryland's report to the old difficulty "of getting any independent evidence at all in such a case," a difficulty "which can only be appreciated by those who have experience of the terror exercised by an unscrupulous landlord in the Mofussil, and upon which, together with a corrupt police, the offenders in this case doubtless trusted for impunity." In this particular case, says Mr. Ryland, "the inactivity and helplessness, and the manifest corruption of the police" were "lamentably illustrated." The outrage took place in broad day, in a thickly peopled country, and close to a public highway. Clearly another sort of "settlement" is wanted for some of these zemindars.

THE question of a commercial road from Rangoon to Western China has once more been mooted in the House of Commons. Whether the remarks we offered on that head last week had anything to do with such an event, is more than we can venture to say. Certain it is however that on Thursday night Colonel Gray inquired of the Under Secretary of State for India what steps the Government were taking in furtherance of the unfinished survey of 1867. Mr. Grant Duff's answer was little more encouraging than the remarks made by the Duke of Argyll a week before. He "hopes" that the Indian Government may "see their way" to resume the unfinished task; but if they are fearful of the consequent expense or of the "grave political complications" involved therein, no sort of pressure would be placed upon them by the Home Government. Admitting the importance of the subject, he thinks that to the next generation that importance will be greater than to the present. This looks like a convenient pretext for doing nothing just now. Funds are needed for other purposes, and so the projected road to China must lie over. The alleged fear of grave complications might be reasonable if the question concerned a road by Bhamo to Yunnan. But the route of which half has already been surveyed leads through only an outskirt of British Burmah, through a country peopled by friendly Shans, whose desire to profit by regular intercourse with British India is not likely to be checked by orders from a distant authority at Mandalay. Is it not possible to begin making a decent road at once from Rangoon to Kiang Hung? Mr. Grant Duff's promised papers on this subject will explain, we hope, the true meaning of his reference to posterity.

JUDICIAL JUSTICE.

HOMER sometimes nods, and by the same token great lawyers now and then make gross blunders. A more striking instance of this truth we never remember to have noticed than that presented to us in a pamphlet called "Remarks on Decisions against the Bengal Civilian's Claims to Refund." No one would dream of claiming infallibility for the best of English judges, and the late election trials have brought out both the strength and the weakness of our Judicial Bench. But the pamphlet in question made us open the eyes of astonishment very wide indeed. It shows us several of our most eminent judges, men like Lords Campbell, Westbury, Cranworth, Chelmsford, all smitten with a most unaccountable blindness to the meaning of a few plain English words. It is almost incredible that judges of any repute should have stultified themselves so thoroughly as these have done in the case so ably analysed for us by Mr. Boulderson. A simpler question they could not have had to consider, than that submitted to them on behalf of the claims of certain Bengal civilians to a refund of surplus subscriptions paid in towards the purchase of retiring annuities. Perhaps it was too simple for intellects wont to feed on legal subtleties and to sharpen their digestive powers on the toughest problems. At any rate these learned masters of the law have strangely missed the true point at issue between the Indian Government and certain members of the Bengal Civil Service in the various judgments passed by them on the claim of the latter to a clear fulfilment of the contract made between their service and the old Court of Directors. To anyone not blessed with a turn for legal quibbling a careful study of the whole case, as reproduced in this pamphlet, can hardly fail to bring the sad conviction that law has gained an unseemly triumph over the plainest rulings of justice and common sense. It is perfectly astounding that so many judges should have erred so signally, but if words mean anything in such a question, it is none the less a fact. After reading the evidence thus set before us, we cannot wonder at the pertinacity with which the claim for redress has been urged again and again after so many repulses.

In December, 1824, the East India Company agreed to give every member of the Civil Service, on his retirement after twenty-five years, a pension of a thousand a-year for the rest of his life on these conditions:—One half the value of such annuity, reckoned according to the age of the retiring member, must have been previously paid by him into the Company's coffers, either "in the shape of subscriptions to the fund," bearing interest in his favour, or "in any other mode" that he might prefer. All future members of the Service were to contribute a certain percentage on their official incomes "during the full period of their service;" such subscriptions lapsing to the Company by the death or early retirement of the member paying them. No annuity would be granted to any claimant until he had first paid up the full amount of his estimated share. That amount would vary, as we said, with the age of the retiring member. At forty-five, for instance, he must have paid in all, including the interest accumulating on his subscriptions, the sum of Rs. 50,550, in order to buy an annuity of Rs. 10,000. In the words of the directors themselves, "as the ages of the annuitants must naturally vary, it follows that, to maintain strict equality, the amount of the purchase-money should depend upon the value of the annuity, which, of course, is regulated by the age of the annuitants."

Can anything be plainer than this? The retiring civilian was to buy his annuity at one half its estimated value, which value varied with the retiring member's age, from Rs. 101,100 at forty-five to Rs. 91,290 at fifty-two years. Thus, as the Despatch of December goes on to show, "all servants becoming annuitants will pay half the value of their respective annuities and no more, and will so far be placed on an equal footing." Absolute equality of risks and profit the Directors owned it impossible to secure; but in all their arrangements on this head they strove their best to attain a fair balance of advantage between the older and younger members of the Service.

But some of the subscribers in later years had paid up, in the way of monthly subscriptions, more than half the value of their annuities, before they claimed the right to retire on them. The late Mr. J. Harvey, for instance, had accumulated to his credit as much as Rs. 144,456, or nearly three times the amount due from a member retiring at forty-eight. If he had died before retiring, all this by the rules of the Service would have gone to the benefit of his masters. That risk at any rate formed part of the bargain between the Company and their servants; for as long as he remained in the Service, each member had to go on paying his subscription to the fund. Such a rule may or may not be quite fair; but there it is, plainly entered in the bond. Having lived however to claim his annuity, Mr. Harvey naturally looked for his full share of the benefits purchasable at so great a previous risk. The Company had engaged to sell him a certain pension on his paying half the value of it, "and no more." Over and above that half value was a balance of Rs. 95,852, which the Company were surely bound in good faith to refund him; else instead of half the value he would be buying the whole annuity and half as much again with his own money. "Half the value of the annuity and no more" was all that Mr. Harvey had ever directly or indirectly been bound to pay the East India Company. It follows therefore, as surely as night follows day, that the Company were virtually bound to repay him the whole difference between that sum and the amount of his past subscriptions. If words have any sort of meaning, this and none other is the meaning involved in the condition about paying half value "and no more." Such at least is the only conclusion possible to any intelligent being whose head has not been filled with legal cobwebs. In the face of all the lawyers that ever existed, we maintain that no other meaning can honestly be extracted from the words above quoted, or from any or every part of the despatch wherein they are found. It is hopeless trying to explain those words away. If a civil servant was bound to pay up only half the value of his annuity "and no more," how on earth can he afterwards be required to surrender a surplus twice as large as the sum actually bargained for at the outset? Even a lawyer would shrink from nakedly asserting that more and not more than a given quantity mean exactly the same thing.

There is no question here, be it said by the way, as to the lawfulness of the original bargain. It is merely a question as to the meaning of a few English words, of whose meaning, take them as you will, with or without their context, no sane person ought to have a doubt. It is clear that Mr. Harvey was entitled to a refund of his overpayments. If any shadow of a doubt remained on this point, it ought to have been removed by the Court's Despatch of September, 1841, which expressly sanctioned the refund of payments "beyond the half value of the annuity," as "being in accordance with the regulations of the Fund." In 1849, Mr. Blundell, of the Penang Civil Service, was officially assured by the Court of Directors that, whenever he retired, he should be refunded "the amount which he might have contributed in excess of the half-value" of his annuity. Penang was then ruled from Leadenhall-street, and the Penang Annuity Fund was formed nearly at the same time on the very same principles as the Bengal Fund. Again, the managers of the Madras Fund had repeatedly granted refunds of excess contributions before, in 1838, they affirmed, by a special clause in the rules of their presidency, the principle theretofore implied in the rules of 1824. This clause was sanctioned by the Court of Directors, as "being in accordance with the regulations of the fund." Many years earlier the Bombay managers had inserted a like clause in their fund rules with the approval, tacit or explicit, of the home authorities, some of whom at any rate must have been parties to the framing of the original contract. Thus there exists a close chain of evidence to show what sort of interpretation the Court of Directors placed on the despatch of 1824 during the subsequent twenty-five years. In 1856 Sir C. Rawlinson, Chief Judge of Madras, avowed his belief that the refunding of payments in excess of the half value "was a part of the original agreement between the parties" concerned. And in 1857 he quoted the despatch of 1841 in proof of the construction placed by the Court of Directors on the words "paying the half value of the annuity and no more."

In the teeth however of all these cumulative facts the claims of the Bengal annuitants have been disallowed by three successive Courts, including the Court of Chancery under Lord Campbell, and the House of Lords as embodied in Lords Westbury, Crauworth, and Chelmsford. How these "grave and reverend signiors" came to the conclusion that black meant white, that the greater was equal to the less, that half the value of a given quantity implied a good deal more than the entire value, we may take leave on another occasion to show. Meanwhile we trust that the short answer to all their reasonings will be found in the foregoing remarks on Mr. Boulderson's unanswerable statement.

UNEMPLOYED FIELD OFFICERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—With reference to the statement elicited by Colonel Sykes, that the Secretary of State for India in Council had contemplated the reduction of the charge for the unemployed field officers in India, can you inform those interested as to what is meant by this intimation—i.e., can you throw any light as to the intentions of Government in this important matter? I suppose they do not intend to force the unemployed field officers to retire on the paltry pensions they are entitled to.—Yours truly,

AN INQUIRER.

[The India Office has kept its own secret so well in this matter, that we cannot at this moment undertake to clear up "An Inquirer's" doubts. One day we are told that a revised bonus scheme has gone out to India; on another the statement is flatly contradicted. It is impossible however to suppose that unemployed field officers will be forced to retire on their pensions only.—ED. A. I. M.]

LOANS FOR REPRODUCTIVE WORKS.

The Times of India maintains that it is not always, nor often, the best policy for a nation to restrict its efforts in the way of material improvement within the limits of a surplus of the year, or of the aggregate surpluse of a short term of years. A mercantile firm never availing itself of its fair credit, and avoiding every transaction it had not hard cash of its own to carry through, might reckon on escaping very heavy losses; but, on the other hand, it would assuredly be liable to the mercantile reproach of not making its business as lucrative as it legitimately and safely might. That capital may be advantageously aided by a not inordinate degree of credit, and that such aid is both desirable and requisite, are well understood maxims, as applicable to the financial management of a nation as to that of a commercial house. It is as incumbent on Governments to turn the national credit to the benefit of the community as it would be ridiculous in a merchant to let pass favourable opportunities of investment rather than draw a bill or discount his shipping documents. The danger in either case is that the limit of due credit may be overstepped. There is, however, far less chance of such occurring in national finance than in commerce. At any rate, no State financier can find himself in such a predicament, or approaching it, without having had ample premonition. The affairs of most countries are open to public consideration, and if a financier perceives symptoms that the loan he is desirous of procuring will not be obtainable readily, and on the cheapest terms consistent with equity, he may make his account that he has already either borrowed as much as he ought, or that the national credit has through some cause or other become impaired. Nevertheless, and notwithstanding the completeness of such a test, we by no means wish to imply that it is advisable to strain a nation's normal credit to the utmost. What we contend is that, to leave national credit wholly or largely unavailed of when there exists a crying necessity for the prosecution of works of development, is a very timid and very mistaken policy. To say that works, reproductive or unproductive, estimated to cost even so comparatively small a sum as a million or a million and a-half sterling, should be provided for out of the revenue of the year when that revenue—though so largely made up of taxes on salt, of oppressive taxes on justice, on the transmission of letters, and on articles of export—has for years proved so inadequate as not to permit of administrative ameliorations so much needed as the improvement of the courts and of the police, is to advocate a course opposed to the soundest principles of national economy.

ARMING OF NATIVE TROOPS.

The Delhi Gazette acknowledges that the days when the European and native army of India each prided itself on being the freres d'armes of the other have not yet returned; that they will, in the altered aspect of affairs, ever come back is problematical. At least we may be sure the old feeling will never return with equal strength. The existing European army is no longer the army of, but the army in, India, and the old sepoy battalions round whose colours clustered much of the historical glory of the British arms are extinct. By the events of twelve years ago the records of deeds of renown that had been accumulating a century and more were obscured by blood; and the old faith in a native army which originally gradually sprung up unsullied but to be destroyed by a blow is difficult to revive; so difficult that it is even yet a matter for controversy whether the native army raised upon the ruins of the one that has passed away shall be armed as efficiently as modern appliances permit, or whether it shall continue to retain the weapon which in comparison is as a walking-cane to a bludgeon or a peashooter to a pistol. So great was the shock of '57 that it is hard, if it do not prove impossible, to restore that confidence in a native army which at one time entrusted every important strategical position to its care, and literally placed every arsenal in the country at its disposal. But the difficulty must be met some day. The folly of keeping a large and powerful native force for ever in an inefficient state will appear sooner or later. They should be and they must be trusted if the pride of a soldier is a necessary element to secure the adhesion of particles to form a solid impenetrable mass. If the lesson of 1857 has not been lost upon us, we may be sure it has not been lost upon the men of whom the existing army is composed, from whatever province they may come. While we have seen the errors of the old system and can avoid them, they have seen the evil the old sepoys brought upon themselves. In their opinion we are still more powerful, and in our opinion they are not so powerful for evil as we once erroneously thought their misguided predecessors. It is high time the efficient arming of the native Indian army received that consideration the importance of the measure imperatively demands. Opinions are divided as to the description of weapon that should supersede the "gas-pipes" in the hands of the men, but that some great improvement is absolutely necessary few if any will dispute. Whether the native shall as of yore be entrusted with weapons similar to that carried by the British army, or whether the Enfield shall go to the native when the European gets the Snider, are not questions we care to discuss at this present. Old Brown Bess is no longer of any use, not even against the matchlock of a frontier tribe, and it is upon her supersession we insist.

INDIAN TOILETS.

The Madras Times remarks that a quarter of a century back, if we may believe what is said by the inhabitants of India at that epoch, a white cotton jacket and trowsers constituted the norma dinner-dress alike of soldier and civilian, a black coat was regarded as a height of d'Orsayism reflecting great credit on the courage, but little on the sense, of the wearer; while anything approaching the costume in vogue in England was simply never heard of. But those days have gone by, and a new dynasty has arisen which knows not the simple costume of our forefathers; cotton has given way to broad-cloth, nankeen has succumbed to a tribe of "diagonals," each member of which possesses as many prefixes and affixes as the scions of Royalty; and, as a matter of course, the revolution has been so complete as to leave us just as far on the one side of moderation as formerly we were on the other. Madras has, during the last few years, been appearing at all times and in all places in the most elaborate toilette procurable, a change which, to a certain degree, is sensible, right and proper. There is no reason why, during the cold weather (we use the orthodox expression with strong misgivings as to the adjective) in our town, and during a great part of the year at Bangalore—the ordinary costume of an English gentleman should not be worn at places of public resort; for the beach on a January evening, and the Lal Bagh for nine months in the year, being sufficiently cool to admit of frock-coats by all means let us seize the opportunity to reproduce our "Europe" feelings and tastes with all the accessories possible. But the temperature of these same places during the hot season changes the aspect of affairs considerably, and alteration in dress becomes desirable—an alteration at once effected by the fair sex, but which is denied by inexorable fashion to gentlemen. Come what may, there is but one recognised cut in society, and that is the black coat; an attire which, supplemented though it may be in the case of some weak-minded individuals by white continuations, a mixture most horrible to the sight, is not calculated to mitigate the unpleasant sensations produced by a heightened thermometer. This, however, is only a lesser phase of the evil. It may fairly be urged that the two towns mentioned are large, and that if on Cupid's Bow full morning dress is de rigueur, the malcontent can betake himself to the club where coats of all sorts are admissible. It is in the small up-country stations that the present absurd system of always being dressed in what our correspondent calls "visiting togs" becomes really a hardship; in every wretched little out-of-the-way cantonment the cry for reform has been sounded, and croquet grounds and treeless band-stands alike are speckled with gentlemen vainly endeavouring to appear at ease in garments as unsuitable to them in their present circumstances as those which the Brobdignagians supplied to the veracious but slightly ungrammatical doctor whom the Fates cast on their shores.

THE MEETING OF THE VICEROY AND THE AMEER AT UMBALLA.

LORD MAYO'S ARRIVAL.

At 5 A.M. on Saturday, March 27, the special train arrived. The station had been decked with flags and evergreens and carpeted with crimson, and handsomely appointed retiring rooms prepared for the more distinguished visitors. About six Sir Donald McLeod and Sir William Mansfield came to welcome them, and long before that hour the 4th Hussars with their band, two troops of the Body Guard, and A. Battery A. Brigade R.H.A., had been drawn up in attendance, the outside verandah and steps of the station accommodating a moderate concourse of spectators. The Chiefs of Puttiala, Jheend, Nabha and Kuppoothulla awaited an introduction to Lord Mayo in a room prepared for them; and when that had taken place the State carriages drew up, and Lord Mayo, his staff, and all who had horses, mounted for the road. The feature in the procession which was to have been supplied by the Secretaries and members of Council was not well represented. By some flaw in the arrangements, the uniforms of some of the officials were unapproachable in the baggage-vans, and others had no mount. Sir Henry Durand and Mr. Seton-Karr might have been seen looking chilly and soiled, at a very early hour wending their way quietly to camp. Col. Norman was absent, and the Home Secretary was rescued from the ignominy of a trudge through the dust in full canonicals by the large-heartedness of a special correspondent. Once off all went well. The manly form of Captain Coghill headed the cortege. Then followed a wing of the 4th Hussars and a troop of the Body Guard. Next in a line Major Burne, the officer of the Body Guard, the ex and actual Military Secretary, superbly mounted both. Then the Viceroy followed, conspicuous amid the blaze of gorgeous uniform by his civilian dress—frock-coat, white trousers, and black hat. Succeeding him were the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab and the Commander-in-Chief. Then a carriage, with four handsome bays and scarlet outriders, containing Lady Mayo, her little boy, an A.D.C., and Sir William Muir. Another such carriage was occupied by Lady and Miss Muir, and Captain Lillingstone. Then followed a member of Council or two. The Maharajah of Puttiala, brilliant in glittering "kincob," and well-mounted on a bay Arab, rode with Lord Napier; General Lumsden and the Commissioner of Peshawar together, and then the Commissioner of Jullundur with the Rajah of Nabha on his left, and of Jheend on his right; Jheend's manly stature, heightened by a most becoming dress—violet moire antique and gold, mounted on a large grey horse, with abundant gold housings. Kuppurthulla, bright blue, with sprigs of gold, was escorted by the Commissioner of Delhi. It might weary you to detail all who were in the procession, who followed in detached groups—a battery of Horse Artillery and another wing of the 4th Hussars bringing up the rear. The cortege went on at a walking pace for a few hundred yards down the main road from the station, and then turned sharp to the left away from cantonments to a point on the open plain in a line with the Viceregal camp, from which a long street kept on both sides by troops led straight to it. From end to end this street was fully a mile in length, and not less than four hundred feet across, kept quite clear of trespassers—an arrangement which brought out every feature of the procession as it passed on with wondrous clearness. It was a noble sight that seeming endless barrier of soldiers on either side; and although the native contingents furnished some queer-looking warriors, and Puttiala's camelswivels would have been scouted in a pantomime, they passed muster with the rest, and served to mitigate the toujours perdrix of our own faultless battalions. Arrived in front of the Viceroy's camp, where a clump of not very successful evergreen shrubs encircled the flagstaff, a guard of honour of the Highlanders was drawn up, and there in the open space in front Lord Mayo stood to bid adieu to the native Chiefs. That done, the procession was at an end. It is due to the police to say that, on this occasion, they more than atoned for a little excess of good-nature on the last, and that the whole reception passed off as well as the most loyal could desire. At 5 P.M. of the same day took place

THE DURBAR.

To those who have never been present at such a gathering, its general aspect may be best described by saying that on this occasion it was held in a very large round tent, capable of accommodating in something less than half its area five or six hundred visitors. The tent had two long wings or continuations on either side, with space (together) for as many more spectators, the open ground between the wings serving as an alley by which to approach the main entrance. On a raised dais at the back of the tent, covered with cloth of gold, were placed three gilded chairs with crimson seats, each arm shaped into a lion. To the right and left were rows of benches for the guests, all the centre being left free, the dais facing and looking down the approach. A little before five Lord Mayo entered, dressed in the full dress of a Viceroy—dark blue, loaded with masses of gold lace—and wearing the blue riband of St. Patrick. On his coming a royal salute boomed forth, and all the assembled officers of State, in more or less gorgeous uniform—native princes glittering with rudely-shaped but not less costly gems—English ladies, when less adorned adorned the most—and soberly-clad civilians, in evening dress—arose and stood whilst he stood, and that was whilst the band played the Anthem, and for several minutes after, when with an air of hardly-concealed but pardonable impatience—for the guest was late—the Viceroy took his seat. An hour ere this Sir Donald McLeod, the Foreign Secretary, Major Pollock, the Private Secretary, General Beatson, and two aides-de-camp had proceeded in carriages to meet a deputation of the Ameer's chiefs half way, and then on to his house, a half mile distant, to conduct our guest to the meeting. At twenty minutes past five another salute proclaimed that the Ameer had started, and was then passing through the long lines of troops which guarded the whole distance to the durbar. As the Ameer reached the entrance of the Viceregal camp Lord Mayo rose from the dais and advanced, accompanied by Sir William Muir, the Commander-in-Chief, and members of Council, to the edge of the canopy, at which point the Ameer, held by the hand or arm by two of those who had escorted him, had at the same moment arrived. The Viceroy shook him by the hand, and then led him to a seat on the dais on his right, the little boy being assisted to the other on the left. All standing, Lord Mayo then addressed him as follows (pausing at the end of each sentence or two that Captain Grey, who stood below the dais in front, might convey the meaning in Persian):—

"AMEER SHERE ALI KHAN.—In the name of her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen of Great Britain and Ireland and Sovereign of India, I bid you a hearty welcome, and express to you the sincere gratification that it gives me to receive you as the guest of the Queen. I trust that this visit may be the commencement of many years of amity between her Majesty and your highness, and of mutual confidence and goodwill between the nations which her Majesty rules in India and all the subjects of your highness."

This finished, the whole assemblage became seated once more, eagerly listening to catch the conversation which ensued between the Viceroy and his guest, and which (Captain Grey still interpreting) was brought to a temporary halt by the introduction of the khillut, all told about 100 trays, containing swords and guns, clocks and binoculars, silver cups and atta-dishes, kincob embroidery and Cashmere shawls; while last, most prized of all, a gift of handsome Arabs were brought to the tent door and introduced a set-to by way of announcing their arrival. The Viceroy girded a sword upon the Ameer; and Sir Donald McLeod, assisted by one of Shere Ali's retainers, made an unsuccessful attempt to fasten a necklace round the small boy's head—the snap would not uncatch nor would the necklace pass over his busbee, but they managed to ease it half way down, and so he carried it away. A salute and the ceremony was over,—the same high officials and a guard of honour re-escorting their Ameer to his home. Lady Mayo—alas! for the cause of it—was absent; but Lady Mansfield and Lady Muir were among the ladies present. Need I say that the Ameer was greatly delighted by his reception? May I hint that we are perhaps a little overdoing the thing? But of this more in my next. Lord Mayo bore himself with an ease and dignity such as we had been led to expect of him, and looked every inch the Viceroy.—Pioneer Correspondent.

THE RETURN VISIT.

March 29.—The Viceroy, at eight o'clock this morning, returned the Visit of the Ameer. Your correspondent writes eight o'clock, but his Excellency did not arrive in the durbar tent until a quarter after eight; indeed, it almost seemed as if it had been prearranged that the Ameer should be made to wait a little, as a set-off against his own want of punctuality on Saturday.

It was arranged that the durbar at which the Ameer should receive the Viceroy's return visit should be held in the durbar tent of the Ameer's camp. Accordingly, about seven o'clock this morning the vicinity of that camp was all bustle and preparation. Like those of the Viceroy and Commander-in-Chief, the camp has a great wide central street leading up to the doorways of its durbar tent. This street was early occupied by H.M.'s 79th Highlanders, who walled its sides with two long lines of splendid-looking kilted warriors, the band of the regiment forming part of the guard of honour on duty at the entrance to the durbar tent, while a battery of horse artillery was drawn up at the entrance to the street to fire the Royal salutes. The scene altogether was a similar one to that of Saturday, the chief difference being that everything was on a somewhat smaller scale; possibly for that it was deemed that the impecunious Chief of Afghanistan ought not to display the same magnificence of reception as "the Viceroy of the Queen of Great Britain and Ireland and Sovereign of India" had done. The interior arrangements of the durbar tent were precisely similar to those of Saturday. There were the three throne chairs, the scarlet dais, and the amphitheatric rows of chairs to the right and left of the throne. There were not, it is almost unnecessary to say, any ladies present; but the gathering of politicals and militaries, in their brilliant uniforms, and the sprinkling of non-officials in evening dress, was almost as numerically strong as on Saturday.

At a few minutes before eight o'clock the thunder of a royal salute announced the approach of the Ameer; and in a few minutes the click of the "present," mingling with the notes of the Royal Anthem from the pipes of the Highlanders, burst on the air, and the Ameer entered the tent. All, to be sure, had risen; and it must be acknowledged that his Highness bore himself in right kingly manner. Preceded by the Commissioner of Peshawur (Major Pollock) and Colonel Chamberlain, both of whom are in attendance on him, and followed by his own Afghan staff, he walked composedly up to the dais and slowly ascended it. Then, turning round, his Highness faced the assemblage, standing for a moment or two, and courteously raising his hand to his forehead as he seated himself in the throne chair. He looked perfectly at his ease, and in excellent humour. He appeared, too, to be better dressed than on Saturday. He was in chogah and fur cap, but somehow or other the chogah looked altogether newer, with more gold on it, and altogether as if the royal wardrobe had had a thorough brushing up. Completely enveloping his person, the chogah left little of his Highness's tunic visible, but it was of a dark colour, corded, not braided with gold. He wore patent leather half-boots, probably a purchase made at some Punjab halting station. His son was very neatly dressed in a tunic of blue velvet, rather richly embroidered with gold. The boy is very fair, and is nine or ten years of age. The little fellow is quite self-possessed, and to-day seemed somewhat interested in what was passing. Behind the throne, standing in a row, were three Afghans of some note, personal followers of the Ameer. Two were middle-aged men, the third about thirty years. The latter is the son of the Shagassie, or Ameer's chamberlain: the others, Khoosh Dil Khan, the Ameer's secretary, and Mirza Mahommed Ali, tutor of the young prince. They were well, but plainly dressed, and watched with interest every movement of the Ameer. In rear of these was a line of some sixteen or twenty Afghan officers, several of them colonels. They cut but a poor figure. They wore their ordinary garb, and if questioned why they had not dressed themselves better for the occasion, would probably have said, "We are Afghans, and therefore soldiers! We wear the dress we fight in!" Yet there were present, fronting them, and on their right and left, men in brilliant scarlet and vivid blue, heavy with lace of burnished gold, who, notwithstanding their finery, would, sabre in hand, have given a very good battle-field account of far more than their own number of plain-dressing Afghans. But this is digressing, and into a bad spirit; the Afghans were not richly dressed, simply because they are poor.

Five minutes past eight o'clock, and no guns tell of the approach of the Viceroy! How does the Ameer take it? As composedly as could be; there is not the shadow of a change visible on his very sensible countenance. Ten minutes after eight!—and no Viceroy! The Ameer is as composed as ever, but, looking to the left, he beckons, by nod of head, to some one in the front row at that side. It is to Dr. Bellew, who has travelled in his suite from Peshawur, and who considers we should subsidise the Ameer by renting, as it were, the country up to Jellalabad from him! The doctor bounds forward to the King by beckon, and a few words pass between him and the Ameer. The latter has probably been asking what has delayed the Viceroy; but, whatever may have been the nature of the answer given him, the doctor has hardly regained his seat before the first gun of a royal salute has told all that the Queen's Representative has at length started forth. Some few minutes more elapse, and his Excellency the Viceroy is without, the guard of honour presenting arms and lowering colours to the music of the National Anthem. The Ameer now rises, and preceded by Major Pollock, Colonel Chamberlain, and Dr. Bellew, and attended by the Shah-gassie and Noor Mahomed, his Prime Minister or chief adviser, and a number of minor members of his suite, advances beyond the tent to where his Excellency is alighting from his carriage. There, after first greetings, his Highness takes the Viceroy's right hand, and so conducts him into the midst of the now standing assemblage, on to the seat of honour, the throne chair on the right of the throne. The whole assembly are once again soon seated, and a silence of several minutes ensues. His Highness breaks it by (through Captain Grey) commencing a conversation with the Viceroy. They speak in ordinary tones, indeed, rather lower than ordinary, the interpreter lowest of any. It is therefore next to impossible to catch the purport of their words; but somehow or other the purport of such colloquies is always obtainable, when there is no necessity for concealment. To-day, as on Saturday, what passed was not of the slightest political signification. His Highness expressed his pleasure at the early return of his visit by the Viceroy. The latter regretted that he had not been able to return that visit earlier. Then came a divergence to topics of general interest. His Highness expressed his thanks for the splendid manner in which he had been received everywhere since his arrival in India. His Highness himself should never forget the kindness evinced towards him, and the tidings of the gorgeous honourable hospitality of the British towards him would ring throughout Afghanistan—from one end to the other. He would consider his meeting with the Viceroy as the commencement of eternal amity between himself, his children, and his children's children, and the British. The British should "always, always," be his friends as far as lay with him.

In reply to a question by the Viceroy, the Ameer said that any man not deficient of ordinary intellect could, no matter whether he were a soldier or not, at once perceive that the discipline and condition of the army of the British were as good as could be. He considered it impossible for any Power he knew of to muster an army equal to it. It was complete in every respect.

And in speaking thus the Ameer was thoroughly sincere. The military power of the Indian Government has become strongly impressed on him since his arrival in India—so much so, indeed, that the subject is one he appears not to tire of speaking of, and recurs to, again and again, when opportunity offers. Whatever the man may not be, he is a thorough soldier, even though after the Asiatic fashion; and is just as much alive to the good points and defects of any military force paraded for his inspection as to those of a horse. The Viceroy said he intended to gratify himself by having a review for the Ameer. Oh! there was nothing would please the Ameer better, he delighted in every thing military. And it is a fact that he begged that jewels should not be presented to either himself or his followers; they did not care for, or want then; what they would prize, and did want, were arms. Throughout the return visit his Highness seemed highly pleased, and palpably anxious to please and honour his viceregal visitor. Towards the close of the conversation he rose and taking up his own sword, presented it to the Viceroy, on whom he himself proceeded to gird it. Shortly after this the interview terminated, in the same order as that of Saturday, only that, for that there were no native princes of Hindustan present, the breaking up occupied a considerably shorter time. The Lieutenant-Governors of the Punjab and North-Western Provinces were present, as well as the Commanders-in-Chief of India and Bombay, and on the entrance of each the assemblage rose.

Neither to-day nor on Saturday did the Viceroy say anything about a present of a battery of artillery to the Ameer. That present was made while the Ameer was at Peshawur, or shortly after he had left that place; and it would not do for the donor to again advert to it. Nor on Saturday did his Highness adroitly intimate to the Viceroy that Rs. 2,000 was a small sum for a gift-horse. What he did say was in reply to a question from the Viceroy, and was to the purport that a perfect horse was not procurable; that Arabs were good enough in their way, but that the Afghans preferred the Turcomanee horses to them, and would give a very long price for a good Turcomanee animal. But an official rendering of the conversations will probably be supplied to the Press by Government. It ought to be, for though not of political signification, it will be of great interest to the public. Suffice it for the present to say that Sher Ali is highly pleased, and that he is now, whatever may have been the case before he entered India, thoroughly impressed with a sense of British power, and with a sincere desire—however long or short may be its duration—to be on the best terms with us. The Umballa interview has, even in this respect alone, been productive of great good. The durbar was over at about half-past nine.

At eleven his Excellency the Viceroy held a levee in his durbar tent. It was most numerous attended, the military in undress, all others in full evening dress. It was for Europeans alone.

At three P.M. the Umballa Races (first day) were to come off, and good sport was anticipated.

The following has been issued:—

General Order by H.E. the Commander-in-Chief.

Head Quarters, Umballa, March 28.

The Commander-in-Chief in India has much gratification in informing Major general Beatson, and the officers commanding brigades and regiments, that H.E. the Viceroy has been pleased to express his high approval of the arrangements made for H.E.'s reception at Umballa on the 27th inst.

H.E. the Viceroy has been so good as to give his opinion that the sight was most imposing, and the appearance of the troops magnificent, and further to request that H.E.'s thanks might be offered to the officers and men for the manner in which the duties of the day were performed.

This general order will be read at the head of every regiment and battery in Umballa.—By order,

F. THESIGER, Colonel, Adjutant-General.

STATION TALK.

JHANSI, March 15.—In my letter, which appeared in your paper of the 1st of September last, I stated that a pariah dog had very nearly bitten off the cheek of the child of a non-commissioned officer of the 93rd Highlanders; the child was doing well, but I regret to say that last month the poor little creature died of hydrophobia; the death was much regretted in the regiment, being the last and only surviving child out of five children of the Sergeant Major. The master tailor of the 93rd Highlanders put an end to his life by swallowing a quantity of poison which he had in his possession. To-day two men of the same regiment were committed to the High Court at Agra, by our cantonment magistrate, to take their trial at the ensuing Criminal Sessions. There has been a great uproar here lately regarding the ration bread; day after day the bread was rejected, and even now it is not a bit better than before; the men are obliged to give it up as a bad job, for what redress do they get when the bread is rejected? They are served with flour and firewood; this is more annoying than to eat bad bread. While on the subject I may as well mention that our Government bakery is situated in a very bad locality; to the south it is within fifty yards of a range of houses occupied by bunias; to the north it is within forty yards of the sudder bazaar latrine! Major George Wheeler, our cantonment magistrate, is appointed to officiate as cantonment magistrate at Nussseerabad, vice Captain C. Shuttleworth, proceeding home on leave for twenty months. I am glad to find that the claims of our cantonment magistrate have at last been taken into consideration by the authorities; when the cantonment magistracy of Agra became vacant last year he was superseded; but on this occasion his patience has been somewhat rewarded, and he has not only succeeded in obtaining the officiating appointment, but his brother, Captain Frederick Wheeler, will officiate in his place here. Brigadier General J. L. Vaughan, C.B., commanding the Gwalior district, is expected here on a tour of inspection in a day or two.

MORAR, March 16.—The appointment of General C. T. Chamberlain, C.S.I., to officiate as Political Agent at Gwalior, has not taken many people by surprise. There can be little doubt about his qualifications for the post; indeed, it is generally thought that he will excel more as a political than he did in his late military command of the Gwalior District. Nevertheless, his present appointment is, I hear, anything but popular with Scindia himself, or with the members of our community here; and amongst the politicals themselves he is regarded as an interloper. For himself, I fancy the Political Agency had only one drawback, viz., its necessitating his serving under a military junior, but we are all more or less disposed to swallow our pride for filthy lucre, and the struggle between pecuniary interests and personal dignity is not generally very sweet. It may in the present instance perhaps be more so than usual, if it be really true, as is reported, that General Chamberlain tried to get Colonel Meade's appointment at Indore and failed. General Vaughan has been carrying on inspections since his arrival here, and seems to be perfect master of his work. He is to leave soon for Jhansie. Apropos of appointments and the disposal of patronage by the late Governor-General, I heard rather a good story the other day, having reference to the claims advanced by an out-of-employment applicant for a vacant post. Sir John Lawrence is certainly softer than was Sir Hugh Rose. The reply of the latter to an officer, who pleaded in support of his claims that he was married and had six children, was more forcible than parliamentary—"More fool you." But Sir John Lawrence is said to have yielded to the prayer of the suppliant under the very distressing representation that he had not sold his piano! If not true, this is what the Italians would call "ben trovato." There was a dry thunderstorm here yesterday, which has cooled the air a little.

MOOLTAN, March 21.—A heavy storm of thunder and lightning passed over the station yesterday afternoon, accompanied by torrents of rain, which for the time being completely flooded the cantonment. In several compounds the water stood at least a foot deep. I fear some damage must have been done to the crops. The annual horse fair has just been held at the Aum Khass, near the city. Some two hundred colts and fillies competed for prizes. From all I hear the show has been a very fair one, and a great improvement on last year. After a short stay here, our deputy commissioner, Colonel Elliott, is about to be transferred to Hissar. This officer had only lately come up from Goorgaon, where he had been officiating as first class deputy commissioner, for a few months only, and now he is ordered back again to Hissar. It is difficult to understand on what principle transfers of this kind are made, or how they can conduce to the public service. Major-general Rainier is expected to-morrow from Mean Meer, and will commence his inspection of the troops in the Mooltan Brigade the following day.

LUCKNOW, March 27.—On Wednesday the prizes were distributed to the principal contributors to the Soldiers' Industrial Exhibition. Nearly everybody was here, a great number doubtless being attracted by the presence of Lord Napier of Magdala, who mixed with the visitors and took no part in the ceremony. Major-general Brooke Taylor presided on the occasion, and was supported by the commanding officers of the regiments and batteries in garrison. The report of the Central Committee read by the General deplored the circumstances which in an unusual degree this year had prevented various regiments from contributing. The march of the 55th, the uncertainty which had attended the 5th Lancers as to their movements, the more than usually general relief and other causes, combined to render for some time the possibility of holding an exhibition questionable. Eight batteries of Royal Artillery, three Cavalry regiments, and seven European Infantry regiments, however, forwarded contributions in time, and were the means of making the Exhibition not only possible but very successful. The Central Committee acknowledged their obligation to these regiments and batteries, and considered themselves particularly indebted to the 1st Battalion of the 11th Regiment, the 3rd Battalion of the Rifle Brigade, and the 102nd Royal Madras Fusiliers. These regiments contributed two hundred and thirty, forty, and thirty-seven articles respectively. The expenses of the Exhibition amounted to Rs. 3,500, which sum includes prizes, carriage of articles, and the preparation and decoration of the Exhibition building. As much as Rs. 3,095 was given away in prizes, nearly half of which went to the 11th Regiment. The Rifles got Rs. 520, and the total of the prizes of the 102nd was Rs. 450. The report drew particular attention to the collection of stuffed birds and animals, the tailoring, the furniture, needlework, and artificial flowers contributed by the 11th, and commended various contributions from other corps. The prizes were distributed by Mrs. Brooke Taylor, as the several contributors presented themselves on being called up by Captain Duncan, the energetic secretary of the Central Committee. The amounts given appeared very liberal. For a collection of very beautiful artificial flowers a sum of Rs. 100 was awarded, and the exhibitor of stuffed birds and animals was rewarded with a similar sum, which he well deserved. The distribution over, General Taylor, in a short speech, declared the Exhibition closed, thanked the officers for the assistance they had rendered, and particularly expressed the Central Committee's obligations to Captain Duncan for acting as secretary, and to Colonel Moffat for superintending the decorations of the exhibition room. Most of the articles had been sold at a good price, and all remaining will be disposed of by auction on Monday, unless taken away by the exhibitors.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

EARTHQUAKE AT LAHORE.—An earthquake was felt at Lahore on the morning of the 25th March at six o'clock.

OFFICIAL.—Mr. Colin Browning, M.A., has been appointed permanently to succeed Major Dods as Inspector-General of Education in the Central Provinces.

GENERAL CRAWFORD CHAMBERLAIN has been summoned from Gwalior by the Viceroy. He will probably be the future medium of communication with the Ameer.

MANDALAY.—The Political Agent's Court—one of the most important things provided for by the new treaty—has at last been opened in the Burmese capital, Captain Sladen presiding.

CHOLERA AT ALLAHABAD.—Some cases of cholera have occurred in H.M.'s 58th Regiment at Allahabad. There were up to the 23rd ult. six cases, two of which terminated fatally. No new cases have since been reported, and the patients by last accounts were doing well.

SCANDAL AT DELHI.—A report has reached us from Delhi of a fresh scandal, caused by an officer, holding a staff appointment, having severely assaulted a disciple of Esculapius at night on the high road. As usual, in seeking for the cause of this, the question of Talleyrand has been asked, "Who is she?"—Englishman.

SOLDIERS' EXHIBITION AT LUCKNOW.—We observe that Lord Napier of Magdala was present at the distribution of prizes at the Soldiers' Exhibition at Lucknow on Wednesday, the 24th of March. Mrs. Brooke Taylor presented the prizes, or rather cards, to the successful competitors. The prizes aggregated Rs. 3,095, of which sum the 1-11th Regiment gained Rs. 1,520. The total expense of the Exhibition was only Rs. 3,500.

MAJOR-GENERAL SIR E. L. RUSSEL, K.C.S.I., the Political Resident and Commandant at Aden, is about to proceed to England on furlough for six months.

MR. W. JARDINE.—It is said that the Lieut.-Governor of the N.W. Provinces has conferred the appointment of Government Advocate for these provinces on Mr. William Jardine, M.A., LL.B., of the Middle Temple, barrister-at-law and law professor, Government College, Agra.

MUSSOORIE.—We observe that, with the sanction of the Secretary of State for India, Government have authorised a grant-in-aid of Rs. 15,000 towards the construction of a Roman Catholic Male Orphanage at Mussoorie, provided a similar amount be forthcoming from private sources.

MILITARY FUND.—It is stated that the Secretary of State has concurred with the decision of the Government of India, that an officer has no claim on the military funds where the Government allowance for passage money, after deducting the sum charged for messing, exceeds the amount allowed by the fund.

ACCIDENT ON PARADE.—We regret to observe that at the general parade, held at Lucknow on the 24th March, in honour of Lord Napier of Magdala, a singular accident occurred. One of the leading horses of a gun fell, and other horses and their riders rolled over it and each other. The result was that several men were severely injured, and three horses had to be shot on the ground.

TROOPS PRESENT AT UMBALLA.—A battery A brigade H.A.; A battery F brigade H.A.; F battery F brigade H.A.; and A battery 22nd Mountain Train. Cavalry.—4th and 21st Hussars, and 12th and 14th Bengal Cavalry. Infantry.—1st Brigade: H.M.'s 79th and 106th foot, and 15th N.I. 2nd Brigade: H.M.'s 55th Foot and 41st Foot, and 22nd Goorkhas. 3rd Brigade: H.M.'s 3rd Buffs, 40th Foot, and 26th N.I. General Huish commands the Artillery and Cavalry division of the Infantry; Col. Hodgson (79th Foot) commands the 1st brigade; Col. Hume (55th Foot) the 2nd; and Col. Best (79th Foot) the 3rd. Col. De Tessier and Lieut.-col. Murry command respectively the Artillery and Cavalry.

A PERSIAN GUEST.—The Persian General, Mirza Mahomed Ali Khan, who has been staying in Calcutta for some time past, is shortly about to return to his country via Bombay, after having visited Hyderabad in the Deccan. He has (says the Englishman) created a favourable impression in Calcutta, being a man who has travelled considerably, and acquired a taste for modern progress quite in consonance with English ideas. Some days ago he granted a long audience to Mr. C. C. Adley, C.E., on the subject of the proposed new mail and passenger route to India via Persia. It is contemplated that the proposed new route will enable the journey from London to Kurrachee to be performed in twelve days, and to Calcutta in fifteen days.

THE MOVEMENTS OF THE VICEROY.—The Viceroy was to leave Umballa on the morning of the 5th April for Saharunpore. On the following day he would go to Dehra, thence to Mussoorie on the 7th, returning to Dehra on the afternoon of the 8th or 10th. Thereafter he would drive to Hurdwar, leaving it on the 16th by boat for Roorkee. On the 15th he would drive to Saharunpore, and thence would proceed by rail to Umballa. On the 16th H.E. was to leave Umballa for Simla. We observe that the Viceroy was to be accompanied by Lord Napier of Magdala, and attended by Col. Strachey, Major Burue, and Major Bourke in visiting the places above named, before proceeding to Simla. It was thought H.E. would not be sorry to see a tiger or two in the course of his tour. The Countess of Mayo was to go straight to Simla on the departure of the Viceroy and the Ameer from Umballa.

MILITARY.—Colonel Ross, of the 3rd battalion Rifle Brigade, has been appointed commandant of the Kussowlie depot, vice Colonel Hardy, who will assume command of his regiment, the 21st Hussars. Brigadier-General G. Bouchard is transferred from Dinapore to the command of the Eastern Frontier brigade, vice Major-General W. F. Nuthall, promoted. Colonel H. Milne will succeed to the brigade command at Dinapore. The Viceroy appointed Lieutenant the Hon. J. C. Anierst, of the 3rd battalion Rifle Brigade, and Captain H. M. Bengough, 77th Foot, to be extra aide-de-camp on his lordship's personal staff, during his stay in camp at Umballa. Brigadier-General Stewart, C.B., is about to retire from the command of the Peshawur brigade, we learn, in consequence of his promotion to major-general. It is reported that Colonel S. Browne, C.B., V.C., late in command of the Guide Corps, and now of the Central India Horse, will succeed him. Colonel Browne is an officer of very distinguished service, and has had some experience of hill warfare. His residence at Murdan, when in command of the Corps of Guides, must have given him considerable knowledge of frontier politics.

Madras.

DEATH AT SINGAPORE.—Colonel Curtis, of the 8th Madras Native Infantry, has been killed at Singapore by a fall from his horse.

PRINCE AZEEM JAH.—According to the Madras Times a despatch has been received from the Supreme Government, intimating that unless the Prince Azeem Jah shall have arranged with his secured creditors by the 30th of June next the advance of twelve lakhs of rupees promised for the settlement of the Prince's debts will be withdrawn, and the parties be left to settle matters as they best can.

LORD MAYO'S CHARITIES.—When Lord Mayo was in Madras he visited in company with the Governor many of the charitable institutions of the town. After his arrival at Calcutta he wrote to Lord Napier asking him to name two institutions towards whose funds it might be most desirable to subscribe. The Monegar Choultry and the Civil Asylum were named, and Lord Mayo, says the Madras Times, has subscribed 200 rupees a-year to each of those institutions.

MILITARY.—It is rumoured in military circles that Major-General Pritchard, the Judge-Advocate General, will get the command of the Pegu division, and that General Faunce will succeed General Duke at Trichinopoly. Should these changes take place, there will be some promotion in the Judge-Advocate's department. Colonel McCullum, now on furlough, is the senior officer, and Lieutenant-Colonel Power, Deputy-Judge Advocate-General, Pegu division, and a barrister, is the second on the list.—Madras Mail.

GREAT FIRE AT PEGU.—It is with regret we have to record the occurrence of a great fire at the old historical city of Pegu, after which this central province of British Burmah has been called. A fire broke out in the Zyneganing quarter of the town on the north bank of the river, between two and three o'clock in the morning on the 12th of March. It spread so rapidly from one end of the quarter in which it commenced, that it speedily crossed the river to the Pegu side, when the flames spread with great rapidity through the whole town. The Court House and dwelling of the Extra Assistant Commissioner in charge, together with all the records and books of the judicial officer were totally destroyed.—Rangoon Times, March 20.

PRESENTS TO NATIVE NOBLES.—The Maharajah of Travancore has been presented with an astronomical telescope, the Maharajah of Vizianagram with a pair of Bohemian glass vases rose du barry, and Sir Salar Jung with a central fire breach-loading rifle. They were "distinguished contributors" to the Paris Exhibition, and it is as much to reward them for their conduct as to encourage others that these presents were made to them. The gifts were specially selected by the Secretary of State, and his selection was guided by a consideration for the idiosyncrasy of each of these members of the most exalted Order of the Star of India.

SERIOUS AFFRAY.—At about ten o'clock on the night of Wednesday last a rather serious affray occurred in Ungappa Naicken-street, Black Town, between three soldiers belonging to H.M.'s 45th Foot and a large crowd of natives. Owing to some cause, which has not as yet been ascertained, the natives fell upon the Europeans and attacked them with stones and sticks, whereupon a mutual fight took place, stones being used freely by both sides. On the Europeans being taken charge of by the police, one of them, Private Patrick Malholland, was found to be bleeding profusely from wounds he had received about his head during the encounter. The wounded man was immediately put into a hand-cart and taken to the Fort, and from thence conveyed in a dhooly to the General Hospital. The man's life is said to be in danger.—Madras Times, March 29.

POSTAGE BETWEEN INDIA AND THE UNITED KINGDOM.—In February 1868 a representation was forwarded to the Secretary of State from the Madras Chamber of Commerce on the subject of the increased rates of Overland Indian postage. This was transmitted to the Lords Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury, who replied that the postage on the correspondence with India was raised, with a view to assist in recovering the largely increased expenditure which the new weekly service to India involves, and my lords availing thereto are of opinion that it would not be advisable to disturb the present rates of postage which were settled after the whole matter had received the most attentive consideration. The Secretary of State remarks that this reply must be regarded as expressive of the decision of her Majesty's Government on the question discussed by the Madras Chamber.—Madras Times.

COCHIN, March 20.—The Madras Government have sanctioned extensive measures to protect this place from the encroachment of the sea, and have appointed Mr. O'Shaughnessy, C.E., to proceed here and prepare plans and estimates of the proposed works. The groynes already thrown out at right angles with the coast have, no doubt, produced beneficial results; but the work is stopped, and will not be resumed till Government see the report of Mr. O'Shaughnessy. The danger of this delay is very great, for the groynes are not carried to sufficient lengths to catch the littoral currents, which on this coast run at an impetuous rate, and raise up silt. The work of the groynes has already cost the Government nearly 38,000 rupees, and the improvements to be still effected will cost about two lacs. These protective measures have hitherto been carried on under the energetic management of the Master Attendant, and it is strange that he should not be allowed to go on with them, so as to complete them before the setting in of the South-West Monsoon. We are rejoiced that the railway to Cochin is sanctioned by the Secretary of State. Its advantages to us will be very great.—Madras Times Correspondent.

MRS. FITZGERALD, daughter-in-law of H. E. the Governor of Bombay, left for England on the 17th April.

PROMOTION.—The Chief Inspecting Postmaster at Kurrachee has been nominated Postmaster-general of Sind and the Persian Gulf.

OFFICIAL.—The Government of India, it appears, has negatived a proposal to augment the salary of the Under Secretary to the Bombay Government in the Public Works Department.

EDUCATION AT KURRACHEE.—Some time since the Rev. Mr. Sheldon opened a Gujarathi school in Kurrachee, and it appears that no less than 200 boys have been admitted into it.

MILITARY.—Major Baigrie, who arrived in Bombay by the mail on March 27, succeeds Captain Ronald Campbell, Assistant Quartermaster-General.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL.—The Hon. Mr. Justice Tucker was sworn in as a member of the Executive Council of this Presidency on April 6th.

MUNICIPAL LICENSE-TAX.—The Supreme Government has sanctioned the Bombay License-tax Act, which recently passed through the Legislative Council.

ARRIVAL OF THE 59th REGIMENT FROM CEYLON.—H. M. S. Indian troop-transport Malabar arrived in the harbour on Saturday, March 27th, with the 59th Regiment from Ceylon to Poona.

MR. JUSTICE GIBBS.—We learn that the Hon. Mr. Justice Gibbs will in future preside in the Bombay Insolvency and the Parsee Matrimonial Courts.

BOMBAY BENCH.—It is probable that the Hon. L. H. Bayley will be appointed to the Bombay bench of judges on the retirement of Sir Joseph Arnould, and that Mr. White will succeed Mr. Bayley as Advocate-General.

COTTON FROM SIND.—Our Paper (Kurrachee) mentions "that the Swedish barque Iris has been chartered by Messrs. Finlay and Co. to load cotton for Amsterdam. This is the first of cotton being exported to that port from Sind."

AKULKOTE.—The little State of Akulkote, in the South Maharatta country, was by Sir Bartle Frere placed under the superintendence of one of the Sirdars of Vinchoor. Some time ago the Vinchoorkhur retired from the post, which is now, we understand, to be filled by Major P. M. Baumgartner.

PERSIAN GULF.—H.M.'s ships Forte (Commodore Sir L. Heath), Daphne and Star, have left Bombay for the Persian Gulf. They sailed under sealed orders, but will probably proceed from the Gulf to Aden and Zanzibar. It is thought that the Forte will afterwards await the arrival of the Galatea, Capt. H. R. H. the Duke of Edinburgh, at Calcutta.

THE MOUTH OF THE INDUS.—The mouth of the Indus appears to have been again causing trouble or at least giving occasion for some uneasiness. Colonel W. R. Lambert, magistrate and collector of Kurrachee, is expected at headquarters to consult with Sir William Merewether in respect to a sudden change in the course of the river near its mouth. Sir William was expected from Sukkur in the Satellite, which left Kotree on the 23rd March.

ROYAL ASIATIC SOCIETY.—His Imperial Royal Highness Archduke Rainer of Austria has honoured the following members of the Bombay branch of the Royal Asiatic Society by appointing them to be correspondents of the Imperial Royal Museum for Arts and Industry at Vienna, of which the Archduke is patron:—Reverend Dr. John Wilson, Dr. Bhau Daji, Consul A. C. Gumpert, and Professor F. Kielhorn, of the Deccan College. Each of these gentlemen received a handsome diploma, signed by his Imperial Highness.

BOMBAY BANK COMMISSION.—"The first part of the report of Sir Charles Jackson and the Commission on the Bank of Bombay has," says the Friend of India, "been received in Calcutta, and Major Macleod Innes is now on his way back to India. The second and more important portion, relating to the connection between Government and the three banks, and to the liability of Government and certain of the directors and officials of the bank for the losses of the shareholders, has not yet appeared. The first part is, we understand, as justly complimentary to the Government of India as it is severe on Sir Bartle Frere and his Government of Bombay; but the severity is thought to be by no means so great as the facts demand."

THE BHOORE GHAUT ACCIDENT.—The labours of the Commission appointed to enquire into the recent accident on the Bhoore Ghaut are now over, and the report of the Commissioners is already on its way to England. Based on the evidence given by Mr. Knox, the Commissioners attribute the accident to a want of proper care on the part of those in charge of the train, and to an error of judgment on the part of the engine driver in reversing his engine—an operation necessitating the release of the brakes. The Commissioners recommend that the Reversing Station should be abolished and the line continued round the hill; and they consider that the incline can be safely worked without the introduction of the centre rail such as that used on the Mont Cenis Railway.

No. 1,753.—Read the undermentioned papers:—

Resolution No. 1,490 passed in this department on July 30, 1868, regarding the acting allowances of military officers in civil employ.

Communication from the Public Works Department No. 199a, dated the 18th ult., proposing certain rules regarding the allowances of acting officers in the Railway Department, and reviving the question whether a military officer on a staff salary, officiating in a civil appointment on a consolidated salary, should draw the whole or a portion of the staff salary in addition to the usual acting allowance.

Resolution.—The Governor-general in Council is pleased to approve of the proposals of the Public Works Department, and to decide, on a reconsideration of the question raised in paragraph 6 of the communication from that department, that the following shall be substituted for the first of the rules contained in the Resolution No. 1,490 passed in this department on July 30, 1868:—A military officer acting in a civil appointment, the salary of which is consolidated, shall, in respect of acting allowances, be subject to the rules promulgated in orders No. 534 of the Financial Department, dated June 16, 1868, regarding the acting allowances of covenanted civil officers. I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter No. 1,913 E of the 19th ult., and in reply to state that the Resolution No. 122, passed in this department on Jan. 6, regarding the acting allowances of uncovenanted servants, was not intended to reduce allowances which were being drawn at the time of its promulgation under rules previously in force.

THE NEW CIVIL SERVICE RULES.

March 17.—No. 1,717.—Read the undermentioned notifications of this department:—

No. 1,491, dated July 31 last, publishing revised rules for the grant of leave of absence to chaplains.

No. 1,092, dated 18th ult., publishing certain modifications of the rules for the grant of leave of absence to covenanted civil servants.

Resolution.—In the notification of the 18th ult. it was declared:—

1st.—That "a covenanted civil servant who has taken leave on medical certificate under leave rules prior to those of 1868 shall not be debited with such leave up to the limit of one year against furlough which would otherwise be at his credit;" but that "all such leave shall be included in the maximum amount of six years fixed in Rule II. of the rules of 1868."

2nd.—That the following was substituted for Rule III. of the rules of June 16, 1868:—"Subject to the above limit, furlough shall be placed to the credit of each officer at the proportional rate of one year's furlough for every four years of actual service."

2. The Governor general in Council is of opinion that the provisions of this notification should be extended to the cases of chaplains, but with a slight alteration in the second provision, owing to the rule that a chaplain earns his first furlough for two years by seven years' actual service, so that the period of furlough earned by him is not precisely one-fourth of his actual service.

3. His Excellency in Council is pleased, accordingly, to sanction, subject to the confirmation of the Secretary of State, the substitution of the following for Sections III. and IV. of the rules for the grant of leave of absence to chaplains contained in the notification of July 31 last:—

III.—Subject to the above limit, furlough shall be placed to the credit of each chaplain at the rate of one-fourth of his actual service after adding thereto one year.

Example.—A chaplain who has completed nine years' actual service will be credited with one-fourth of ten years'—i.e., two and a-half years'—furlough.

IV.—Subject to the same limit, leave on medical certificate to the extent of one year taken prior to the promulgation of these rules shall not be deducted from the furlough credited to a chaplain under Rule III.

IVa.—Except under Rule VIII., furlough shall not be taken until the completion of seven years' actual service, nor in excess of the period of furlough at credit under Rules III. and IV.

Home.

RETIREMENT.—Colonel W. Richardson, C.B., Bengal staff corps, has been permitted to retire.

EXPORT OF BULLION.—The Massilia has taken out £77,355 in specie for Bombay.

INDIA-OFFICE MEDICAL BOARD.—The Secretary of State for India in Council has appointed Surgeon A. H. Hilson, Bengal Army, a member of the India-office Medical Board.

DHULEEP SINGH IN THE COUNTRY.—His Highness the Maharajah Dhuleep Singh has been adding considerably to a noble collection of rare and foreign birds which he has formed at his seat at Elveden, near Thetford, Norfolk. The Maharajah has also been forming a menagerie, and a herd of antelopes has just been added to it. A member of the Barr family is still with the Maharajah as falconer.

BANKRUPT.—Mr. David Baird Lindsay, a merchant, formerly of Calcutta, since of Hendon and Muswell-hill, was before the Bankruptcy Court on April 22. His debts are £23,349. The debts due to him are returned at £34,000, including a sum of £27,000 said to be due from the firm of Gladstone, Wylie, and Co., of Liverpool, in which the bankrupt was formerly a partner; but this claim is disputed, and is at present the subject of a Chancery suit. This was the sitting for examination and discharge. There was no opposition, and the order was granted.

IMPORTS FROM INDIA.—The value of the imports into the United Kingdom from British India in 1868 was £30,071,866, as compared with £25,487,786 in 1867, and £36,901,997 in 1866. The revival observable in last year's figures occurred wholly in the last quarter of the year. The imports from India in 1865 were valued at £37,395,452, as compared with £52,295,599 in 1864, £48,434,740 in 1863, £34,133,551 in 1862, £21,968,752 in 1861, £15,106,597 in 1860, and £15,244,869 in 1859. The imports attained their maximum in 1864, when the American war was at its height, and when Indian cotton was, by consequence, in greatest demand.

BANK OF INDIA, AUSTRALIA, AND CHINA.—A meeting of the proprietors of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China was held on April 21. The net profit for the year amounted to £91,515, of which the directors have written off a further amount of £21,213 on old bad debt account. A dividend was declared at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, free of income-tax, leaving a balance of £23,365. Part of this sum, the board state, they would have been glad to transfer to the reserve fund, but for a fresh commercial disaster at Batavia, the extent of which cannot be yet defined, though it "will certainly, under no circumstances, at all injure the resources of the bank."

GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF INDIA BILL.—A Bill to define the legislative powers of the Governor-general of India, which was brought from the House of Lords to the Lower House on April 20th, was published last week. The Bill decides that the Governor-general of India in Council is to make laws for native Indian subjects without, as well as within the Indian territories, and to make regulations for the territories under the immediate administration of the Governor-general in Council. Regulations made by local Governors and sanctioned by the Governor-general in Council are to have force of law. In case the Governor-general differ from the majority of his Council, he may act in spite of them, but they may refer to the Secretary of State for India.

DHULEEP SINGH AT EXETER HALL.—The Maharajah Dhuleep Singh presided on Thursday last at a meeting held at Exeter Hall on behalf of Christian missions to Egypt. There were also present the Earl of Shaftesbury, Lord Lawrence, Mr. Macfie, M.P., Hon. A. Kinnaird, M.P., Mr. Baines, M.P., the Rev. G. Lansing, D.D. (from Cairo), General Sir George Pollock, Sir H. Verney, Bart., General Walker, &c. His Highness in opening the proceedings said the only excuse he had for his occupying the position as chairman was the interest he felt in the missions. Nineteen years ago he, then a heathen, became converted, and had ever since felt the great advantages that had accrued to him since his soul had been brought to the light. Lord Lawrence (who on his arrival was loudly cheered) proposed the vote of thanks to the Maharajah for presiding at the meeting.

THE VACANT GOOD SERVICE PENSION (£100 a-year) has been awarded to that highly-distinguished and deserving officer, Colonel Wm. Olpherts, v.c., C.B., Royal Horse Artillery, Indian Army. Concentrating, as Colonel Olpherts has done, the unbounded commendations of such brothers in arms as the late Sir James Outram and the present Lord Napier of Magdala, and many others of the highest military character with whom he served, the appointment does great credit to Lord Mayo and the Duke of Argyll. We hope it will be but the precursor of still higher honours in rank and emolument. It will be remembered that last autumn the nobility and gentry, aided by all ranks of the County and City of Armagh, presented Colonel Olpherts, on his return from India, with a splendid sword of honour, at a grand banquet, in recognition of his gallantry and services. Some of the subscriptions still remaining in hand, it is intended to present Mrs. Olpherts with a handsome bracelet.—Belfast News Letter.

TENDERS FOR BILLS.—The Indian Council has invited tenders on May 5th for £350,000 Bills of Exchange on Calcutta and Madras. It is believed that these operations will go on at the rate of £700,000 per month.

AGRA AND MASTERMAN'S BANK.—The case of Mr. Shipman, the late manager of the Agra and Masterman's Bank, was concluded on April 20. Mr. Commissioner Winslow said there was no reason why he should postpone his decision, and accordingly he should give it at once. It appeared (the learned Commissioner said) that the bankrupt owed about £40,000, of which £32,000 was found by the Court of Chancery to be due from him for moneys misappropriated for advances made through his instrumentality to Mr. M'Kim. The bankrupt, in an evil hour, listened to a proposal made to him, that he, being the manager, having the advances of the bank under his peculiar superintendence, should assist Mr. M'Kim by making loans on securities to be deposited. For this he was to receive one-half the profit, and Mr. M'Kim alone became responsible for the losses. Advances to the amount of £90,000 were accordingly made to Mr. M'Kim, which resulted in a loss to the bank of £39,000 by M'Kim alone, and a further loss of £32,000, for which the bankrupt was also responsible. No doubt, if the securities which were deposited as shares in which Shipman was interested had been appropriated to the payment of Shipman's debt the £32,000 would have been materially reduced, but still it appeared there would have been a very large debt even if all the securities in which Shipman shared had been credited to his account. The advances to the brokers were for seven days, or other short period, and his honour presumed it was the duty of the manager to call in those loans. In this respect the bankrupt owed a duty to the shareholders, and he was bound to see that the advances were made on sound securities. Now, it appeared to the Court that the whole loss had been incurred through the bankrupt's neglect of duty and his participation in the profits made by M'Kim. Upon the question whether the bankrupt was properly chargeable with the statutory offence, he would remark that the transactions with M'Kim were peculiar in their nature, and not in the ordinary course of business of a broker. Neither party had any capital to trade upon, and the dealings differed in all respects from those of jobbers and dealers in shares. His Honour was of opinion that the failure was attributable to rash and hazardous speculations, and the order of the Court was that the bankrupt be imprisoned for a period of twelve months. He regretted that he was at the same time compelled to grant the order of discharge. Mr. Bagley asked that the order for committal should be suspended for a reasonable time, to give the bankrupt an opportunity of appeal. Mr. Commissioner Winslow to this replied:—"I know that the ends of justice have frequently been defeated by that being done, and I know that the state of business is such that within forty-eight hours you will have no difficulty in obtaining a hearing. All I can say is that you may give twenty-four hours' notice of application to the Lords Justices." An application that the bankrupt might put in bail was also refused."

THE INDIA MUSEUM.—Its chief value lies, of course, in its speciality. It is not a smattering of everything and thorough in nothing, but it is restricted to the illustration of the natural history and raw products and manufactures and arts of India, and this—if one may say so of what is out of sight—it does, in most of its sections, very completely. The collection of raw products, mineral, vegetable and animal, is quite exhaustive. There is not the obscurest Indian, and we might add Eastern, trade product which is not exhibited in the museum. But what here strikes the mere sightseer is the beautiful forms and markings of so many of the seeds, suggestive of new and most charming designs in jewellery. But it is more significant to find how many of these Indian raw products are exotics naturalised in India from all parts of the world, some of the most valuable being natives of America and Africa. The collection of architectural ornaments and mythological objects is absolutely unique, although much yet remains to be done by means of paintings and photographs to illustrate the varied architecture of India. There is a case of cut jade and crystal bowls, sword handles, and other objects, encrusted with gold and gems; and of the white marble mosaics of Rajpootana and Cambay agates; and cases innumerable of jewellery and enamels of the exquisite filigree silver of Cuttack, of ivory carvings from Bengal, and sandal-wood carvings and inlaid work from Bombay, of Sindh and Cashmeer lacquered ware, and of "Koftkrai," "Bederi," and other damascened work—a most magnificent show. The Bombay inlaid work is evidently derived from the similar work of Sorrento and Girgenti. The designs are, indeed, all geometrical, but each geometrical figure can at once be identified with the particular flower in the Italian work which it represents. In the similar works made in Persia, the designs are intermediate in character, and it is always varnished, as if, it would seem, to imitate wood. The cases of Delhi embroidery, Dacca muslins, Cashmeer shawls, and Ahmedabad "Kinkobs" can be likened to nothing else than a rainbow taken down from the sky and hung round the room. In all these exquisite textures two influences would seem to be combined, one of colour coming up from the bright dye lands of Southern India and Ceylon, and the other of forms from the north, from Persia, and, probably, Greece and Italy. There is one Ahmedabad "Kinkob" distinctly Byzantine in character and yet distinctively of Ahmedabad. In fact, one distinctly realises here that from France to India the same general influences have prevailed in art manufactures. And yet between India, and China, and Japan a deep gulf is fixed. The natural history collection is very complete so far as it goes. The birds of India are fully represented, but the entire absence of an Indian herbarium is most deplorable. The old company always especially encouraged botany, and so got possessed of two or three splendid collections of dried Indian plants. But under the new régime these have been distributed. The Wallich herbarium has been sent to Kew. This is surely acting on entirely a wrong principle. It is quite right to make the Kew herbarium as perfect as possible, as the national botanical museum, but whilst it would have been sufficient to send all the duplicates from the India-office to Kew, a distinctive Indian herbarium ought to have been maintained at the India Museum.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, April 20.—THE "CROCODILE" TRANSPORT.—Mr. STACPOOLE asked the Under-Secretary of State for India if it was true that H.M.'s transport Crocodile lately left Malta for England nearly empty, while General Lysons and other officers and men, whom she might have accommodated, were waiting for passage home at the public expense.—Mr. GRANT DUFF said it was within his knowledge that the Crocodile came home recently with no troops on board, but he knew nothing whatever of any application made on behalf of General Lysons or of any officers or men for a passage on that vessel. It had not been the practice hitherto to allow officers to come home in Government vessels if they were not entitled to a passage at the public expense, but that practice might, perhaps, be reconsidered with advantage in such exceptional cases as the hon. gentleman's question seemed to point to.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, April 22.—COMMUNICATION BETWEEN RANGOON AND WESTERN CHINA.—Colonel GRAY asked the Under Secretary of State for India if any, and if any, what, steps were being taken by her Majesty's Government to promote the communication between Rangoon and Western China through a portion of the Shan States; and if the survey of that route was being proceeded with.—Mr. G. DUFF said nothing further had been done with regard to promoting communication between Rangoon and Western China since the survey was discontinued in 1867, after it had been carried on 245 miles, and very nearly to the extreme boundary of our territory. He hoped the Government of India might see its way to renew that unfinished work. At the same time the Secretary of State for India would not dream of pressing the Government of India to continue that survey if the Government of India was deliberately of opinion that by doing so grave political complications might ensue or very great expense be incurred. This whole question of communication between India and Western China, of which the project for a communication through the Shan States was merely a fragment, was one of very great interest and importance, but it would, he thought, become of greater practical importance to the next generation than to this. But interesting as it might be, and important as it might become, he thought the hon. member and many gentlemen who were connected with the North of India would admit that in the Chinese Peninsula, as in Abyssinia, we might possibly buy gold too dear. Some papers which would shortly be laid on the table would more fully explain the present state of the question.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, April 26.—INDIAN ACCOUNTS.—Mr. G. DUFF, in reply to Mr. E. HAMILTON, said no representations have been made to the Secretary of State by the Indian Government asking further details in the accounts of the home charges. The accounts of the Government of India are published in the Gazette of India. There is a certain amount of dissatisfaction in India at the want of detail; but he believed it proceeds from misapprehension. If a real desire exists to have these charges more in detail, it would be quite possible to do so; but if there is, it only shows an enormous appetite for figures.

BANDA AND KIRWEE PRIZE MONEY.—In reply to Mr. O'REILLY, Mr. G. DUFF said the information received from the Government of Madras was to the effect that the money had been paid in India to the commanding officer of the 5th Battery, to which the seven men now at Dover Castle belonged; but there must have been some mistake, as the commanding officer denied that he ever received the prize money to which the seven men were entitled. The Madras Government had been directed to inquire into the matter, with the view of setting it right.

THE RULERS OF MUSCAT AND ZANZIBAR.—In reply to Sir S. NORTHCOTE, Mr. G. DUFF said that no arrangements had been made with reference to the disputes between the rulers of Muscat and Zanzibar. No action was at present contemplated with reference to the States bordering on the Persian Gulf.

Spirit of the Home Journals.

THE INDIA COUNCIL BILL.

The Saturday Review thinks it is a good thing that future members of the Council should be appointed for ten years only, as it is necessary to infuse fresh blood as freely as possible. There would thus be three new members in every two years, except that the Secretary of State is to have a power of re-appointing any outgoing member for five years more. It is obvious that this power ought to be exercised very sparingly, as, if it were often exercised, it would be considered a sort of slight when an out-going member was not re-appointed, and thus the influx of new men would not be nearly rapid enough. Three new men in every two years is not at all more than is demanded by the interests of a country which changes so very fast as India. The Government proposes to continue the same rate of pay as now, and as the very best Indians that return home are exceedingly glad to take £1,200 a-year, no larger sum need, perhaps, be offered; but the Government proposal as to pensions might be improved. Surely £1,200 a-year for ten years, and a pension of £500 a-year afterwards, would not be at all too much to give to men who have held great appointments in India, and who, on their return do six hours a-day of hard work for ten years in the service of the State. The argument that they might be got for less is capable of being pushed much too far. Bishops and judges might probably be got for a hundred or two less a-year than we give them; but we give them what we think it is proper for the English nation to offer. If every halfpenny is to be made an object, and the screw is to be put on with the last degree of firmness, it would, we believe, be better, and more acceptable to Indians, to give a salary of a thousand a-year with a pension than a salary of twelve hundred without. For what an Indian, who is seldom rich, most desires is the certainty of having some sort of competency till he dies; and the attaching of a pension to the salary would also carry with it the advantage to the public of offering an inducement to retire to those whose health failed before their ten years were out. If a pension was given rising towards £500 in proportion as the retiring member approached to the full term of service, he would not care to struggle on after he was really unfit, which he would be much tempted to do if his only means of getting anything to retire on was to save it out of his salary as long as he possibly could. It would also be very advantageous if the Secretary of State always made the appointments, instead of leaving a portion of them to the Council itself—a system which awakens jealousy and bitterness, and exposes the nominees of the Council to the suspicion that they owe their appointment not so much to merit as to friendly jobbing. The Duke of Argyll also entered at considerable length into the difficult subject of the present powers of the Council. Lord Salisbury has on many occasions stated that the Council have the power of overruling the Secretary of State on all financial matters, and that, theoretically at least, as almost every act of Government must involve some expenditure, they have far too much control over his policy. The Duke of Argyll questioned this on Monday. The Act says that no grant or appropriation of any part of the Indian revenues shall be made without the concurrence of the majority of the Council. The Duke of Argyll says, on the authority of the present law officers of the Crown, that these words do not prevent the Secretary from ordering anything he pleases to be done in India, and paying as he thinks fit for what is done, because, though he pays the money, he does not grant or appropriate it. We are not surprised to find that Lord Salisbury replied that when he was Secretary he asked equally eminent lawyers who told him just the contrary. It is not a point that ought to be left in any doubt, and a very few words in an Act of Parliament would set it at rest for ever.

The Spectator asks what earthly object is there in deputing the power of nominating seven members of the fifteen to a Council in which a majority of members are themselves nominees of the Secretary of State? He can choose just as well as they can, and he has a real interest in selecting strong men; while their interest is in selecting weak ones, people as exactly like themselves as they can get. Moreover, the Secretary of State is responsible to the nation, and the Council are not. The very object of this Bill is to secure the variety which this practice of "co-optation" interdicts, to introduce the new blood which is thus excluded, to confirm the responsibility which is thus diminished. What, again, is the object of the rule against the reappointment of efficient men? The Duke of Argyll says it is to prevent men from considering reappointment a right; but why should he be afraid of that? On the other hand, the power of reappointment may be invaluable. Lord Halifax says no fitting successor could be found to replace Sir Charles Willock; but the Duke proposes that the Sir C. Willocks of the future shall be officially killed before it is necessary for them to die; that their experience and efficiency shall be disqualifications. Why? He probably thinks that after fifteen years a member of Council must be disqualified by age; but is not that thought dependent on this other thought, that none will be appointed but the old? A man is not necessarily disqualified for deliberative work by being sixty years of age, and a civilian may have served his full term in India, have sat fifteen years in Council, and still be only sixty; while in cases like that of Mr. Maine he might be still younger. And finally, what is the use of being so stingy about money? The salary fixed—£1,200 a-year—was too small, even when the appointment was for life; but as a salary for ten years only it is absurd, barely enough to compensate for the expense of constant residence in London. The Duke of Argyll says men can be obtained for the money, and we do not dispute the fact. Most retired Anglo-Indians grow so weary of their idleness that they would accept half the money, or nothing at all, for the privilege of sharing in the Government of India. But that is not exactly the whole question, which is, how to tempt the very best men, the men who, though they are Indians, could find careers in the world, to devote themselves for the remainder of their active life to a seclusion sweetened by daily writing on subjects more or less dreary, and by the certainty that if they labour ever so successfully their names will be none the less forgotten by their countrymen.

THE PERMANENT SETTLEMENT OF BENGAL.

The Pall Mall Gazette observes that in the East the State is the recognised landowner. Where the State is strong, it collects its dues from the land through middle men between itself and the producer. Where the State is weak these middle men naturally assume a position of their own; get as much as they can out of the producer, and pay as little as they can to the State. Such middle men were the zemindars of Bengal. In 1793, by what was termed the perpetual settlement (admired, except by a few, as a wonderful stroke of economical policy), the English Government resigned its position of landowner, and gave it away to these zemindars. It forfeited all share in the increased value of land by rendering the soil chargeable with a perpetual rent only. It left the zemindar to make his own terms (subject, of course, to law and recognised usage) with the tenants. Those who complained that Government was thus impoverishing itself, the great trustee for the whole public, for the benefit of a class, were answered by the argument that this class was all-important, and that if it did not exist it ought to be created. What has been the result? Bengal has, indeed, increased enormously in productiveness and wealth; but who has benefited by the increase? Partly, the producer; wherever law and custom raised him above the position of a mere rack renter, and made him, in fact, the enjoyer of a "tenant right." With this exception the zemindar has reaped the whole. The wealth of the class is supposed to be enormous. How do they use it? The zemindar was at first utterly astonished by his conversion from a taxgatherer into a maguate. He then proceeded to act according to the instincts of his order. He was not a feudal chief, with an adoring tenantry; still less a Sir Roger de Coverley, with the ways of a country gentleman; least of all a Duke of Bridgewater or Marquis of Bute, a far-sighted partner in great industrial schemes. If we may believe the received Indian accounts of him, he simply enjoyed himself in his own fashion, which he doubtless thought the most sensible. He spent his money in luxury and extravagance, or in devotion; or hoarded, or borrowed. The great recipients of the vast income of Bengal seem now, from the same accounts, to be dancing girls, Brahmins, idol manufacturers, money lenders. Doubtless there are exceptions, but only such as prove the rule. Meanwhile, the Government is comparatively starved; left to devise new, unpopular, and ineffectual modes of taxation in order to meet absolute wants, while enterprises of the greatest importance to the development of the country either languish for want of support, or are undertaken at the cost of burdensome loans. Such is the problem which now occupies—but with little hope of solution—the attention not only of English observers, but of the wiser and more advanced among the natives themselves.

PORTRAIT OF SIR C. BEADON.—The likeness of Sir Cecil Beadon, painted by Sir F. Grant, for the subscribers in Calcutta, has safely arrived at that city. It has been inspected by the Hon. Mr. Eden, Mr. H. S. Beadon, Rajah Kalikishna Bahadoor, and other subscribers, all of whom pronounced the likeness to be most satisfactory. It has been decided to hang the picture in Belvidere-house as soon as the repairs have been completed.

INCIDENTS OF THE AMEER'S JOURNEY.—The Ameer was delighted with his reception and has expressed himself as gratified beyond measure at the courtesy and honours accorded him at Lahore and elsewhere. At Lahore especially the beautiful Montgomery Hall was decorated in a way which attracted universal admiration. The durbar was a great success, so was the illumination, in spite of little shortcomings. At Umritsur again he was entertained in a most splendid manner, and was enchanted with the illuminations. At Jullundur he described the Commissioner as a princely man. He had declared at Lahore that Sir Donald McLeod was a man of rank, and that there could be no doubt as to his being a noble amongst his own people. But at Loodiana all this was changed; through some most unaccountable blunder the officers who received him were not even dressed in uniform, and there was not a sign of what awaited him. He was put up in a hotel, where, properly speaking, there was no sort of accommodation. The food was so bad that he declined it; and he was put up in a hotel which it appeared must have been in former days the very house where he and his father, Dost Mahomed, were confined. Could any blunder be worse than this? Then, again, his enemies the Suddozys are at Loodiana. He coupled all these things together and declared that he would never again visit a place of such evil omen for himself and family. At his departure there were no preparations made to facilitate the travelling of his suite, and in fact his stay at Loodiana proved a marked and most disagreeable contrast to his tour through the Punjab.—Correspondent of the Englishman.

A NODYNE CEMENT, for decayed and tender TEETH, allays most violent pain, becomes hard as enamel, answers when the Teeth are nearly broken to the gum. "There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body."

It is no secret that of late local anesthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1868.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection impossible, and it is entirely free from taste or smell. Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.

INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS.

Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvements would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and sets to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the mouth and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. WEBB'S residence, free of charge.

His Treatise, "Dental Mechanics and Surgery," which explains the above painless and inimitable system, free by post, or on application to Mr. WEBB, 27, NEW BOND-STREET (late with Mr. ESKELL, Surgeon-Dentist, 8, Grosvenor-street).

PUBLISHERS' NOTICE.

The writer of these volumes—an accomplished member of a family whose name is conspicuous in Indian story—being now resident in India, they have not had the benefit of her final corrections. It is hoped, however, that this inevitable drawback will detract but little from the pleasure to be afforded by the perusal of the tales, which are, indeed, what they profess to be, stories of English Homes in India, represented as such homes are in different parts of the country and under various social and professional aspects. They endeavour fairly and without exaggeration to illustrate Anglo-Indian life as it is, in its many varying phases, and to bring upon the scene, in their everyday costume, many kinds of Anglo-Indian workmen, from the Resident at a Native Court, to the subaltern officer and the railway employé; and it is believed that all who have visited the countries described will recognise the truth of the portraiture.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, April 10; Agra and Calcutta, April 6; Madras, April 5.

The Umballa pageantry came to an end on April 5, when Shere Ali and Lord Mayo went their several ways, each probably satisfied with the general result of their meeting. The Ameer, who came uncertain and mistrustful to see what he could get, has gone off flattered by a splendid reception, laden with presents, fortified by the friendly assurances of our Government, and apparently imbued with a warm liking for his courteous and courtly host. He has admired our soldiers, listened to our music, eaten of our ices, enjoyed our steeplechases, and chaffed our dandies. Whatever else he has failed to secure, there is no doubt that the manner of his reception has greatly strengthened his position in Afghanistan. Some of his demands have been met with a courteous negative. Lord Mayo could not guarantee the integrity of the dominions bequeathed to the Ameer by Dost Mohammed, nor promise to aid him in recovering Seistan from Persia, nor hold out any hope of supplying him with English officers to drill his troops. Native officers he may have at any moment—if they choose to take service with him. But he has been formally recognised as Ameer of Afghanistan; his “eldest” son, Yakob Khan, as Shere Ali calls the youngest but ablest of his children, has been accepted as his lawful heir; and further supplies of arms and money may stimulate or reward his efforts to seat himself firmly on his father's throne. If the time for sending a British envoy to Kabul is not yet ripe, he may correspond with the Viceroy through one of the brothers Chamberlain, who is to act as special political agent on the Punjab Frontier. In the event of further encroachments on the part of Persia or of Russia, he may count on something more than our moral support. For the present there is to be no treaty; but protocols will be exchanged after the Ameer's return to Kabul.

A CALCUTTA telegram of May 1 announces Shere Ali's arrival at Jellalabad on the 28th April. Further accounts confirm the news of Ishat Khan's capture somewhere on the Afghan frontier.

ACCORDING to the Friend of India, Mr. Maine intends to resign his post of law member in the Supreme Council at the beginning of the cold season, in spite of the efforts making to secure his services for a year longer. India will miss a lawyer of more than lawyer-like capacity, but her loss will be Oxford's gain if it be true that Mr. Maine is to fill a new chair of jurisprudence in that University. We hope with the Friend that his Indian experience may yet be turned to account either at the India Office or in any other way that may suit the special proclivities of the author of “Ancient Law.”

WE learn from the Indian Daily News that cholera was raging in some parts of Purneah, that in several villages business had come to a stop, the crops were left uncut, and the cattle roaming about unheeded. This was the very time for red tape to assert its supremacy, and so it did. A gentleman sent to the civil surgeon of his district for some cholera pills. The answer was that he must first get an order from the magistrate. When he had gone through the inevitable process, and found himself armed, as he hoped, with the means of arresting a disease that was slaying its hundreds, he was duly favoured with a packet of twenty-four pills. How far these were likely to aid him in his benevolent errand, we may easily imagine.

LORD CLANRICARDE's denial of the alleged neglect to keep Lady Canning's tomb in repair has evoked from the Friend of India an answer “questioning” the truth of his lordship's statement that any appeal to public charity was “wholly unnecessary.” To this day the tomb remains “covered with a wretched thatch roof, and open to the four winds of heaven.” Much of the mosaic work, which weather and white ants between them had destroyed, has lately indeed been renewed, “but not certainly at the expense of Lord Canning's heir.” Despairing of help from the proper quarter, the Friend calls on the Indian Government to erect a “suitable mausoleum” in place of the miserable shed that mars the beauty of the grounds at Barrackpore.

LORD NAPIER—not of Magdala—made an effective and thoughtful speech on the 2nd of April, at a convocation of the Madras University for conferring degrees. Its chief aim was to show what fruits, in his opinion, the higher English education in India was likely to bear. For one thing it would tend to develop a truly national spirit in a country where hitherto there has been “no standing ground which the confused and variegated multitude could occupy together.” Now however “the arena of reconciliation” has been thrown open; “the higher European culture will weave the bond of union,” will help Indians to “conceive and create a common country.” And secondly, it will in time develop a better knowledge of all that pertains to India itself, its history, monuments, institutions. Again the higher culture will prepare the natives for a larger share in the government of their own country, opening out honourable careers to them both in British India and in the semi-independent States. His lordship took care to dispel all allusions touching England's readiness to part with her Indian empire. "The English conquered India for the interest of England; they retain India for the interest and glory of England," which is bound up in this case with the interests of humanity. But he dwelt powerfully on the need of employing "the native to teach the native." His native hearers should be "true Englishmen to Indians—true Indians to Englishmen." Finally, he reminded them of the partnership they had attained through the higher education with the past, the present, and the future of all the world. Educated by England "India shares the intellectual fortunes of the United States and Australia, of more than half the civilised world that is to be."

DR. SHAW and thirty-three other passengers by the P. and O. Company's steamer Mongolia have addressed the managing-directors of the Company in a letter bristling with complaints of the bad fare supplied them on the other side of the Isthmus. Tea and coffee always bad and all but milkless; breakfasts of curried bones, cowheel, liver, pig's-feet, &c., badly cooked and served cold; luncheons conspicuous for "bad butter and offensive cheese," as well as short commons; "tepid discoloured water" for soup, joints "cold and uneatable," vegetables scanty, stale, and cold; bad wines, barring the Burgundy, and nothing to cool them with, soda-water supplied only for money at an exorbitant rate, bad lime-juice and very little fresh fruit—such in brief is the indictment lodged against the Company's agents on board the Mongolia. People on shipboard are apt to grumble much for want of other amusement; they are seldom satisfied with less than thirteen penny-worth of comfort in return for every shilling of passage-money. But at sea you cannot fight against the impossible. A ship's hold is not elastic, butter will turn rancid in a temperature of 100, thin soup and cold dinners sometimes afflict the fastidious on shore, and it is surely possible to make a very good breakfast on "fragments from the previous day's dinner." And in how many English hotels and refreshment-rooms can you get decent wine at less than four times its fair value? On board a P. and O. Company's steamer people who like claret may drink their fill of it all day long, from breakfast to supper. Tea and coffee are never very good at sea, for some inscrutable reason; but are they ever good at the Crystal Palace, let us say? By their own showing the passengers in the Mongolia had plenty to eat of things which hungry men would be slow to reject. Some of them at any rate were less hard to please, for we find twelve of them signing a counter address declaring that, "while a good deal might be done to amend in detail the arrangements at present made on board your steamers generally for the comfort of the passengers, we have seen no reason to be specially dissatisfied with those which we have found here prevailing." And it is worthy of remark that complaints of this sort generally come from passengers outward bound, not from those on their way home, who have learned not to expect too much for their money. After all however, the terrible heat of the Red Sea even in March must be a sore trial for the least querulous, and a squeamish appetite may hardly be wooed by pig's-fry. The drinks too ought at any rate to be properly cooled, and the wants of invalids a little more carefully regarded than at present they often are. That there is room for improvement even the address of the minority seems to prove.

WE lately took occasion to point to the good old system of taccavi advances as one way of supplying the want of water for agricultural purposes. Recent experience confirms the justice of our remarks. In four districts of the North-West the taccavi advances up to the middle of March amounted to Rs. 37,234. By this modest outlay a good many small landholders will have been materially aided in the work of irrigating their own fields. Many new wells have thus been dug in sandy districts where nothing could grow without water. At first it seems that native apathy had to be stirred up by official persuasions, but after a time requests for money advances began to multiply apace. Nor was this all. Not a few landholders have at length been shamed into digging new wells at their own expense, by the sight of what was going on around them.

PUBLIC opinion seems steadily gravitating towards the principle of short enlistments for home service. Both Lord Monck and Lord Northbrooke came virtually to the same conclusion on this point in the discussion raised by the former some ten days ago in the House of Lords. Mr. Cardwell is known to lean in the same direction. A short term of service for the line, if it means anything, must mean at the utmost five years. When the principle thus proclaimed comes to be applied in practice, some special arrangement will have to be made for India. Under one form or another we shall end in reviving the old local army, unless we are prepared for the serious expense of replacing an Indian regiment every five years. The old unfounded prejudice against a separate force like the old Company's Europeans may still avail to prevent the raising of so many regiments for Indian service only, though nothing could well be more absurd than objections founded on the mutinous conduct of a few hundred soldiers fresh from England in 1860, conduct which their comrades in the older regiments carefully refrained from countenancing. But anyhow, if short service becomes the rule at home, men will have to be enlisted for longer terms in India. In that case the limit of first enlistments might be fixed at eight or ten years, with power of re-engagement for six or eight more.

LAST Thursday the Government of India Bill was read a second time in the Upper House, after a discussion opened by Lord Cairns, who urged that all doubt as to the power of the Secretary to overrule his Council in matters of finance should be cleared up by a special act. He pointed out that the view maintained by the Duke of Argyll was not the view which had been accepted by his predecessors. Lord Lyveden also declared that the clause regarding "grants and appropriations" had been inserted in the original Act in order to give the Council of India a check on the Secretary of State. Lord Chelmsford held that the meaning of the clause was clearly against the Duke of Argyll, and Lord Salisbury adhered to his old opinion that the Indian Minister might order a declaration of war, but "could not, against his council's opinion, order the consequent payments." On the other the Lord Chancellor was equally clear, that no court of law would construe the clause as Lord Cairns had construed it. The Duke of Argyll maintained that the object of the clause was simply to prevent him from bribing his political creatures, and denied that his predecessors had regarded it in any other light. Lord Halifax ridiculed the notion of any difficulty arising on this point between the Secretary of State and the India Council. So the question remains unsettled, each party satisfied with their own reading of it.

THE death of Sir Arthur Buller, M.P. for Liskeard, on Friday last, deprives Parliament of the Indian experiences of a lawyer who for some years sat in the Supreme Court at Calcutta, before coming home to enter on his Parliamentary career in 1859.

SOME of our contemporaries were rather premature in announcing the resignation of Dr. Hall, Librarian at the India Office. As late as Monday he had not resigned. In all likelihood however the next number of this journal will announce the accomplished fact.

RETIRING SCHEME—INDIAN ARMY.

The following important despatch has been sent out to Calcutta from the India Office:—

India Office, London, March 11, 1869.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Governor general of India in Council.

My Lord,—Para. 1. I have very carefully considered in Council your Despatch, No. 443, dated Nov. 7, 1868, forwarding certain papers relating to the present condition and future prospects of the several staff corps, and proposing a scheme for inducing a limited number of the senior officers to retire at once, and for the prevention of an undue growth of the class of field officers in future by certain modifications in the present retiring rules.

2. After reviewing the several opinions expressed on this subject by Sir W. Mansfield, Sir R. Temple, and Colonel Norman, and referring to the statements and calculations given in a memorandum by the Controller general of military expenditure, your Government state that, having given this important question due consideration, and carefully weighed the several suggestions contained in the minutes above referred to, you feel bound to record your opinion that some remedial measures are indispensably necessary, specially to meet the present exceptional increasing excess of field officers, and generally to counteract the permanent tendency to an undue proportion of the higher grades, and to an extravagant number of recipients of the colonel's allowance.

3. With reference also to the existence of a considerable number of unemployed officers, many of them of the higher grades, who are either unfitted for or unwilling to accept employment, your Government recommend the following measures:—

1st. That, within a limit of 200, any substantive lieutenant-colonels in the Indian staff corps or Indian army, who are entitled to a retiring pension, may be allowed to retire, with an addition of £150 per annum to whatever pension they may be entitled to, together with a bonus of £1,000, provided they do so within a given date from the issue of the order sanctioning the measure, such date not to be less than six or more than twelve months distant; the senior applicants to have the first claims.

2nd. That, as regards those officers who may retire subsequent to that date, the period entitling them to the lieutenant-colonel's pension of £365 per annum may be twenty-five instead of twenty-eight years as heretofore, including three years' furlough; and the period entitling them to the colonel's pension thirty instead of thirty-two years, including four years' furlough. Further, that the amount of the colonel's pension may be increased from £456 5s. to £500 per annum.

3rd. That it may be notified that, from the date fixed as the limit for retirement with the additional pension and bonus, the system of appointing field officers to perform general or station duty will cease, and all those who may be holding no appointment, civil or military, permanent or officiating, will be placed on an unemployed list.

4th. That such as remain continuously unemployed for a period of three years, will, after that period, be restricted to the English pay of their rank without any Indian allowances, but will be allowed to reside wherever they may elect, either in India or in Europe, and that, when they may have been continuously out of employ for a total period of five years, they will be placed on the retired list, with the pension to which they may then be entitled.

Lastly. That all officers who may be considered by Government and the commander-in-chief as unfit for either civil or military employment suitable to their rank, will be transferred to the retired list, if entitled to pension, or to the half-pay list if not so entitled.

4. I have perused these papers, and considered your proposals with much care and attention, and have now to inform your Excellency of the reasons which have led her Majesty's Government to dissent from the conclusions to which you have arrived, and to withhold their sanction from the several measures submitted by your Government, with a view to facilitating retirement among the senior officers of the Indian service.

5. The grounds upon which your proposals are based on the present occasion are mainly financial.

6. You apprehend an alarming increase of expenditure on account of officers in receipt of the colonel's allowance, as a result of the strong inducement to remain in the service held out to them at the present time, in the certainty of attaining that great prize within a given period; and you hope, by the measures now proposed, to prevent the evil which you thus anticipate, and further to remove, in a great degree, the present burden of unemployed officers. You seem to entertain some apprehension, also, of administrative difficulties arising from an undue proportion of field officers in the several staff corps.

7. The apprehension expressed in these papers of future embarrassment arising from the organisation and present condition of the several staff corps appears to me excessive, and in a great measure unfounded.

8. In the allusion so frequently made to the large number of field officers in these corps, there is a too great tendency to measure their organisation by the conventional standard of a British regiment, to which they bear no analogy.

9. On the creation of these corps as substitutes for the bodies of British officers in the Indian service, previously borne on regimental lists, an entirely new system of promotion was introduced, after much deliberation; a system under which the maintenance of a fixed proportion between the several grades was given up as unnecessary in a body formed for staff employment only.

10. The object aimed at was to render the service in these corps attractive by the certainty of regular promotion in the army; and it cannot be affirmed that under this system the promotion of officers destined to pass the best years of their lives in India is unreasonably rapid.

11. The effect of it, however, will of necessity be to increase the proportion of officers of the higher grades; an effect which will be the more marked, inasmuch as, of the twelve years' service in the grade of subaltern required for promotion to the rank of captain, at the least two, and in practice more than two, will be passed in a line regiment; and thus very few officers will be borne on the rolls of the staff corps in the grade of subaltern for more than eight or nine years.

12. And I must remind your Excellency that the employment of the officers of an Indian staff corps is practically, and has been authoritatively declared to be, independent of their military rank. I need hardly point out, indeed, that an officer's fitness for a staff situation, whether in a civil or military department, does not depend on his army rank, but upon his moral, physical, and intellectual qualities; and no better evidence can be required in support of this view of the case than the fact that officers of the staff corps, promoted from time to time under the present system from one grade to another, are not necessarily disturbed in the appointments they hold, or disqualified by such promotion for the duties they have to perform. In fact, the men are the same in age and qualification, though it may be in a different and higher grade from that which they would have held under the former system. Thus, many officers who would have been subalterns, and perhaps brevet captains, under the old rules, are now substantive captains; but not, therefore, the less qualified for the performance of similar duties.

13. Admitting, however, the propriety of conforming to usage and tradition in regard to regimental service, and of providing officers of the subaltern grade for the subordinate positions with native regiments, as well as a certain proportion of young officers for departmental employment, there is no reason to doubt but that the several staff corps, in their normal condition, will at all times provide sufficient numbers for this purpose.

14. The number of native regiments, even were it considered necessary that the regimental staff should be of the subaltern grade, which is certainly not the case, would, at four subalterns per regiment, require about 700 subalterns, whereas a very simple calculation will show that in the normal state of the staff corps the number of subalterns, assuming Colonel Norman's estimate of their aggregate strength to be correct, will be generally between 1,000 and 1,100.

15. At the present time, it appears from the statement of the Controller of military finance, in para. 31, that there are in the service, including officers on the local list, not less than 1,069 officers of the subaltern grade; and yet frequent allusion is made to the want of subalterns, many of them, moreover, being placed in departmental employment in positions not unsuited to officers of higher grade, while others are unemployed from not having passed.

16. The introduction of the staff corps with new and more favourable rules of promotion, and the transfer of nearly the whole of the remaining officers of the Indian army to those corps with the immediate benefit of those rules, has of course tended to swell temporarily the numbers in the higher grades; while the contemplated future reduction in the aggregate number of officers required for employment in India, and the actual reduction of the number serving with regiments, places a certain number of officers out of employment until absorbed.

17. As an administrative question, the necessity of maintaining for any time a considerable number of officers out of employment is to be regretted; but, considered under its financial aspect, as contrasted with the former state of things, the evil is more apparent than real, inasmuch as the officers who would formerly have been all posted to and employed with regiments, are now classed as unemployed in consequence of the introduction of a new regimental organisation, involving a great reduction in the number of regimental officers. Indeed, they are only now unemployed in the sense of holding no staff appointment, and are doing duty either in garrisons or with regiments.

18. Upon this subject I shall only further observe that the present lists show very few officers of such length of service as to lead to the supposition that they have become inefficient from that cause. In fact, by far the greater number of the older officers are employed, and many in positions of great responsibility, requiring more than usual experience, energy, and capacity.

19. I cannot, therefore, admit that there are, in this increase in the number of officers of the higher ranks, sufficient grounds for introducing this exceptional measure for inducing some of them to give up the service.

20. I have now to notice your proposal with reference to the present number of unemployed officers.

21. I find from the latest reports that the number of officers of the several grades unemployed in India, below the rank of colonel with colonel's allowance, was nearly as follows:—

	Lieut. cols.	Majors.	Captains.	Lieuts.	Total.
Bengal:
Staff corps	28	27	18	9	82
Local service	27	5	14	26	72
Madras:
Staff corps	23	20	25	19	87
Local service	17	2	14	17	50
Bombay:
Staff corps	1	5	7	2	15
Local service	4	—	3	7	14
Total	100	59	81	80	320

And it appears from an analysis of the reports [Statements have been prepared from enclosures to—Military letter from India, No. 487, dated Dec. 22, 1868; ditto ditto, No. 374, dated Sept. 26, 1868; military letter from Madras, No. 417, dated Nov. 26, 1868; military letter from Bombay, No. 136, dated Nov. 25, 1868, para. 15. The statement of the unemployed local officers in Madras has been prepared from the Army

List of Oct. 1, 1868] that the reasons for the non-employment of these officers, as far as they are given, though the reports are incomplete in this respect, are as follows:—

	Lieut. cols.	Majors.	Captains.	Lieuts.	Total.
Not passed, or otherwise unfit	58	28	48	60	194
Removed for incapacity or misconduct	1	2	—	3	6
Resigned appointment at their own request	7	8	2	2	19
Various causes	32	17	22	5	76
No cause assigned	2	4	9	10	25
Total	100	59	81	80	320

22. It appears, therefore, that a large number of these officers are considered ineligible for employment in consequence of their not having qualified in the languages; not a few have been allowed to resign employment, and thus, by their own act, to swell the unemployed list; others have been thrown temporarily out of employment, from causes that must always operate to some extent in such a service as that of India, whether in the civil or military departments, since, with a varying number of absentees, occasionally vacating appointments during absence, there must inevitably remain at all times a margin of unemployed officers.

23. I understand from your despatch that you look to the present scheme to reduce this list of unemployed officers.

24. With some misgivings as to the voluntary acceptance of your offers on the part of any very large number of the senior officers, misgivings shared in and expressed by Sir R. Temple, in his minute of October 20 last, you say that, if the inducement in the shape of either increased pension or bonus, were coupled with a notification that this special offer was final, and that after a given date all field officers continuously unemployed would, like general officers in the staff corps, be placed on English pay after three years, and that all those who might be considered clearly unfit for military or civil employment suitable to their rank would be removed to the retired list, you are of opinion that a very extensive reduction in the senior grades might be effected.

25. Upon this I must observe, that there are no grounds whatever for anticipating that the officers now unemployed would be more ready to accept the terms offered than other and more efficient men; that, in many cases, to purchase the retirement of officers of the latter class would be to inflict an injury on the state, and to cause considerable embarrassment to the public service; while, with regard to the former, it would be simply, in many instances, to offer a premium upon indolence or incapacity; and I must remind your Excellency, with reference to the coercive measures proposed in this paragraph of the despatch, that your Government would, strictly speaking, be in no better position to enforce these measures after the promulgation of this notice than at present.

26. The officers of the late Indian service who joined the staff corps, under Lord Cranborne's despatch of August 8, 1866 [G.O.G.G., No. 1062, December 15, 1866], have been informed that they have not rendered themselves, by so doing, liable to be placed on half pay, under G.O., No. 826, September 17, 1861, upon any grounds other than such as would have justified their removal from the effective strength of the army, had they not joined the staff corps.

27. Under the spirit of this notification, the removal of an officer who entered the service before 1858, on the ground of his having failed to pass in the native languages, will not be justifiable. Other measures, to which I shall presently allude, must be resorted to, with a view to the speedy reduction of the unemployed list.

28. In the meantime, your general order, No. 1,168, dated December 10, 1868, passed in accordance with the instructions of Her Majesty's Government, communicated in Sir Stafford Northcote's despatch, No. 259, of July 23 last, will, it is hoped, effectually put a stop to the practice of allowing officers on the effective list either to decline or to resign employment, and remain unemployed, to suit their own convenience; and it is not without some surprise that I am led to conclude, from the remarks contained in the 37th paragraph of your despatch, that the power of an officer thus to make a convenience of the public service is still practically admitted. So long, however, as this is the case, there can be no limit to the list of unemployed officers, and no want of excuse for expecting some special measures with a view to getting rid of the burden. Under the present constitution of the Indian military service, it is imperatively necessary that the service at large should understand that no officer can escape active employment but by resigning the service.

29. I have now to consider your proposals in their probable bearing upon the finances of the state.

30. The statements and calculations submitted by the Controller general of military expenditure in his memorandum, dated May 23, 1868, lead to such startling results, that I considered it desirable to subject them to the test of investigation by some person thoroughly conversant with questions of this nature; and with this view I caused the whole of the papers to be placed in the hands of Major general Hannington, formerly military auditor general in Bengal, an officer whose ability and experience in the conduct of inquiries of this nature must be well known to your Government.

31. I now forward for your information a copy of his report [dated February 4, 1869], by which you will perceive that the results obtained by the Controller general, and upon which the apprehensions of your Government have been raised, are greatly exaggerated; that, instead of the Government saving expense by the adoption of your proposals, it would, if the full number of 200 officers retired, involve an absolute loss to the state of upwards of £167,000, including an immediate payment of £200,000 (assuming that none of the unemployed officers are absorbed), to say nothing of the inconvenience that might be caused by the simultaneous retirement of many of the most valuable members of the public service.

32. It may, however, be reasonably expected that some of the unemployed officers would accept the offer, and, to the extent of their unemployed pay, the above capital sum would require reduction, but no assurance can be felt that many of this class would do so, not to speak of the impolicy of purchasing the retirement of such as are unemployed by reason of incapacity—while no reliance can be placed on their fitness to succeed to the offices vacated by others; a fact illustrated by the circumstance pointed out in Sir Stafford Northcote's despatch of July 23 last, No. 259, that, while the unemployed list in Bengal had been reduced during the year 1867 by five only, there had been, during the same period, 28 fresh admissions to the staff corps.

33. It seems also, from General Hannington's report, that, instead of the number of officers of the several staff corps receiving the Colonel's allowance being likely to amount in 1892 to 981, they will not exceed 487, according to the Controller general's tables, or 629 according to tables more favourable to life; and that, instead of the total number of such officers both in the staff corps and local service being 1,154, and the aggregate annual cost on that account £1,227,835, the entire number will not exceed 573 in the one case, or 740 in the other, and the total cost £614,551 or £832,105, according to the tables used; and this calculation is made irrespectively of any intermediate retirements on ordinary pension.

34. I must further observe, that, while referring to the inducements now held out to officers to remain in the service, with the view of attaining the colonel's allowance, and calculating the ultimate charge on that account, no allusion seems to be made to the consequent reduced charge for pensions, the fact being that, in the extreme case supposed, of all surviving officers remaining for the colonels' allowances, those allowances would, with the pay proper of the officers, represent very nearly the whole of the costs on account of retired officers, showing an amount of £832,405 in 1892, against £687,957 as it stood (shortly after the formation of the staff corps) in 1863. Meanwhile a considerable saving is taking place. During the last five years, the charge (excluding that for the medical and clerical services) has decreased by £13,100 a-year.* This reduction will go on for some years to come, and may be fairly regarded as a not unimportant set-off to a future temporary increase brought on by the staff corps, before those corps reach their normal condition.

35. It would appear, therefore, not only that the alarm which your Government expressed at the prospect of future expenditure on this account is unfounded, but that the remedy proposed on financial considerations would probably result in an absolute and considerable loss to the State.

36. The above observations relate to a proposal made with a view to the removal of a temporary embarrassment by the adoption of a special measure. I have now to consider your further proposals respecting a modification in the present pension rules, with a view to keeping down in future the number of field officers of the several staff corps.

37. I cannot concur with your Government in the necessity or expediency of thus holding out special inducements to officers of the staff corps to retire before the Government have had the full benefit of their services. It appears scarcely consistent with sound policy to create a body of officers, and to hold out inducements to them to enter and qualify for a special service, and then to frame subsidiary regulations with the avowed object of inducing them to retire at a time when their services are most valuable.

38. There appears to be in the minds of many an entire misapprehension of the object with which a scale of pensions is laid down for any department of the public service; and this or that rate of pension is not unfrequently alluded to as insufficient to meet the requirements of an officer and the support of his family.

39. The fact is, that pensions are intended, not as inducements to officers to retire while still capable of work, but as a recognition of former services, in the event of their retiring to suit their own convenience, or from failure of health, before they have reached a disqualifying age.

40. To tempt men to retire at ages between forty and fifty by the offer of enhanced pensions, framed with a view of rendering them independent of further employment, would be extremely impolitic; men are then usually in the vigour of life, and have reaped something of that experience which is of special value in India; knowledge of the languages, right understanding of native character, softened prejudices, all the fruits of matured intellect and experience, have then been attained. To encourage early retirement is not only to sacrifice wantonly the interests of the services by depriving it of the best men, but tends also to bring up a class of officers whose thoughts are bent from the first upon early retirement, an object incompatible with an earnest and contented public spirit. The pension is intended generally for the worn-out servant, not offered for the purpose of inducing an efficient public servant to retire.

41. The pensions now granted to the officers retiring from Indian service are framed on a scale more liberal than in any other military service in the world; while the remuneration to those officers when actually employed is amply sufficient to enable them in most cases to provide for the present and prospective necessities of their families.

42. The one retiring allowance which is given at the close, or assumed close, of an officer's career, is the colonel's allowance [£1,124. 17s.]; and no question has been raised as to the sufficiency and liberality of that allowance.

43. It may be necessary to notice, with regard to this allowance, and to the remark made by your Government as to the inducement held out to officers to remain in the service by the certainty of attaining thereto, that the present rule, which gives the allowance after twelve years service in the grade of lieutenant-colonel, was introduced as a purely temporary expedient to meet the difficulties which arose from the conflicting claims of the officers of the staff corps prior and subsequent to Lord Cranborne's despatch of August 8, 1866, and applies only to officers who joined the staff corps before or under that despatch; and that, even allowing the aggregate length of service required to qualify for the position under present regulations to be less than the average period within which it was attained under the former system—and, according to the conclusions of the Royal Commission of 1865, it is not much less—the increased inducement to remain must be measured by the difference between those two periods, and cannot be considered independent, under the present system, of those contingencies which, from various causes, induced or compelled officers formerly to retire from the service before the attainment of that position. When the time shall have arrived for carrying out the instructions contained in Sir S. Northcote's Despatch of July 9, 1867, No. 184, and placing a limit to the establishment of colonels with colonels' allowance, all apprehension of an undue charge on this account will of necessity come to an end.

* See General Hannington's Second Report, dated Feb. 15, 1869, forwarded herewith.

It would appear, indeed, from a calculation made by General Hannyn-ton [Report, dated Feb. 15, 1869] that, when the staff corps should have attained to its normal condition, the whole of the retiring allowance, including one hundred colonels' allowances, will probably not exceed £300,000 annually.

44. Your proposals have yet to be considered from another point of view, and that is as affecting the efficiency and contentment of the officers at large.

45. There can be no doubt that the effect of measures of this nature, disturbing the faith of a body of officers in the stability of the ordinary rules of the service, is to excite a general feeling of restlessness and discontent, which even a declaration like that proposed in the 21st paragraph of your despatch would be insufficient to allay for many years.

46. Your Government will remember that a similar declaration was made on the occasion of special annuities being offered to a number of officers in 1861, in the 25th paragraph of Sir C. Wood's Despatch, No. 320, of August 10 of that year, in which the Government of India were instructed to intimate that it was a final arrangement, and that no further proposals connected with schemes for the retirement of Indian officers would be entertained. Notwithstanding this notification, the precedent then established has been made use of to keep alive the expectation of a similar proceeding in the minds of officers of the army in India, an expectation that has received continual stimulus from the public press, has doubtless tended to arrest the course of ordinary retirements, and has now been in some measure justified by the action taken by your Government.

47. The explicit declaration above quoted from Sir C. Wood's despatch may have escaped the attention of your Government; and, at all events, it will not be irrelevant to notice in this place the claim that officers who have since retired might put forward to participate in any scheme such as that now proposed.

48. The determination of her Majesty's Government not to offer any further inducement to retire will, no doubt, create a feeling of disappointment in the minds of all who were looking forward to the promulgation of some such scheme as that now proposed by your Government; but, on the other hand, its adoption, especially after the above-quoted announcement by her Majesty's Government in 1861, could hardly fail to create in the service at large a chronic state of dissatisfaction with the retiring rules, and an expectation that each officer in his turn might reasonably expect to derive benefit from some similarly special measure.

49. Another objection to the introduction of measures of this nature, if not absolutely inevitable, deserves notice, while the extensive changes made in the late Indian service are still recent; and that is, their effect on the minds of that large body of officers who have been transferred from the local to the British army. It is not unreasonable to expect that the contemplation of measures of this nature, from the benefits of which they are excluded by their recent transfer to the British service, would give rise to feelings of irritation and disappointment, greatly to the prejudice of those branches of the service to which these officers belong, and in which they now form a very valuable and important element.

50. It is upon the above considerations that her Majesty's Government have arrived at the conclusion that the adoption of the several proposals contained in your letter under acknowledgment is neither necessary nor expedient.

51. I desire, in conclusion, to communicate to your Excellency the wishes of her Majesty's Government regarding the disposal of the unemployed officers.

These may be divided into two classes:—

1. Those qualified in all respects for employment.
2. Those from various causes not qualified.

52. With regard to the former, I need only observe that admission to the staff corps from the line should be restricted to some extent until this class of unemployed officers has been provided for.

53. With regard to the latter, it must be assumed that their disqualification is due to causes that may be divided into two classes:—

- 1st. Such as would, under the system in force before the amalgamation, have led to their removal from the effective list; such as moral delinquency or intellectual incapacity.
- 2nd. Not having passed the language test, a disqualification for active employment under present, but not under former rules, according to which an officer of this class might have served with his regiment.

54. Among the latter class it is generally understood that there are many officers otherwise well qualified for active employment, and who in many cases possess a colloquial knowledge of the language. Her Majesty's Government consider it advisable, under present circumstances, that all of this class of officers, whose names were borne on any regimental cadre prior to the reorganisation of the army, should be employed on the staff, whether passed or not, in such departments and positions as your Government may consider them individually best fitted for. Such a course of procedure will doubtless involve a departure from an established and very important rule, but can form no embarrassing precedent, inasmuch as all officers, before entering the staff corps hereafter, must qualify in the native language.

55. In the case of the young officers who entered the service since 1858, and under special conditions, your Government will cause all of them who may not have passed to be addressed individually, and informed that, in the event of their not passing the higher standard within a given period, which it will be for your Government to determine, they will be removed from the service, as her Majesty's Government cannot permit an officer voluntarily to disqualify himself for useful employment, and at the same time to enjoy the benefit of pay and promotion in the public service.

56. With regard to those officers whom it may be considered not desirable to continue in active employment, by reason either of questionable conduct or intellectual incapacity, you will cause a special report to be made in each case, with a view to their removal from the effective list, upon such conditions as their several cases may render just and expedient.

57. By the adoption of these several measures it may be confidently expected that the ordinary casualties of the service, and the effect of the new furlough rules upon the number of absentees, will lead to the absorption of the present unemployed officers at no very distant date.

58. I cannot close this despatch without pointing out to your Excellency the evils resulting from the discussion of projects of this nature in India before the views of her Majesty's Government have been sought and ascertained. In the present case it would appear, from the frequent notices in the public papers, to have been well known for many months past that a scheme of this nature was under consideration, and that, while the date of the memorandum by the controller general of military expenditure is 23rd May, showing that the information therein given must have been for some time under preparation, the Secretary of State, in utter ignorance of what was taking place, replied, on the 3rd April, 1868, to a question put to him in the House of Commons, that no such scheme was contemplated.

59. Not only has the fact of its being under consideration been generally known, but in one case, in the Calcutta Review for August, 1868, a paper has been published relating to the subject, bearing the clearest marks of having been written by one who had access to at least a portion of the papers now for the first time submitted to her Majesty's Government. Still later, an abstract of your proposed scheme has been published in several Indian newspapers of a recent date.

60. Her Majesty's Government consider it very desirable that, in the consideration of questions of this nature, affecting the interests of a large body of public servants, publicity should be avoided as much as possible, so long as the intentions of the Government are undetermined; and, moreover, that, in all possible cases, the views of her Majesty's Government should be ascertained before a proposal of this nature is made the subject of formal and departmental investigation.—I have the honour to be, my lord, your lordship's most obedient humble servant,

(Signed) ARGYLL.

India Office, Feb. 4, 1869.

Sir,—In reply to Major general Pears's Letter, No. 7,190, with Despatch, No. 443, dated Nov. 7, 1868 (herewith returned), I have the honour to report as follows.

2. The memorandum proposed by the Controller general of Military Expenditure has a twofold object.

First. To show that the number of officers who, by staff corps rules, will attain to colonel's pay (£456. 5s.) and allowance (£668. 12s. 5d.) is likely to become excessive and costly.

Second. To propose a scheme by which the number of such officers may be reduced and the cost diminished.

3. Guided by a Life Table (Appendix F of Memorandum), the Controller general (paras. 55 to 58), assuming average rates of mortality for the several grades of rank, and applying these rates to the existing officers (Appendix J.), arrives at conclusions, as briefly here shown [1867, 380; 1870, 1202; 1873, 7861; 1876, 13692; 1879, 32529; 1882, 55843; 1885, 77873; 1888, 91957; 1891, 98163], for triennial intervals, indicating that by Jan. 1, 1892, there will be, in the staff corps alone, no less than 982 colonels with colonel's allowance. The cost of these would exceed one million pounds yearly.

4. Such a prospect is alarming, and the Controller general accordingly considers (para. 85) that "it is an object to get rid of as many of the existing field officers as possible, and the question is to find means of inducing the greatest possible number to retire, by the offer of advantages which shall not cause any actual loss to the Government."

5. The Controller general then (para. 89) divides the officers concerned into two classes.

First. Those who will not on any inducement retire.

Second. Those who may be induced to retire.

As to the first class, the Controller general proposes that unemployed officers of 22 years' service may remain on the effective list, and be permitted to reside in Europe (subject to recall) on English pay, the difference between which and Indian pay would be a saving to the State. And, as to the second class, the Controller general proposes that to officers of over 22 years' service a graduated scale of pensions, always equal to, or exceeding those of the next higher grade, shall be granted, together with a bonus ranging between £1,000 and £3,000.

6. The Governor general in Council, accepting, not without some expression of doubt,* the conclusions of the Controller general, proposes a modified scheme (Despatch, para. 39):—

First. "That within a limit of 200, any substantive lieutenant colonels in the Indian staff corps or Indian army, who are entitled to a retiring pension, may be allowed to retire with an addition of £150 per annum to whatever pension they may be entitled to, together with a bonus of £1,000, provided they do so within a given date from the issue of the order sanctioning the measure."

Second. That in future "the period entitling to the lieutenant colonel's pension of £365 per annum may be 25, instead of 28 years as heretofore, including three years' furlough; and the period entitling to the colonel's pension 30, instead of 32 years, including four years' furlough. Further, that the amount of the colonel's pension may be increased from £156.5s. to £500 per annum."

7. Before examining the financial bearings of these proposals, it is necessary to remark that both schemes are based on the one ground of an excessive number of colonels to be promoted in future years from among the officers now existing. How far the estimate of the Controller-general on this important point may be held as conclusive has now to be considered.

8. Two independent investigations as to the mortality of military officers in India have been made.

First. By the late Mr. Griffith Davies, on data obtained from a list published by Messrs. Dodwell and Miles, of the India House. This embraced all lives that could be traced from the earliest records of the Indian army, and the deduced rate of the mortality was, as compared with English tables, very high. The Controller general has adopted this table. It is marked F in the Appendix to his report.

Second. By Mr. F. G. P. Neison, who traced out a large number of lives from the India House records, distinguishing those who had entered the service in the past century from those who entered since the year 1800. He was thus led to conclude that, owing to a variety of causes, the mortality of officers in India is now much less than it was in former years. There seems to be no doubt on this point, and Mr. Samuel Brown, actuary of the Guardian Assurance Office, in his report (1868) on the Bombay Medical Retiring Fund, states that all recent observations confirm this improvement of life in every branch of the Indian service.

9. Mr. Neison, in his report (1849) on the Bengal Military Fund, gave two tables of data, the first rejecting and the second including certain lives that could not be perfectly traced. The life table deduced from the first of these appears to me by far the more trustworthy; it is not so favourable to life as that deduced by Mr. Neison from the second (table XI. of his report); but for this reason it was preferred by the late Mr. G. Davies, and under his sanction it was used by me in preparing tables for the Bengal Military Orphan Society. The results obtained from it may be regarded as not extreme in either direction. A copy of this table is hereto appended (table I.), and, as will presently (para. 17) appear, I have made a double set of calculations as to the future of the Staff Corps, showing, first, the conclusions afforded by the table Appendix F., professedly used by the Controller general; and, second, showing what I regard as the more probable and safer conclusions drawn from Table I.

10. A life table being given, the progress of any groups of lives subject to the like mortality may be traced approximately. For example, if the life table shows that of 4,991 persons existing in the 41th year of age there will survive in the 57th year of age 2,839 persons, then, supposing 136 persons in the former status, the survivors of these in the 57th year of age will be 77, as appears by proportion, thus—

This example illustrates the fact that, of 136 officers of the age stated, who were existing in the staff corps on the 1st January, 1868, there may, on the 1st January, 1881, be about 77 survivors, who will then have attained the rank of colonel, with colonel's allowance, on the supposition that no intermediate retirements take place.

11. I do not wish to burden this report with arithmetical details that may more conveniently be shown in an appendix, but this much is needful, to explain how it is that the Controller general has obtained results that are not borne out by Table F., on which they should depend. On reference to the Controller general's Appendix J., it will be seen that the whole number of 136 officers now living is brought up for promotion in 1880, and is, with a reduction of 5 per cent. only, carried into the year 1881; that is to say, 129 officers instead of 77 officers are supposed to be promoted, no account being taken of the deaths occurring in the twelve preceding years. This material error runs through the whole of Appendix J., and vitiates the conclusions therein exhibited.

12. To place this miscalculation briefly in view, the tablet below† gives, for triennial intervals from 1873, the number of staff corps colonels, as deduced by the Controller general in Appendix J., and as obtained with the same data from Appendix F. From the nature of the process used by the Controller general, the error is from year to year cumulative, and the financial effect might well be termed, in the words of H.E. the Commander in Chief, "almost appalling."

13. I now proceed to show the probable financial results of the remedial measures proposed. The calculations are given at length in the Appendix, and a mere statement in the form of an account will be most convenient in this place. It may be premised that, in estimating from the Carlisle Table for Lives in Europe, the deferred values of the colonel's allowance, I have used Mr. Neison's Indian Life Table, No. I., because this is not only the more applicable to the present time, but also gives higher values to the contingent claims of the officers than Table F. Also (as in para. 10) intermediate retirements are excluded; the values are therefore the greatest possible, and the apparent loss is the least, that can be assigned.

I. Valuation of the Controller general's Proposal for 200 Officers.

Present value of deferred colonel's allowance	£.	Present value of the proposed pension	£.
Balance loss to Government ...	424,779	Bonus, variable ...	245,802
	£1,350,343		£1,350,343

II. Valuation of the Proposal of the Governor general in Council for 200 Officers.

Present value of deferred colonel's allowance	£.	Present value of the pensions (ordinary) of substantive rank ...	£.
925,564		813,995
Balance loss to Government ...	467,108	Present value of extra pensions of £150 ...	378,677
		Bonus of £1,000 ...	200,000
	£1,392,672		£1,392,672

14. From these statements it appears that, as to cost, the two proposals are much alike. For sake of comparison, I have limited the scheme of the Controller general to 200 officers, but his proposal is unlimited as to numbers, and, if thus adopted, might lead to a much larger loss than is shown above. In either case, the apparent loss is so considerable, that, making due allowance for any uncertainty in the valuation of contingent risks, the adoption of either measure is not advisable. There is a certainty of immediate and heavy outlay, without prospect of compensation. But this leads to another view.

15. The number of unemployed officers above the rank of captain, in the staff corps and local service, is, according to the latest returns, 140 [Madras local officers not included. No returns. The Budget estimate, 1868-69, shows 190]. If these be really superfluous, and if they especially should be induced to retire, the saving of the difference between Indian pay and the pension of rank would be a set off or counterbalance to the loss shown in para. 13. But it is not likely that the unemployed officers would be foremost to retire, on the contrary, scanty means may compel many of them to cling to the service on full pay. It would be vain to frame an estimate of possible saving from this source, and, on the other hand, setting aside any inconvenience that might result from the retirement of officers who are in staff employ, there could be no saving in the case of those who have consolidated allowances. On the whole, it seems that this branch of the service is more administrative than financial, and the measures suggested by the Governor general in Council (para. 40 of despatch) do not fall within the scope of my remarks.

16. The second clause of the scheme proposed by the Governor general in Council requires, in this place, no more than a passing notice. That earlier retirements, with increased pensions, would tend to swell the non-effective list, demands no formal proof, and the consideration of this proposal, on other grounds, is also beyond my present duty.

17. I do not mean to underrate the financial pressure that is approaching, though I have, I trust, conclusively shown that it is not nearly so great as the Controller general, and the Governor general in Council apprehend; yet, neither will it be so small as would appear from the Table, Appendix F. For this reason, I have made, as far as needful, a double set of calculations as to the number of officers now existing in the staff corps, who will pass through the several grades of rank, and finally obtain the colonel's allowance. An abstract as to the colonels is given for triennial intervals from Jan. 1, 1874, below,* and it shows a very considerable difference between the old and new tables. Both, however, agree in showing that the greatest number will be reached in the year 1896. From that year a rapid diminution will begin, and continue until the corps falls into a normal state.

18. The foregoing paragraph, and all conclusions hitherto set forth, are on the assumption that no ordinary retirements (para. 10) occur. This assumption is necessary, because data as to such retirements are wanting. But it is certain that ordinary retirements will occur, and it is not unlikely that the results from Appendix F. may eventually be as near the facts as those from the higher table. So long as officers expect that something to them beneficial shall be done, so long will they wait, even though prepared to retire.

19. The conclusion I have formed is, that, whatever be the ultimate cost of the Staff Corps, the measures now proposed, or any similar measure, would not mitigate that cost.

20. The inquiry suggested in para. 3 of General Pears's letter under reply will occupy some time, and I have therefore thought it right to send up this part of the report without delay.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient servant,

* "I must affirm that I consider it is contrary to all experience to suppose that out of the existing body of 3,359 officers, 1,151 will some years hence be all surviving, after, as respects 982 of the staff corps, a minimum of 38 years' service. To me it seems that this is inconceivable."—Hon. Col. Norman, c.n., Minute, page 8.

THE CRYSTAL PALACE.

LAST Saturday at the Crystal Palace was devoted to the memory of Rossini. The scene in the great transept reminded one of a Handel festival; there were three thousand performers in all, and the whole space across the transept was filled with occupants of reserved seats. The programme was good so far as it went; but why should Sir M. Costa's commonplace music be foisted into a performance in honour of Rossini, especially when so many fine samples of the master's genius remained unrepresented? Three of his best overtures were certainly given with a power and delicacy appreciable some distance off. But instead of the march from "Naaman," we might surely have been better entertained with a little more of Rossini's best secular music; something for instance in the style of the spirited solo and chorus from the "Siege of Corinth," which to our thinking does the master more justice than the bulk of his sacred music. The Stabat Mater, fine as it is in parts, seems to lack that depth of feeling which makes Handel, Mozart, and Mendelssohn pre-eminent in the religious line. In spite of the grand effect of the "Prayer," as performed on Saturday, there can be little doubt that sacred music was not Rossini's forte. Imagine what Mozart or Handel could have made of the mournful passages in the Stabat Mater! Rossini's rendering fails utterly to reflect the deep anguish of the Mother standing beside the Cross. Most of the choruses were fairly given, if seldom equal in execution to what we have heard on a Handel day. Mr. Santley and Madame Dolby sang their parts to perfection, with unvarying ease and precision. But Madame Titiens' absence through illness was poorly compensated by the presence of Madame Rudersdorff, who screeches painfully when force is required.

TIGHT TUNICS.

THE influence of dress upon the soldier's health is one of those questions which come up from time to time for a discussion that has hitherto led to no practical result. Many years ago it was frequently asserted that the tightness of the old coat and jacket was the sure source of much disease and many deaths in the army. At a later period we heard a good deal of "the soldier's spot," a peculiar appearance found about the hearts or lungs of soldiers, whose death had been hastened by the crossbelts then worn. And now it appears that a similar indictment has been lodged against the present tunic, which at first sight seems so great an improvement on the style of uniform it replaced. Indeed, it is now asserted that the old stiff collar of the jackets worn some fifteen years ago, however uncomfortable in other respects, had the merit of fitting loosely round the neck, whereas the new tunic, fastened by one hook only instead of three, clasps the lower part of the neck so tightly as to cause not only present discomfort, but to lay the seeds of future illness. According to Mr. Myers, Assistant-surgeon of the Coldstream Guards, the pressure thus caused on the great vessels of the neck tends to obstruct the flow of blood through them; and their consequent over-distension develops in due time, under certain conditions, some disease of the circulatory system, ending not seldom in aneurism of the aorta—in other words, rupture of the great vessels of the heart.

If this be true, the fact is well worth considering by those who are deputed to look after the soldier's well-being. Military men, as a rule, are like women in their devoted adherence to old traditions in favour of tight fitting garments for the upper part of the body, and many a well-drilled soldier would rather die than breathe freely in a tunic whose smooth outline was anywhere ruffled by an unmilitary crease. But many of them must surely have the sense to know that soldiers are an expensive necessity, and that the main end of their existence is not show, but service. Mr. Myers tells us of one wise colonel of a regiment then in India, who saw so clearly the weak point of the present tunic, that he had the collars for his men enlarged at his own expense, and made to fasten with three hooks. This arrangement lasted for eight years, to the great satisfaction of the men themselves, and one proof of the advantage reaped from it is found by Mr. Myers in the fact that, throughout that period, "no instance of invaliding or death from aneurism" occurred out of an annual average strength of eight hundred and thirty-nine men. This certainly, so far as it goes, should tell in favour of loose collars. If it is absolutely necessary to have a tunic buttoned up to the throat, a loose high collar must any how be better than a low one which clutches the neck at a vital point. But why must the tunic be buttoned up to the throat on all occasions or even on most? Does any human being except a soldier ever take his exercise in such fashion? In cold weather a man may like to feel the temporary comfort of a buttoned-up coat, but as soon as he warms to his work, his natural impulse is to remove all possible hindrances to the free expansion of his chest and neck. And there is no denying that military parades are with few exceptions very warm work, even in an English winter.

In India some little regard is usually paid, we believe, to the exigencies of climate. There at any rate soldiers are or were allowed the amazing privilege of parading in hot weather with collars unbuttoned. Yet even in India much, we imagine, depends on the discretion of individual officers. We should like to know how many cases of illness in one year might be traced to the untoward clinging of newly imported colonels to the habits and clothing of a very different clime. How many soldiers the fewer would have fallen fainting out of the ranks or gone into hospital with small chance of coming out again, had their commanding officers been blessed with a reasonable share of common sense? The victims of pipe-clay have not, we fear, appreciably decreased since the day when a soldier broke his neck down a hatchway, because Lord Cardigan insisted that his men should wear spurs on board ship. The race of martinets is longlived, and their stupidity remains proof to all appeals from vulgar reason. At Goojerat the men who served the heavy guns might be seen ramming away in their shirt-sleeves, but then they were commanded by officers who cared more for work than outward show. Imagine a martinet going even the length of tolerating unbuttoned tunics! We, for our part, have no desire to stand out for shirt-sleeves or even jerseys on peaceful parades; but if the heads of the army would issue a positive order against tightfitting tunics and choking collars, the zeal of some of their subordinates might perhaps be turned into a direction less hurtful to human life.

Statistics and experiments seem to coincide in proof of some connection between overtight tunics and heart-diseases. The deaths per thousand from aneurism in the army for three consecentive years were about four times as numerous as the deaths in the navy. In the latter the percentage of deaths was only a trifle higher than it is in civil life. In 1866 more soldiers died of heart-disease than of consumption, which, according to medical experience in civil life, ought to have been four times as fatal as the other. If aneurism alone be taken into account, we find that it kills eleven soldiers for one civilian. These calculations are somewhat confused by the different climatic conditions of the several countries in which our troops serve. But the broad result seems to be that many more soldiers die of circulatory diseases than either sailors or civilians. Even in the United Kingdom the proportion per thousand is as 1·20 to ·10, a difference not to be explained by any reference to the hardships or excesses of military life. For the high percentage at Madras a reason has been found in the excessive use of tobacco, while the mortality at the Cape has been sometimes charged against too much beer, brandy, or tobacco, and, by way of a change, to hard work in the field and the tiring effect of the knapsack. To this however it may well be answered that soldiers who smoke little die as often as soldiers who smoke much, that the removal of the knapsack from human shoulders at the Cape—in India the men never had to carry it—has not lessened the mortality from heart-disease, and that troops quartered in Africa since the last war have been no freer from the complaint than their predecessors. It is shown indeed by the Indian returns that the highest ratio of deaths from disease of the larger blood-vessels occurred on the line of march. The fact is so, but how about the explanation? Grant that these men died of over-exertion with or without the aid of rum and tobacco, where shall we look for the predisposing cause? May it not be too often found in tunics that throttle the neck and prevent the free expansion of the chest?

THE INDIAN ARMY AND THE INDIA OFFICE.

THE purport of the answer given by the Indian Minister to the Indian Government's proposals for hastening the retirement of unemployed field officers in the Indian Army now lies before us in the shape of a despatch, dated from the India Office on the 11th of March. It confirms the statement lately made by Mr. Grant Duff in the House of Commons touching the rejection of the scheme sent home from Calcutta for the final sanction of the India Office. Why it should not have been published a few weeks earlier is a problem which we despair of solving. When once a despatch of so much importance has been confided to the Post Office, there could surely be no harm in divulging the contents of it to the public of this country. Much harm, on the contrary, is often done by a delay which tends to multiply misleading rumours and encourage groundless hopes. At last however the murder is out in respect to a question which has long troubled the peace of a good many officers in the Indian army. If anything be preferable to continued suspense, they may now gather up such crumbs of comfort as the change from doubt to an unpleasant certainty can supply.

The despatch in question certainly makes out a strong case against the conclusions wrought out at Calcutta. Its chief strength however rests on premises always open to dispute. If General Hannington's estimates, which are appended to the despatch, be anything like correct, we may readily admit the justice of most of the arguments thence evolved or thereby supported. But what assurance have we, beyond that officer's special experience in such matters, for the trustworthiness of calculations so widely different from those of the able financier consulted by the Indian Government? * According to the one the plethora of field-officers in the staff corps will never be great enough to compensate for the cost of amending in their favour the present scale and conditions of retiring pensions. According to the other the accumulation of field-officers in the next few years will be so great that measures, however costly, should at once be taken to forestall the ruinous expense their increasing numbers will otherwise entail on the Indian Treasury. The latter reckons that on the 1st of January, 1892, there will, under present conditions, be at least 982 staff-colonels drawing colonel's allowances at a cost of a million a-year. The former, on the contrary, maintains that no more than 487 colonels will, under any circumstances, be drawing colonel's allowances on that date. Alarmed by the figures of the Controller-General, the Indian Government proposed—

1st. That Lieutenant-Colonels of the Indian army, to the number of 200, should be free to retire before a certain date on an additional pension of £150 a-year and a bonus of £1,000.

2nd. That twenty-five years' service should henceforth entitle an officer to a lieutenant-colonel's pension, while the term of service for a colonel's pension, increased to £500, should be fixed at thirty years.

3rd. That field officers in future should be exempted from general or station duty.

4th. That officers unemployed for three years together should be allowed to live either at home or in India on their English pay, with the prospect of going on the retired list after five years in all of unemployment.

5th. That every officer deemed unfit for civil or military duty should be removed from the effective list.

A "careful consideration" of these proposals and the grounds assigned for them has led the Secretary of State to reject them one and all, for the following reasons:—The plethora of field officers is a temporary evil, consequent on the formation of the Staff Corps and the transfer thereto of "nearly the whole of the remaining officers of the Indian army." It is matter for regret, but is none the less inevitable, that a certain number of officers should remain in a certain sense unemployed, pending their absorption into the Staff Corps. All these however are doing duty "either in garrisons or with regiments," while many of the older officers are in fact employed "in positions of great responsibility, requiring more than usual experience, energy, and capacity." It must be remembered also that no true analogy exists between the officering of the Staff Corps and of a British regiment, that the nominal rank of a Staff Corps officer does not determine his fitness for duties of a particular kind, and that the mere fact of his promotion to a higher grade does not of necessity involve his removal to a new or a higher post. The higher rank comes with length of service, but promotion in the Staff Corps has been so rapid, as compared with the previous system, that "many officers who would have been subalterns under the old rules are now substantive captains," and ought not therefore to be exempt from discharging subalterns' duties. Such at least is the apparent meaning of an obscurely-worded paragraph in the despatch.

Nor is there any ground for believing that the proportion of subaltern officers is either too small now, or will grow less in the course of time. Of the 1,069 now serving in the three Presidencies some are actually employed "in positions not unsuited to officers of a higher grade, while others are unemployed from not having passed." Of 320 officers of all ranks now unemployed 194 have failed to pass in the native languages, six have been removed for incapacity, and nineteen have resigned at their own request, while of the remainder only twenty-five are left unemployed for no apparent reason. In dealing with the cases of these 320, the Indian Minister insists, in the first place, that the rule forbidding an officer to decline or resign an appointment for the sake of his own convenience shall, in all cases, be rigidly enforced. In the next he recommends that all officers of the old Indian service "should be employed on the staff, whether passed or not, in such departments and positions" as may seem best suited to each; the existing rules being set aside for them and them only. Admission to the staff corps from the line should also "be restricted to some extent" until the older class of officers shall have been provided for according to their several deserts. As for the few who may be wholly disqualified for active service either on moral or intellectual grounds, it will remain for the Government after due enquiry to strike their names off the effective list. Against those younger officers who have not yet passed the final examinations, the rules of the service must be upheld by their removal, if after due notice given they still fail to pass.

Again, with regard to the scheme for getting rid of 200 field-officers at one stroke, the Secretary of State brings General Hannington forward to show that by such a measure the Indian Exchequer would suffer an absolute loss of nearly half a million sterling, without securing the end especially desired. Would not many of the retiring officers belong to a class whose services could ill be spared, and what certainty is there that many of the unemployed officers would take the opportunity to retire at once instead of holding on for the colonel's allowance? All exceptional schemes of this sort breed a restless and discontented feeling among the officers, "disturbing their faith in the ordinary rules of the Service," and arresting the course of ordinary retirements through the hopes they keep alive of something better to be got by waiting. If the Staff and the Locals are to be thus favoured, will not their old comrades now in the Line have cause to murmur at their own inferior luck?

Such is the pith of the despatch in question. It shows at any rate that the matter in dispute is less simple than it looks as handled by the Indian press. With very much of the reasoning we are bound to agree under any circumstances, but its force would be indefinitely strengthened if we could put sufficient faith in the correctness of General Hannington's data. There lies the rub. Even he allows that in 1892 not fewer than 487 Staff Corps officers will be drawing colonel's allowance, while another calculation raises the total to 629. Nor is it denied that for many years to come the excess of field officers caused by the rules of 1861 and 1866 will add largely to the yearly cost of the Indian army. But then again we must remember that pretty much the same outlay would have been incurred under the old system. For so many officers so many thousands of pounds. Pending the reduction of the old numbers within the limits deemed sufficient for the future, the present rate of outlay will for some years to come be liable to grow greater instead of less. The only question seems to be, whether the payment of a larger sum now, in order to get rid of the surplus seniors, would not hasten by many years the moment when the working expenses of the new system would touch their proper level. The despatch moreover makes no sort of reference to the complaints so rife in India of the dearth of young officers in the native regiments.

THE NEED OF AN INDIAN NAVY.

The Bombay Gazette maintains that British India is a Power which, though it is mainly territorial, has very considerable maritime interests. Let the political centre be where it may, among the odours of Calcutta or upon the terraces of Simla, the naval centre is Bombay. This presidency is, to all intents and purposes, a maritime province, and its relations with various sea-board States and districts are direct and important. Nature indicated and man made it the fitting resort of navies; the line of naval posts from Suez are properly dependent on Bombay, and no other point is so well calculated to serve as the head-quarters of an Eastern naval Power. There are unequalled facilities in the harbour for adequate naval establishments of all kinds, and a little engineering, aided by the Moncrieff gun, would render them unassailable. From this centre service could be done in the Red Sea as well as the Persian Gulf, the only waters mentioned by Mr. Childers—on the coast of Ceylon as well as on the west coast of Africa. Moreover, much good would result from cruises on our own shores. Now, it may be said, that the ships of the Royal Navy can do the work as well as the ships of an Indian Navy; but out here, whatever may be felt in Whitehall, we make bold to contend that all feel the assertion to be erroneous. Not for one moment would we say a word in disparagement of the Royal Navy, which, wherever it may be posted, does its duty. But how can officers, unaccustomed to the people, and necessarily ignorant of native tongues, work so effectively as men trained up in a local service. Moreover, it seems to us highly desirable that there should be perfect accord between the floating force and the directing head, and that the Supreme Government and its subordinate agents should have command by sea as well as by land. Year by year the situation to the westward and northward will grow more critical, demand more vigilance, more sagacity; and an effective Indian Marine would be able to help the rulers of the State very materially in preserving and promoting the interests of the Empire. The opening of the Suez Canal will augment the number of vessels voyaging through the Red Sea, and the growing intensity of the Asiatic phase of the Eastern question will triple to us the importance of holding undisputed sway in the Persian Gulf. How can all these grave affairs be duly and effectively attended to unless we have a trained naval force working in thorough harmony with the Government and acting in conformity with its principles wherever we come in contact with other States, however small? At this very moment the inconvenience of dependence on the Admiralty is demonstrated by the existence of the so-called Bombay Marine, which, a mere makeshift, silently testifies to the need for a genuine navy. But we are not without hopes that ere long the Admiralty at home will take a "view" of the question that does not "concur" with the view of the late and present Government. Facts will soon present the view in a different aspect. The monitors or turret ships coming out for harbour defence, the exigencies arising out of increased traffic in the Red Sea, the presence of foreign men-of-war in Eastern waters, certain to follow the success of M. de Lesseps—if he succeed—and the growth of the now world-wide Eastern Question, must force the Home Government to the conclusion that Imperial interests demand the establishment of a powerful Indian Navy, to be supplemented of course, in case of need, by the Royal Navy. When we have the real institution we shall pay for it with pleasure out of Indian revenues; not, as we do now, grudgingly contribute £70,000 for a service which, however gallant and effective, is neither sufficient for the work, nor adapted to fulfil all its multiform requirements.

THE NATIVE ARMY.

The Madras Athenæum declares that, although it is an acknowledged requisite of the new organisation that the native officers should be the very best procurable, the necessary measures are not taken to secure them. The old system whereby any respectable old imbecile was considered to have a right to promotion in virtue of having lived to get to the top of the list, is still practically too much in force, and central authority still interferes too much with local selection, concerning the merits of which it must be absolutely ignorant. According to the theory of the new organisation, everything depends on the personnel, the few good, select and devoted officers being far more efficient than the many bad, refuse and discontented officers—we speak of the theory—and the native officers selected by merit far more efficient than those promoted by seniority. The said theory may be, and we believe is, as a theory, a very excellent one. Nobody can say it has failed, simply because it has never been tried. That which has been tried, we may call the "Hybrid." It has worked much better than most people expected, owing to the zeal and industry of the officers, who, as a general rule have striven to do their work in a conscientious way; and when that is done no system can be an entire failure. But the system which by theory ought to have been the one to be tried, which we may call the "personal" system, has not been tried as yet. We have talked about it, and that has been all. As for the European officers, the theory says they shall be appointed by selection; that they shall be sufficiently well paid to make them content to stay with their Regiments without being perpetually distracted by looking out for staff and civil employ as the officers were under the old regime. That they should, in fact, take up their military duties heartily and as a finality, and identify themselves with their regiments as zealous officers should, would, or ought to do, and that they should be well supported in their efforts to make the native army a really respectable force; a very plain and simple theory, pick out the best men, pay them well enough to satisfy their reasonable ambition, give them ample powers, and hold them responsible for the result—a theory, too, which ought to work well, a very promising and probable looking theory. But has it ever been tried? Have officers been appointed by selection? Have they had adequate powers given? Have they been induced to identify themselves with other duties? Or have not rather the old theories of vested rights, seniorities, and such like, been allowed too much to interfere? We believe that claims have actually been advanced to command regiments irrespective of fitness but as a matter of right, on the plea sometimes of army rank, sometimes of local or cadre rank; claims which, however, the Government of India has very comprehensively "sat upon" in a recent order. As to the second condition, are not the regimental staff, who have all the most important work to attend to, notoriously underpaid and notoriously always on the look out for some staff or civil employ that would pay them better? Are not the powers of regimental officers so restricted that they are forbidden to go the length even of their strictly legal tether? And is not all this the result of the conflict between the old opinions and the new rules, that men in authority, educated under the ancient system, cannot bring their minds to admit the idea of a regimental officer being entrusted with any real independent authority, or being anything but a mere machine? Such an idea would be contrary to all precedent.

LORD MAYO AND THE AMEER OF KABUL.

The conversation between the Governor General and the Ameer did not consist of empty compliments alone. The following account of its substance may be relied on as correct. The fluency and grace with which Captain Grey acted as interpreter were marked by all who, like ourselves, were near.

The Governor-general: In the name of her Majesty the Queen of England and Sovereign of India I heartily welcome your Highness.—The Ameer: I am overpowered by this reception, and will love the British Government all my life.

G.: I trust that your Highness received proper attentions from all her Majesty's officers, and that the journey was not uncomfortable.—A.: I have been astonished at the kindness which I have received.

G.: What does your Highness think of the railway? It has just conveyed me from Calcutta in forty-four hours.—A.: The railway and all that I have seen is wonderful, but the most wonderful thing is your army.

G.: So renowned a soldier as yourself will appreciate the army. His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief will give you every opportunity for further inspecting the troops. I have asked several renowned soldiers to meet you. What do you think of the Highlanders?—A.: The dress of the "Scotch" is beautiful and, indeed, terrific; but is it decent?

G.: The people from whom these soldiers are recruited are divided into clans similar to those in Afghanistan, and each clan is distinguished by the colours of its tartan.—A.: In my country the same division exists, but the clans are known by the cut, not the colour, of the cloth.

G.: Your Highness is fond of armies?—A.: I should think so; I was born a soldier, and have done nothing but fight for forty-five years.

G.: Is your Highness fond of hunting?—A.: I have been too busy as a soldier. I leave hunting to others; but my eldest son, Yakoub Khan, is a good sportsman.

G.: You are interested in guns; you have seen the Snider, the Enfield, and the Armstrong guns?—A.: Yes, and we could make them in our country quite as well as you, but the cartridges are the difficulty; we could not make them. You do wrong to depend on England for your supply. How are they made?

If Captain Grey hesitated for a moment in his Persian it was on this occasion, when it seemed difficult to find in that language words to express certain of the processes, but the explanation was given to the Ameer's satisfaction.

G.: Your Highness is fond of horses; I have procured some for your acceptance; they are the best I can obtain, but they do not satisfy me.—A.: That is not wonderful; I never saw a perfect horse; a Turkoman costs from Rs. 4,000 to Rs. 10,000.

G.: We breed good horses occasionally; I have paid attention to the subject.—The Ameer replied as if he doubted the possibility of breeding good horses at all, or out of Arabia; and asked why Indian officers do not use Arabs as they used to do. The difficulties placed in the way of exportation were explained.

G.: I hope your boy has been amused; he is a pretty fellow; (translated by Captain Grey: "He has eyes out of which the man shines").—A.: He is the true stamp of a man (sikka murdana); he comes of a family of men.

On this the presents of fifty-one trays, valued at upwards of half a lakh of rupees, were brought in, and the Earl of Mayo, taking a sword, with jewelled scabbard, presented it to the Ameer with his own hands, remarking:—"May you be victorious over your enemies and with this defend your just rights!" The Ameer replied that he would use it also against the enemies of the Queen of England. With true Oriental politeness, so different from the eager greed on a similar occasion of Runjeet Singh, the Ameer affected indifference to all the presents except the sword, which he kept in his hand. The Lieutenant Governor attempted to put a string of gold and pearls round the boy's neck, but the Sardars were unable to remove the cap which he wore. On this the Ameer was conducted to his carriage by the Governor General, the Sutlej Chiefs followed, and the durbar broke up, after sitting upwards of an hour.—Friend of India.

STATION TALK.

UMBALLA, March 31.—His Highness attended the Umballa Races yesterday and the day before, and, in all probability, will be on the course again this evening, to-morrow, and the day after; for, he takes great interest in our turf displays; and the display of yesterday was just the kind of sight he ought to be treated to. There were three very good steeple chases, over a rather stiff course; one of the three was a first-rate race, and another as well ridden as the most knowing "cross country" man need desire to witness. The Ameer had a first-rate view of the finish, his carriage being on the off side of the course, and in front of the Grand Stand; while, on his other hand (such is the arrangement of the course), he had the great double-ditch, the second leap of all three races. He and Colonel Chamberlain occupied the coachman's seat of the barouche they had come in; and the Ameer, using a binocular, never once took his eyes off the horses, from the moment of their starting until the finish. It was well that his carriage had been thus placed, for neither he nor any of his Afghan suite could ever before have seen such good jumping and crack-riding as the taking of that double-ditch in each of yesterday's races exhibited to them. Gamecock, a b. w. g., ridden by Mr. Papillon in the Selling Steeple Chase, and again in the "Grand," took the double-ditch both times as well as if he were a countryman of Lord Mayo's, and to double-ditches, stone walls and bokreens born. The bank was of made-earth, and not more than three and a-half feet in height, but with the broad ditch in front and rear, the stride was fully four-and-twenty feet. Gamecock "barked" it, that is, hit it with his hind feet, and on each occasion that he took the leap the good horse's four feet were, for a moment, all together like those of a goat on the apex of a showman's pyramid. The Ameer was both pleased and astonished; his followers were delighted. They had never seen anything of the kind before; for leaps of height or of long stride are what the horses of native Asia never have occasion to take. Wonderment and admiration were visible in every Afghan countenance present, and for some minutes, after the "Grand," several Heratee-garbed individuals were to be seen inspecting the double ditch, and estimating its height and width. The Ameer remained to the last, smoking throughout the whole time,—not the hooka (which he despises) or Persian chibouque, but good Manila cheroots, of which he and his followers seem to be very fond, and which are provided for them. He was to receive five horses as part of the present of the Government of India. Only four really good Arabs, to his taste, were, however, procurable, and a "look-out" is kept for a fifth horse of the kind he desiderates. The selection is with the Ameer himself; and, accordingly, yesterday, on the course, Colonel Chamberlain managed to inveigle a number of officers and others having valuable Arabs to sell, "if a good price were given," to side their horses up to the Ameer's carriage. If his Highness thus inspected one horse, he must have inspected at least thirty during the intervals between the races. He rejected all he saw; doing, however, verbal complimentary justice to their merits. He will have no horse that his prime confidential friend and adviser, his Shahgasee or chamberlain, does not approve of. This individual is a character in his way, and a very jolly one, too. He is of middle height, over fifty, and rather stout—indeed, if the truth is to be told, the Shahgasee, though not very "corpulent," is quite broad enough to be slit down into two very respectable stage Falstaffs! From tip of one shoulder to tip of the other seemed, to your correspondent, to be about five feet; and the girth round the waist, which, by the way, slightly protuberates, would positively appal a civilised tailor. Yet the old fellow—his hair is tinged with grey—is as lively as a young elephant, and far more frolicsome, and his rotund features so beam with jollity and humour that one is involuntarily tempted to guffaw—and heartily, too—when one meets him. To see this burly chamberlain examining the points of a horse submitted for the Ameer's inspection is a fine piece of natural comedy. The examination is very close and "knowing," and blemishes are soon detected, and, with quite a humorous grin, nodded at, not spoken of; and the procedure winds up by the Shahgasee placing himself in rear of the horse, and passing his right hand softly and smoothly down the animal's tail. This would be queer enough, but it does not exhaust the formalities. Stretching his right hand forward to the full length of his arm, the Shahgasee grasps the end of the horse's tail, and gradually raises both arm and tail until they extend, in one straight line, horizontally, and, as it were, telescopically, from his own half-closed eye to the horse's crupper! Standing thus for a second or two he drops the tail, and, turning to the owner of the horse, says, with genuine Asiatic humour, "Khoob, khoob atcha gora!" "A very, very good horse"—but he does not recommend his master to purchase the animal. It was this colossal impersonation of fun and intensely humorous wide-awakeness, who, in the mess-house of the 93rd Highlanders at Jullundur, after witnessing the sword dances of the Scots, said he would try a jig himself, and actually did attempt one, raising shouts of irrepressible laughter. He is a Barukzye, and liked and loved by Shere Ali as an Englishman would like and love a jolly Falstaffian old uncle or uncle-german. Beneath his gushing fun is a rich vein of sterling shrewdness, and it is probable that his advice has, on many important occasions, done Shere Ali critically good service. He is evidently the most influential man of the present Court of Afghanistan. He is Chamberlain, and in the East that signifies the power of denial of access to the Sovereign. In short, without the Shahgasee's permission, no subject may approach the Ameer. That permission denied or withheld, the applicant for justice or mercy can but throw himself before the Ameer's horse as he rides out—to obtain his end or meet his death.

April 3.—The durbar has arrived at its last act. The Ameer leaves on the 5th on his return journey, arriving at Jullundur on the evening of the same day, and at Umritsur on the following morning. The Viceroy leaves Umballa by 9 A.M. ordinary train on the 5th for Saharanpore. He will visit the gardens and stud in the evening! Whilst at Saharanpore he will be the guest of Mr. Webster. During his journeys Lord Mayo will be accompanied by his military and private secretaries, and by Capt. Lockwood, A.D.C. At Hurdwar he will be received by the Maharajah of Kupperthulla. Lady Mayo leaves for Simla on the evening of the 5th, Lady Mansfield leaving for the same destination the previous evening. Sir William Mansfield leaves by 9 A.M. train on Tuesday morning for Meerut. From thence he proceeds via Moradabad to the new sanitarium of Raneekhet. He will then return to Meerut, and from thence proceed to Chukrata. From Chukrata it is uncertain whether he will go by the hill road to Simla or come back to Umballa, and go from thence by the ordinary road. The Lieut. Governor of the Punjab, who, by the way, had a private interview with the Ameer at the latter's residence yesterday, proceeds to Lahore on the 5th. The camp has begun to break up. The official order was only received by the general late on the evening of the 1st, and already four regiments have marched. These regiments, which all started this morning, are 4th hussars for Meerut, 41st Regiment for Subathoo, 15th N.I. for Ferozepore, and 2nd Goorkhas for Dehra. On the 4th the 1st battalion of the Buffs march for Dugshai, and A A, R.H.A., march for Meerut. On the 5th the 55th march for Chukrata via Belaspore. On the 5th and 6th the 78th Highlanders go by railway to Saharanpore, en route to Roorkee and to Delhi. On the 6th the 14th Bengal Cavalry march for Meerut, and A 22, R.A., march for Jutogh. On the 7th and 8th the 40th N.I. go by railway to Agra, and complete the list of corps assembled here for the durbar. Lord Napier and Sir William Muir have already left, and within the next two days I fancy all the visitors and high officials will have departed. Councils have been held daily during the week, and the Foreign-office and the politicals have been as busy as bees. To-day the Viceroy had a private and farewell interview with the Ameer at the latter's house, and by this time the negotiations between the Courts of Calcutta and Cabul have been brought to a close. As yet, however, but little is known, or perhaps I should be more correct were I to say conjectured. The fact is, the Ameer is asking for more than he will take, and is endeavouring to commit us to a more decided policy than the Viceroy is disposed, or—pending reference to the Secretary of State for India—is empowered to adopt. The Ameer wants us to guarantee the integrity of his dominion up to the ancient limits of the Dooranee empire, and is particularly anxious that we should promise to assist him in recovering Seistan, which purely Afghan province has been within the last few years seized by Persia. He also wants us to announce our alliance with him and guarantee our support and friendship in a treaty. Now the Viceroy cannot touch on questions relating to Persia, as he has no diplomatic relations with that country, all political matters relating to the Shah being dealt with in England. Neither will we commit ourselves to a regular treaty of offensive and defensive alliance with the Ameer till he has somewhat consolidated his power and the views of the Secretary of State for India have been ascertained. We are however ready to declare our policy and general intentions in a protocol, or a letter written by the Governor-General to the Ameer. We will give him a battery of artillery, and more arms if he requires them, and will make him the same payment as that made to his father, i.e., a lac of rupees a month. He has already received some arms and six lacs, and another six lacs are waiting for him at Peshawur. Further, whatever the issue of the struggle with his enemies, we will give him all the moral and indeed material support, short of an expedition, in our power. We have completely changed our policy of "the de facto ruler," and will recognise Shere Ali Khan as Ameer, come what may, except, I suppose, complete destruction of his hopes. We will also try and get hold of Azim Khan and Abdool Rahman Khan, and take care of them for him. This is all I have as yet been able to gather of the political results of the durbar. Lady Mayo had a reception on the 1st, some fine fireworks being displayed before the reception commenced. On the morning of the 1st A A, R.H.A., and the Mountain Battery were out for shot practice. The Ameer took great interest in it, and laid several guns himself, making excellent shots each time. Yesterday there was a field day, the Commander-in-Chief taking the command.

April 4.—As I have announced to you by telegram this afternoon there has been at the last moment a change in the arrangements regarding the date of the Ameer's departure on his return journey. At the private farewell interview, which took place last evening at the Viceroy's camp, it was finally determined that the Ameer should start at 6 A.M. on the 5th instead of the same hour on the 6th, which at noon yesterday had been the date fixed upon. I have been conversing with an extremely well-informed person, who knows as much as the Ameer knows about the arrangements between himself, the Ameer, and the British Government. I have, however, found out no more than what I told you in my letter of yesterday. The treaty, or more probably protocol, will be published about a month hence, by which time the Ameer will have reached Cabul. The general tenour of the agreement is as follows:—The British Government recognise Shere Ali Khan as ruler of Afghanistan, and engage to give him all the moral support in their power. They have already given him six lacs, and another six lacs await his arrival at Peshawur. A monthly subsidy of a lac will be given to him and a complete battery of artillery. He will also be given further supplies of arms—he has already received several thousand stands—if he asks for them. The British Government will endeavour to get hold of Azim Khan and Abdool Rahman Khan and keep them in safe custody. The old policy of recognising the de facto ruler, which is a direct incentive to civil war, is to be abandoned. The Ameer asked for some British officers to discipline his army. This request was promptly refused. He then asked for some native officers. These, he was told, would be sent if volunteers could be found. These are the main points of the agreement, and further than this the Government will not at present go, though what may take place after instructions have been received from the Secretary of State for India and after the Ameer shall have settled his kingdom cannot as yet be predicated. Conjecture, however, has a wide field at his disposal, for the present policy is so directly at variance with that hitherto pursued that a further step towards direct intervention cannot be regarded as improbable. Indeed the action we may take must depend on the development of events and the conduct of Russia and Persia. If we do not interfere we will assuredly refuse to allow the Russians to do so. Again, the occupation of Seistan by the Shah may give rise to complications of which no man can see the end. Seistan is a purely Afghan province, and never till within the last year or two formed a portion of Persia. It is not at all impossible that Russia may make use of this province, concerning which the Ameer exhibits much jealousy, as an available sore, and through Persia deal a blow at Shere Ali which she dare not inflict directly herself. There is no intention at present of appointing an envoy to Cabul, though such an arrangement may be made, when Afghanistan is tranquillised, at the request of the Ameer. The appointment of a Political Agent for the frontier tract as a medium of communication with the Ameer is more probable and likely to be the preliminary to the despatch of an envoy to Cabul. Even of this, however, there is at present no sign. Whenever the time comes for such an appointment, you may depend upon it that General Lumsden, who left Umballa with Lord Napier last night for Bombay, en route for Scotland, will not be the man. Either Crawford Chamberlain or his brother, Sir Neville Chamberlain, will be the Frontier Political or the Envoy to Cabul. The Lumsdens are personally obnoxious to the Ameer, while the Chamberlains he terms his brothers, and professes the greatest affection for them. He told Crawford Chamberlain that he had brought down a magnificent horse for him. Crawford Chamberlain told him that the Government would refuse their sanction to the acceptance of the present. On this the Ameer swore he would have it inserted in the treaty. It is said that the negotiations were not carried to their present satisfactory conclusion without some difficulty. The Ameer, on reading over the draft treaty or protocol, put not approved of to numerous clauses. Everything has, however, at last terminated well, and the Ameer, who was at first very distrustful of British policy, will go away pleased with his visit and satisfied of our sincerity. He says he intends to make no secret of the agreement between himself and us. "I hate paper work," he said, "and secret diplomacy. I like a clear plain policy. I shall announce what has been agreed upon, for I am not going to give grounds for suspicions that there are two treaties, one secret, the other public." I have observed that he distrusted us at first, and made no secret of his feelings. To one official he said the British Government is responsible for the bloodshed of the last three years. To another, who begged him to speak out his wishes and intentions in order that the British Government might know how to frame its policy, he rejoined sharply, "What is the policy of the British Government?" It is said that he is very anxious that the battery to be given to him should consist of Armstrongs. Seeing two batteries here one day, he said, "What are these?" "Armstrongs," was the reply, "and these ordinary field pieces." Which are the best? "Oh, Armstrongs, by far," was the answer. "Then you are going to give me the worst," he said drily. This retort rather dumfounded, as may be imagined, the official. The Ameer's love of and interest in artillery is very great. On the morning of the 1st the A A, R.H.A., and A 22, R.A. (Capt. Manderson's Mountain Battery) was ordered out to show the Ameer a little target practice. Neither battery knew the ground, and they alternately advanced and retired—the horse artillery at a gallop—and fired at different ranges, from 400 yards to 1,650 yards. The practice of the R.H.A. battery was indifferent, for which result, however, the fuses were partly to blame. That of the grim little plaything-looking guns of the mountain battery was good, and the Ameer expressed his preference for the latter in unmistakable terms. He took great interest in all the proceedings, and both watched every shot as it was fired and examined the targets at the close of the practice of A A, R.H.A., with the utmost interest. He, as I said, was more pleased with A 22, R.A., and, getting out of his carriage, personally laid one gun three times, making three of the best shots fired that day. I mentioned that he had a farewell interview with the Viceroy yesterday afternoon. As he was going away Lord Mayo called up a splendid grey Arab stallion which he has been riding several times during his stay here, and with English saddle, bridle, and horse clothing complete, presented it to the Ameer as his own personal gift. The horse is a magnificent animal, which cost Rs. 2,000 a few months ago, and the Ameer was much gratified at this mark of the Viceroy's personal friendship. On the 2nd there was a subscription ball, at which however neither the Ameer nor the Viceroy were, as was at one time expected, present. I am told the rooms were badly lighted, and that it was not a very successful affair, there being only forty ladies present out of a total of one hundred and eighty persons.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

CHUKRATA, April 2.—It may interest you and many of your readers to know that the new station of Chukrata was visited on the 28th, 29th, and 30th ult. by Colonel Malleon, the Sanitary Commissioner, and his secretary, Dr. Cunningham. They declare that it is by far the best site they have seen for a hill station, the only drawback being that the ridge is rather narrow, which will necessitate the barracks and officers' quarters being rather straggling and far apart. There is not a single private house built yet, but sanction has been obtained by the ex-engineer, Captain D. Ward, R.E., and the ex-commissariat officer, Captain J. V. Hunt, S.C., to build; also one or two others have applied for sites for houses, shops, &c. Report says that Lieutenant-Colonel C. B. G. Bacon, S.C., is to be the cantonment magistrate. By dint of extraordinary exertion on the part of the ex-engineer and his staff the temporary barracks for her Majesty's 55th Regiment are nearly ready. On the Kailana-hill one barrack for married families is nearly ready. No pukka buildings are finished yet. The road from Kalsi to Siah will soon be ready—only two places impassable for four-footed animals. There is a new bridle-path constructed from Siah to Chukrata, via Thanna Tongra and Buswah. The gradient is rather steep in some places, but it shortens the journey by some six miles, which is a great consideration. The Sappers and Miners have been busily employed since the commencement of the cold season, and have done some splendid work on an extensive precipice near Siah, now known as the "Sappers' Dhang." The rock is a kind of dark limestone, with layers of light-coloured quartz, very hard indeed, so much so that it was with much difficulty that the borers could be forced into it, although made of and pointed with the best tempered steel. The climate of the Umlawa Valley is anything but salubrious, and many of the best men of the Sappers have broken down in health, and a few have died. This year they are to be located on the higher ranges out of the miasmatic valley. So fatal is the valley that in the rains a greater risk was run in travelling from Kalsi to Chukrata than there is at present in travelling through the Eastern Doon. The much respected and benevolent Commissioner of the division, Mr. Fleetwood Williams, C.S.I., in consequence made a high level road for the hill men of Joun Sar to pass to and from Kalsi without running the risk of fever or death. The road from Simla to Mussoorie is now nearly finished. A party of Sappers, under a most intelligent and hard-working non-commissioned officer, Sergeant John Cash, is at work on the suspension bridge over the Jumna, at Lukwar, which is being constructed under the direction of Mr. Wood, C.E., of the Public Works Department. When this structure is completed the road from Mussoorie to Chukrata, thirty-two miles, will be opened for traffic. This will be a great boon to all, for carriage is very scarce in the Joun Sar district. When his Honour, Sir William Muir passed through the district last cold season he only had about forty coolies in his train, the people at the time being engaged cutting their autumn crops. It will be difficult to get carriage for the regiment without putting the poor people to great inconvenience.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

MR. JOHN COCHRANE, once of the Bombay and now of the Calcutta bar, has left for Europe on account of his health. The English and native press of Calcutta refer to his departure with regret.

THE ASIATIC BANK DIVIDEND.—The Indian Daily News mentions that the dividend of 2s. 6d. in the pound, being paid by the liquidator of the Asiatic Bank, will bring to the Port Canning Company Rs. 48,463-2.

THE SALT DUTIES.—Messrs. Hume and Currie, of the Civil Service, and Lieutenant Kellow O. Pye, R.E., have been constituted a committee to inquire into certain matters connected with the salt duties in the Central Provinces.

FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT.—A proposal for improving the position and raising the salaries of the Covenanted Officers of the Financial Department has been negatived by the Supreme Government.—Indian Daily News.

THE FOREST DEPARTMENT.—The Secretary of State has approved, says the Indian Daily News, of the plan of training a number of young men in Europe for the Forest Department in India, and of consolidating all forest appointments, except in Bombay and Madras, in one list.

TRAGEDY AT MEERUT.—A soldier of the 105th Regiment at Meerut is reported to have been shot by his comrade on Sunday, the 28th ult. The ball took effect in the back, and passed out through the breast of the murdered man. It is understood that some money transaction to a paltry amount led to the commission of the crime.

COLONEL SEYMOUR BLANE is expected to leave India by the steamer which sails from Bombay on the 17th April. It is still understood that he will return again in November, and be attached to the suite of the Duke of Edinburgh, and accompany his Royal Highness on his trip through India, with Major-General Sir Nevil Chamberlain.

LORD MAYO'S MOVEMENTS.—It appears that Lord Mayo did not intend after leaving Umballa to travel by carriage or dooly. His Lordship caused a dak of horses to be laid (he has a stud of no less than twenty-eight), and intended to ride from Saharunpore to Roorkee, Hurdwar, and Dehra—taking his chances of sport by the way. By way of preparation for the Viceroy's visit to Hurdwar, elephants were collected there in large numbers for a grand tiger battue.

DELHI MEMORIAL.—At last the Delhi Memorial Monument is likely to be finished. Commenced and left to crumble into ruin so many years ago, it is now being pushed on vigorously, and begins to assume a more decided shape. The whole of the money required to complete it has been sanctioned in the Budget for 1869-70, so that there is now no reason why there should be any further delay.

OUTRAGE ON A LADY.—A Dinapore correspondent of the Indian Daily News says that a man named Colgan, formerly a fireman on the East Indian Railway, from which he was dismissed for some misdemeanour, will shortly be put on trial at Rajmahal, charged with committing a most cowardly assault on a lady in a first class carriage to which he had gained access from a second class compartment while the train was in motion, the prisoner travelling on a railway pass. The case may be finally committed to the High Court at Calcutta. How fierce the struggle must have been the torn state of the lady's garments and her damaged necklace proved, and the ruffian's face bore the outlines of her finger nails.

THE AMEER OF KABUL.—Shere Ali is said to have warmed into real enthusiasm when charging an A.D.C. to deliver his thanks to the Commander-in-Chief at the close of the review on March 30. "Tell his Excellency," he said, "that, next to the real thing, no sight could be more deeply interesting to a soldier." He is said to be so pleased with the European style of buildings in India that he has asked the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab to get him the design of a small palace for himself in Cabul, and the Delhi paper believes that the Executive-Engineer there—Mr. E. J. Martin—has been applied to for the plans. The Cabul Chief has, moreover, expressed his firm belief that he will be able to construct the building in Cabul for about half the estimated cost of such a work under the P.W.D. in our territory.

A MURDERER CAUGHT.—Referring to the capture of Ramtahul Sing, the murderer of Lieutenant C. W. Hutchinson, Adjutant and Quarter Master of the 17th Regiment Bengal Native Infantry, the Delhi Gazette is informed that the principal witnesses for the Crown are Colonel F. W. Burroughs, doing duty at Barrackpore, who commanded the Regiment during 1857; Mr. C. Horne, Judge of Mynpoorie, at present on leave, who was Magistrate and Collector of Azimgurh; and Suddur Hossein Khan, Extra-Assistant-Commissioner in the Oudh Province, who was Sheristadar of the Azimgurh Foudarry Court. Besides, there are seven or eight other native eye-witnesses to the perpetration of the murder. Ramtahul Singh left Barra-Bunkee on the 21st March, and is now safely lodged in the Azimgurh jail. Since his capture he has made three attempts to escape from the custody of the police.

THE HON. MR. MAINE.—It is not probable that the Hon. Mr. Maine will ever again see Calcutta. We believe it is his intention to resign office at the beginning of the cold season, notwithstanding the pressure brought to bear on him a third time to continue his invaluable services to legislation and progress in India. The University of Oxford is said to have marked him out for a Chair of Jurisprudence and Law, which it is about to create, offering him very nearly his own terms. We trust that the terms proposed will be such as to render it possible for Mr. Maine to hold a seat in the Council of India or in Parliament. Such knowledge, experience, and ability as his cannot be lost to India. It has been proposed that a collection of his principal speeches should be published, and we trust the proposition will be carried out. The author of "Ancient Law" owes to England an exhaustive book on India, to the preparation of which he might well devote all his leisure for some years.—Friend of India.

MILITARY.—Brigadier General Stewart, C.B., is about to retire from the command of the Peshawur Brigade, we learn, in consequence of his promotion to Major General. It is reported that Colonel S. Browne, C.B., V.C., late in command of the Guide Corps, and now of the Central India Horse, will succeed him. Colonel Browne is an officer of very distinguished service, and has had some experience of hill warfare. His residence at Murdan when in command of the Corps of Guides must have given him considerable knowledge of frontier politics.—Delhi Gazette. The Indian Daily News hears that Major H. D. Battye, who is expected to return to India early in May, will act as Paymaster at the Presidency in the place of Colonel Mundy, lately appointed to officiate for Colonel Hill, who has proceeded to Simla on leave.—Captain Heath, of H.M.'s 20th Hussars, is expected to be appointed officiating Brigade Major at Meerut.—We regret to learn that Lieutenant Colonel Espinasse, commanding the 2-12th at Jubbulpore, who was lately attacked with small-pox, died on the 29th March. Colonel Walter, of the 35th, would be shortly at Jubbulpore, to take command of the 2-12th. This is the fourth or fifth officer that the 2-12th have lost by small-pox or cholera at Jubbulpore; the last was also a commanding officer, Colonel Ponsonby, who, from exposure to wet while selecting some cholera encampments, caught the disease and was rapidly carried off.—The court of inquiry which has been for some time past investigating the cause of the quarrel between Major Morland, Brigade Major at Delhi, and Dr. Peskett, of the 17th Native Infantry, has finished its sittings. The proceedings have been forwarded to the Commander-in-Chief, with whom further action in the matter now rests. As usual there has been a lady in the case.—Pioneer.

CIVIL.—Lieut.-Col. Bristow is to be transferred, we (Delhi Gazette) hear, from Rawul Pindee to Jhelum as second commissioner; to be succeeded by Mr. McNabb at the former place. Mr. Moore is to be moved to Jhelum from Pind-Dadun-Khan as his assistant. Should this arrangement be carried out it will throw open the Cashmere appointment, which, when first offered to Col. Bristow, we thought but an empty compliment to an officer of his long standing—ten years deputy commissioner of Jhelum! Sir R. Temple was to return to Calcutta this week to fix the minimum for the Four per Cent. Loan, and await the result on the 17th, after which he will proceed to England for six months, via Bombay. The Friend of India has heard a rumour, on high authority, that the Messrs. Rothschild mean not only to tender for this loan through their Calcutta agents, but to devote more attention than hitherto to Indian securities. It is said that, on the departure of Mr. Thomas Jones, the office of assistant secretary to the Government of Bengal will be abolished, and two native head assistants, to be called registrars, appointed, one to the revenue, and another to the judicial department of the Bengal office.

CHOLERA IN THE 58TH REGIMENT.—It is useless to dissemble the painful truth that cholera, after an apparent lull, has broken out again in H.M.'s 58th Regiment here (Allahabad) with greater violence than before. The number of deaths in the corps up to the present time from the disease has now mounted to eighteen, including two women. It is remarkable that, without an exception, all the cases have hitherto been confined to that wing of the regiment which has recently returned from Darjeeling. Everything that prudence and energy could suggest and carry out seems to have been done by the military and medical authorities to allay panic while adopting precautions. One very sad illustration has been afforded of the height to which the distress of fear can rise. A poor fellow's mind became so disordered by dwelling on the subject of cholera that in a paroxysm of anxiety he actually shot himself, as it appears, to get quit, once for all, of his apprehensions. For more than forty-eight hours there has been no fresh case of cholera in H.M.'s 58th Regiment. Two, however, of the patients who were suffering when we last wrote have since died. There are now four cases in hospital—three belonging to the right, and one to the left wing. All these are doing well, and may probably be considered out of danger. The late moves of the right wing three miles further up the Cawnpore road, and of the left across the Gauges to Coordapore, seem to have shaken off the grip of the disease. Still, even if so, the late invasion of cholera will remain the most fatal of which we have ever heard, "the most fatal," not, of course, in the gross number of deaths, but the proportion of deaths to seizures. There have been altogether twenty-four persons attacked, and of them twenty are already buried. —Pioneer, April 7.

Madras.

"SE NON E VERO."—The taking of a census was lately being discussed at a municipal meeting in Madras, when one of the commissioners asked what a census was, and what its uses were!

A STARTLING DECISION.—The Hon. J. B. Norton, Advocate-General of Madras, has decided that all parcels liable to duty imported by the overland post without any Customs duty being paid thereon are liable to be confiscated, and also that the offending parties are liable to a fine under the provisions of the Sea Customs.

MAJOR GENERAL H. MARSHALL.—This officer was to proceed to England by the first steamer in April, and it is not expected that he will again return to India. By the last Fort St. George Gazette, it will be seen that Government have placed on record their acknowledgment of the "great ability and untiring devotion with which Major General Marshall has discharged the important duties of his office as Secretary to Government."

MILITARY.—A despatch is en route from Calcutta (says the Madras Mail of April 2), abolishing the southern division of the Madras army as a divisional command, and making it instead into a first class brigade. The ceded district is also to be abolished as a major general's command, and a brigadier general appointed to command the troops at Bellary. The troops at Secundrabad will in future be commanded by a major general on divisional allowances probably. These arrangements will leave the Madras army with only two divisional commands, the other two being held by Queen's officers. All the good things that Madras officers had to look forward to are rapidly flitting away.

THE GOVERNOR OF MADRAS.—The Madras Mail describes the present Governor of Madras, with refreshing bluntness, as "an affable, well read, but indolent diplomatist, who might have achieved greatness had not his bread been buttered on both sides in his youth."

BANGALORE.—We learn from the Bangalore Herald that the Supreme Government has at last sanctioned the formation of a Volunteer corps at that station. It is presumed that Colonel Simpson, who has done so much for the corps, will be the colonel.

MR. J. C. WINSOM.—We understand that application has been made to the Supreme Government for the retention of this gentleman's services for a further period of two or three months, to enable him, we believe, to wind up all matters connected with the professions and license-tax. Consequent on a representation by the Government of India, lately made, that the charges for the collecting of this tax were out of proportion to the collections, it had been determined to do away with Mr. Winsom's post, the salary of which is 800 rupees per month, and to transfer his duties, from the present month, to the deputy-collector of the Sydapett Treasury, with a monthly allowance of 250 rupees; but this arrangement has been cancelled by the introduction of the new income-tax.—Madras Athenæum.

COLONEL MACAULAY.—We hear that Colonel Macaulay, formerly of the 23rd Regiment, proceeds to Burmah immediately, as Commandant of a Regiment stationed there. Colonel Macaulay has been for some years in this station, and is well known to the residents for the great interest he always took in the introduction of useful inventions into the place, and in testing their adaptability to the climate. His experiments with the cobra and mongoose have also gained him some fame. But Colonel Macaulay has not used the means God has given him for these ends solely. His liberality to the poor has been very marked, and he was a very generous contributor to the funds of Christ Church in the Fort which are devoted to missionary and various other benevolent purposes.—Trichinopoly Chronicle.

WORKS PUBLISHED IN THE MADRAS PRESIDENCY.—During the second quarter of 1868-69 only 109 publications were registered in the Madras Presidency, and of these the majority were in the Tamil language. Only seven Sanscrit works were published. Of the Tamil publications scarcely any new literary work of more than average value appeared during the quarter, with the exception of the Chintamani, a celebrated Epic poem and a high classical authority in the Tamil language, by an eminent Jaina author who lived eight centuries ago. Strange as the fact may appear, this is the first successful attempt ever made to print this celebrated work, which has hitherto been in MS., and to make it accessible to the Tamil scholar. The present volume, containing only the First Book of the Poem, has been brought out by the Rev. Mr. Bower, under the patronage of the Director of Public Instruction. A Satire in Tamil, entitled the "Tahsildar Natakam," on the intrigues and malpractices of Tahsildars and other subordinate Revenue officials in the provinces, by an old native officer of the Judicial department, has been reprinted. This work is said not only to be of literary merit, but to contain an exposure of the bribery and oppression which still prevail in the lower ranks of the Revenue department of a Government which professes to measure and assess every field every year.

TODA SACRIFICES.—In January last the Todas of the Neilgherries celebrated their annual sacrifice to the manes of those tribesmen who had died during the year. There had been eleven deaths, and twenty-two animals were slaughtered in spite of the economic suggestions of Mr. Brecks, the commissioner, who thought the ceremony might be performed with less expenditure. A special Government order, however, permits the slaughter of two buffaloes for each deceased. The cattle were driven into a kraal at the funeral house, round which five or six hundred Todas and about a thousand spectators were gathered. Some thirty or forty young Todas were armed with maces of Haly wood five or six feet long, and with these they irritated the animals until the priest gave the signal for the sacrifice to commence. They then rushed into the kraal, three or four of them caught hold of an animal's head, the others belaboured it from behind, and in this fashion the animal was dragged to the executioner, who felled it with an axe. The cruelty on this occasion was so great that Mr. Brecks recommended that measures should be taken to prevent a repetition, and Government has threatened to prohibit the annual sacrifice of buffaloes altogether, unless these animals are killed with an axe or some other sharp instrument, and without inflicting unnecessary suffering upon them.

Bombay.

LORD NAPIER.—His Excellency Lord Napier of Magdala returned to Poona on the 9th April by special train from Nagpore, and the headquarters of the army also returned to Poona.

LARKHANA.—The hail storm which lately visited the Punjab seems to have extended as far as Upper Sind. At Larkhana hailstones fell of the size of a pigeon's egg, and of twice that size in the Mehur and other districts!

THE WAGHEERS.—We regret to learn of a fresh disturbance on the part of the Wagheers, who, though greatly reduced in number by the late skirmish, have been joined by some other outlaws, and are said to have pillaged a village in Nawanuggur.—Guzerat Mitra, April 4.

MHOW.—We are glad to find it reported that cholera, which had made its appearance among the Bays at Mhow, has entirely disappeared, and that the station is now perfectly healthy. It appears that rain is much required in that part of the country. There is a great scarcity of water, and many of the wells have dried up.

LEGISLATION.—The Act passed by the Bombay Legislative Council to provide in the Presidency of Bombay funds for expenditure on objects of local public utility and improvement, and to constitute local committees for the due administration of such funds, received the assent of the Governor General on the 24th March.

CARWAR RAILWAY.—Mr. Buchanan, with five assistants, has arrived, instructed by the Secretary of State to make the survey for the Carwar Railway, and proceeded to Carwar by the Government steamer Goolamar. It is believed that the survey is to be for a railway in the meantime between Carwar and Hooblee, the only difficult part being the Ghaut.

A PRESENT FOR ALI MORAD.—A rifle of the value of 1,000 rupees has been sent out as a presentation to H. H. Meer Ali Moorad Khan of Khyrpoor, by the Paris Exhibition Committee of 1867. The Meer was an exhibitor. He is expected to visit Kurrachee some time in May next, and it is said will proceed to Bombay to have an interview with his Excellency the Governor.

CIVIL.—The Poona Observer understands that Mr. Charles Gordon Kemball, of the Bombay Civil Service, and Judge and Session Judge of Surat, will be appointed Judge and Session Judge of Poona, and Agent for the Sirdars in the Deccan, in the room of Mr. Lloyd, who becomes a Judge of the High Court.—Also that Mr. Lloyd has been appointed to succeed Mr. Tucker on the Bench of the High Court.

DR. BHAI DAI'S CURE FOR LEPROSY.—We understand that Dr. Bhai Daji does not now make any secret of his treatment. We understand that the Duke of Argyll has had his attention drawn to the matter, and has written to the Bombay Government, asking for a report on the new treatment, and that, in consequence, Dr. Hunter is now testing its value with reference to the preparation of such a report. If he confines his attention to those who are under his care there will be this disadvantage—that a considerable time must elapse before his report can be ready. It is not claimed that the cure is a very rapid one.—Bombay Guardian.

MILITARY.—Colonel Church, the Deputy Judge Advocate-General in Sind, and Cantonment Magistrate of Kurrachee, was to leave Kurrachee for Bombay, en route to England, by the mail steamer of the 14th April. Major Cowper has been appointed to act. Major General the Hon. A. Gordon, C.B., commanding the P.D.A., left Poona on Wednesday evening, April 7, accompanied by Captain Fraser, Assistant Quartermaster-General, and Captain C. W. Hume, A.D.C., on a tour of inspection to Sattara. The Observer understands that on completion of this duty General Gordon will not return to Poona, but will proceed straight to Mahabulshwur, where he will remain until the commencement of the rains.

MR. JUSTICE NEWTON.—At a meeting of the Bombay Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, held on Thursday evening, April 8, the resignation of Mr. Justice Newton, as President of the Society, was accepted, and in recognition of his services, and of the esteem in which he is held, the Society elected him an honorary member, and resolved to present him "with a complete set of the Society's journals, elegantly bound, and with a suitable inscription." It had been proposed by the committee to place a bust of the retiring President in the library as a memorial of his services, but as he declined to accept that honour, thinking it unmerited, it was resolved, at his own suggestion, to recommend the course mentioned above. Mr. Justice Tucker (hitherto a Vice-President) was elected President, and Mr. Justice Warden was elected a Vice-President.

TIGER SHOOTING AT MHOW.—We learn from Mhow that the annual tiger shooting party of the Central India Horse was to meet at Augur on the 1st April. Colonel Gibbard, Royal Artillery, and some few officers from Mhow were to join the party, which expected from khubber received to bag a larger number of tigers than they did last year.—Times of India.—It is said that, owing to the scarcity of water in the district, tigers are encroaching upon the station of Mhow rather too closely to be pleasant, two having lately been seen near the waterfalls, about four miles from the barracks of the 95th. One of these was shot by Dr. Forsight, of the 95th, but the other escaped, though wounded. The Pioneer recalls to mind that it was near these same waterfalls that Captain Gowan, of the Inniskillings, met his death a few years ago from a wounded tiger.

ELEVATION TO THE BENCH OF THE HON. MR. BAYLEY.—We have much pleasure in stating that telegrams have been received from the Secretary of State for India in Council, announcing the appointment of the Honorable Lyttelton Holyoake Bayley to a seat on the bench of the High Court of Judicature, Bombay, vice the Honorable Sir Joseph Arnould, Kt., the senior Puisne Judge, who retires at the end of the present month. Mr. Bayley has held the office of Advocate-General and the position of member of the Legislative Council of Bombay since the 17th March, 1866, and he will be succeeded in those appointments by Mr. James Sewell White, Remembrancer of Legal Affairs. Mr. Bayley is the youngest son of Sir John Bayley, Bart., who had a large and lucrative practice as a special pleader, and at the bar, and is the grandson of the late eminent judge, Mr. Justice Bayley, who, from 1808 to 1830, held a seat as Puisne Judge in the Court of Queen's Bench at Westminster, and from 1830 to 1834 in the Court of Exchequer, in which latter year he retired, and was created a baronet in recognition of his distinguished services on the Judicial Bench. Mr. Lyttelton H. Bayley was educated at Eton College, where he was Captain of the Eleven in 1844—a year in which Eton beat both Harrow and Winchester at Lord's—and was called to the bar in May 1850. He has practised at the Bombay bar since 1861.

NICOBAR ISLANDS.—We hear that her Majesty's ship Spiteful, Commander Morrell, left Trincomalee on the evening of the 18th March, with orders to take possession of the Nicobar Islands in the name of her Majesty. We understand Commander Morrell is to retain the command of the islands until relieved by officers appointed by his Excellency the Viceroy. The duty that has devolved on Commander Morrell will hardly be a pleasant one, considering the half-savage character of the inhabitants; but it could not have been entrusted to a more efficient and practical officer.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

THE PROPOSED OVERLAND ROUTE VIA OSTEND AND BRINDISI.

India Office, London, Feb. 18, 1869.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council.

My Lord,—I transmit herewith, for the information of your Excellency's Government, the enclosed copy of a despatch, dated Jan. 26, 1869, from H.M.'s Minister at Stuttgart, to the address of Lord Clarendon, regarding the establishment of a through route from Ostend to Brindisi for the conveyance of passengers between London and India.—I have, &c.,
ARGYLL.

Stuttgart, Jan. 26, 1869.

To Lord Clarendon, &amp;c., &amp;c., &amp;c.

My Lord,—In my letter No. 140 of December last to Lord Stanley, I had the honour to report that it had been determined to hold a conference of railway officials at Florence in the early part of this year, for the purpose of making arrangements for running direct trains between Brindisi and Ostend for the conveyance of passengers between London and India.

Baron Varnbüler, who, as my previous correspondence indicates, has the establishment of this route for the Indian traffic very much at heart, took advantage of a recent meeting at Stuttgart of German railway directors for settling tariffs of fares, &c., and over which H.E. as Minister for Public Traffic in Wurttemberg presided, to bring forward for discussion the above subject, after due notice, so that the different railway officials should be properly instructed, in order that when the Conference at Florence shall take place, the arrangements for these trains on this side the Brenner might be found complete, and it should only remain to combine the same with those on the Italian side.

On the part of Prussia some difficulty was raised, because of the refusal of her Majesty's Government to agree to the proposal that some portion at least of the Indian mails should be carried by this route; but Baron Varnbüler disposed of these with the valuable assistance of Count Usedom at Florence; and the meeting at Stuttgart with the object stated proved eminently successful.

The result of the meeting shortly has been that every arrangement has been made, down to the minutest details of time-tables, fares, &c. Special carriages of more solid construction will be built so as to endure the wear and tear of uninterrupted travel from Brindisi to Ostend without change. Refreshment and sleeping-carriages will form part of these special trains, very few and short detentions will take place on the whole route, and it is hoped that examination of baggage will take place anywhere but between Brindisi and Ostend.

Count Usedom has obtained that the Cross Railway between Modena and Verona should be completed immediately, thereby shortening considerably the Italian portion of the route, and it is confidently expected that there will be a considerable gain of time as well as convenience over any other line.

Your Lordship will observe that, by the step thus taken, very great progress has been effected towards the establishment of this valuable route, and that in particular the objection urged by the Postmaster-general as to the difficulty of concluding agreements with the numerous German Railway Companies occurring between the two termini, in case the Indian mails should be forwarded by this route, is thereby entirely set aside. Baron Varnbüler has, as he undertook, and as I reported in my despatch No. 94 of Oct. 19, 1867, to Lord Stanley, completed common arrangements to the minutest particulars with all the German railways, and there are the best prospects of these being agreed to on the Italian side.

However, in view of the objections entertained by the British Post-office authorities to the use of the proposed route for the Indian mails, Baron Varnbüler and the different German and Italian railways interested therein do not any longer consider it necessary to wait until those authorities should see reason to alter that opinion before establishing the through trains in question. These trains will, it is confidently believed, be established through the whole distance between Brindisi and Ostend in the course of the coming summer. The advantages of the passenger traffic, it is expected, will fully reimburse the different railway companies for their outlay, even without the mail conveyance, whilst the various countries through which the trains will pass will benefit in many ways indirectly by the same; and should the expectation be verified of the more speedy arrival of passengers by this route, Baron Varnbüler entertains no doubt that the British Post-office authorities will ultimately see the advantage of forwarding the Indian mails likewise by the same.—I have, &c., (Signed) G. J. R. GORDON.

Miscellaneous.

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.—The East Indian Railway Company have notified that they have received authority from the Secretary of State to issue 50,000 shares of £20 each, bearing interest at the rate of £5 per cent. per annum, at a premium of £1 per share. A deposit of £5 per share, with the premium of £1 per share, must be paid on or before the 11th May next, and further calls of £5 per share will be made at intervals of about three months from that date. The allotments will be made rateably among the shareholders.

THE NAWAB OF BENGAL.—His Highness the Nawab Nazim of Bengal, and his eldest and seventh sons, Prince Ali-Kudr-Hussun-Ali-Bahadoor and Prince Soliman-Kudr-Vahid-Ali-Bahadoor, arrived at Osborne on April 28, and were presented to her Majesty by the Duke of Argyll. The suite of the Nawab, including Meer Wazir Ali Kazmi, Military Tutor, and Hukameem Syud Surwar Ali Khan, Physician to his Highness, was presented to her Majesty by the Duke of Argyll, and also Colonel Frederic Layard, of the Bengal Staff Corps, who is specially appointed to attend upon his Highness.

TESTIMONIAL TO SIR H. EDWARDES.—A committee has been formed in England to co-operate with that in the Punjab in raising funds for a testimonial to the late Major-general Sir Herbert Edwardes. It is proposed, as part of the scheme, to present Lady Edwardes with a marble bust of her deceased husband. Subscriptions will be received by Messrs. H. S. King and Co., 45 Pall Mall, S.W., and Messrs. Grindlay and Co., 55 Parliament-street, S.W., cheques and post-office orders being made payable to Colonel J. Becher, 16 Suffolk-street, Pall Mall.

THE OLD BANK OF BOMBAY.—The liquidator of the Old Bank of Bombay has notified that on the 30th of June he will be prepared to pay a first distribution of the assets of the bank at the rate of Rs. 50 per share. Shareholders desirous of so doing can take up their proportionate allotment in the New Bank of Bombay (Limited), and with reference to this notice the New Bank of Bombay have intimated that, upon application being forthwith made, holders of shares in the Old Bank will be entitled to receive one share of the reserved issue of shares in the New Bank for every two shares held in the Old Bank. These will be credited with Rs. 100, which sum the liquidator of the Old Bank will pay previously to issue, being part of Rs. 500 to be hereafter called up. Forms of application are to be obtained of Messrs. Forbes, Forbes, and Co.; or of Messrs. Smith, Fleming, and Co.

"IN RE THE MADRAS COFFEE COMPANY."—This matter came before Vice-Chancellor Malins on the 27th April on a petition by contributories and creditors that the voluntary winding-up of the company might be placed under the supervision of the Court. The petition was opposed by the main body of contributories and by the principal creditors, who submitted that no case whatever was made out for the interference of the Court; that unnecessary expense would be incurred with no corresponding benefit by placing the liquidation under supervision; and that, in addition to the smallness of interest in the company of the petitioners, either as shareholders or creditors, they had taken a most vexatiously hostile course in presenting this petition before ascertaining the result of the meeting summoned for the purpose of considering the propriety of a voluntary liquidation. The Vice-Chancellor, after commenting in strong terms on the course taken by the petitioners in presenting their petition for a compulsory winding-up without waiting to see the result of the meeting summoned for the 3rd of March last for determining upon a voluntary winding-up, a sale of the property, and the appointment of a liquidator, said that if the petitioners had waited for that meeting, and attended it, they might have known that conditions were appended to the resolutions providing most carefully for all interests. There must be a very strong call to induce the Court to place a voluntary winding-up under supervision. Nor was there any right, ex debito justitiæ on the part of creditors to such an order. In the present instance no ground was really shown for the interference of the Court on behalf of the petitioners, either as contributories or as creditors, and the order would be that this petition, which had been thus rashly presented, must be dismissed with costs.

"GRAHAM v. JOHNSON."—This case was heard in the Rolls Court, on April 27. The object of this suit was to obtain a declaration that a bond for Rs. 10,000, given by the plaintiff to the defendant Johnson, was void, and ought to be delivered up to be cancelled; and to restrain the assignee of the bond, Colonel Barlow, from suing the plaintiff upon it. The plaintiff, Thomas Chadwick Graham, was in 1862 a captain in her Majesty's 4th Royal Bengal European Cavalry, and the defendant, Henry Charles Ross Johnson, was a barrister in practice at Calcutta. On the 6th of March, 1862, Johnson asked the plaintiff to come to his chambers, as he wanted his assistance in raising money. This the plaintiff did, and while there executed at the request of Johnson what is known as a single bond—i.e., a bond without condition—whereby he bound himself to pay Rs. 10,000 to Johnson, at the same time writing a letter binding himself to pay for value received £1,000 on demand, by himself or representatives. The plaintiff denied the adequacy, and to some extent the existence, of the considerations mentioned in the letter. He had never received one shilling on the bond, and thought when he executed it that it was some sort of negotiable security on which Johnson was to "raise the wind," as on former occasions, and not a bond upon which he was to be the principal debtor. The plaintiff heard no more about the bond until August 8, 1865, when he was applied to for payment by the solicitors of Colonel Barlow, to whom Johnson had assigned the bond for £1,000. The plaintiff, having in the meantime taken advice, instituted the present suit against Johnson and Colonel Barlow, the latter of whom thereupon commenced an action on the bond, to restrain which the bill as amended prayed. His lordship said the cases of the two defendants were wholly distinct. He must declare the bond void, and as Colonel Barlow could be in no better position than Johnson there would be a perpetual injunction to restrain him from proceeding at law, and Johnson must pay the costs of the suit.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS, THURSDAY, April 29.—GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.—The Duke of ARGYLL moved the second reading of the Government of India Act Amendment Bill.—Lord CAIRNS suggested the expediency of ascertaining clearly what were the respective powers of the Secretary of State for India and his Council. An opinion had been expressed that the Secretary of State was liable to be overruled on questions of expenditure by a majority of the Council; but this had been recently denied by the Duke of Argyll. The former view of the construction of the provision respecting grants and appropriations had been generally accepted, and it had been acted upon by all the Duke of Argyll's predecessors as Secretaries for India. The doubt ought to be cleared up.—The LORD CHANCELLOR deprecated arguments from opinions intimated in debate. The Act itself and the Acts it superceded must alone be looked at in a case like this. No court of law could put on the clause in question the construction maintained by Lord Cairns. Such a construction would place the Secretary of State's orders in regard to all the great functions of Government under the control of the Council. For instance, he would be unable to declare war, since war necessarily implied expenditure.—Lord LYVEDEN said that the intention in establishing the Council of India was to provide a check on the Secretary of State, and the disputed clause was inserted with that object. Whatever the true interpretation of that clause might be, there was, at any rate, a doubt, as appeared from the Lord Chancellor's speech itself; and that doubt ought to be removed.—Lord CHELMSFORD held that it was inexpedient to leave the Secretary of State's powers indefinite. The clause was perfectly clear, but in a sense the opposite of that for which the Duke of Argyll had contended. But, as a doubt was felt, it ought to be cleared away.—The Duke of ARGYLL denied that preceding Secretaries for India had acted on Lord Cairns's view of the clause; for that view to be logically consistent would have rendered the Imperial Cabinet's right to make peace and war subject to the control of the Council for India. The object of the provision was simply to prevent a Secretary of State from burdening the Indian revenues with pensions for his political creatures. He thought the meaning of the Act so clear, and so consistent in the sense he gave to it, with the stream of previous Indian legislation, that he was not disposed to jump at Lord

Cairns' recommendation to define more closely the Secretary of State's powers.—Lord SALISBURY thought they were all disputing whether there was a dispute, and doubting whether there was a doubt. He himself held the same opinion as formerly. The Secretary of State might order a declaration of war, but he could not, against his Council's opinion, order the consequent payments. The Lord Chancellor said the Act was perfectly clear, but two ex-Chancellors said it was not. Surely, then, a case had been established for a declaratory Act.—Lord HALIFAX treated very lightly the apprehensions that men such as composed the Council of India would use their powers so as to embarrass the Secretary of State. He thought the law would not be made clearer by excessive defining.—The Bill was then read the second time.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, May 3.—CONTROL OVER THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF INDIA.—In reply to Sir S. NORTHCOTE, Mr. GRANT DUFF said that in matters of expenditure, as in all others, the Governor-general of India was entirely under the control of the Secretary of State in Council, and any wilful neglect or disobedience of orders was punishable as a misdemeanour. It had however not been the practice—and he hoped it never would be—to interfere vexatiously with that great functionary, who constantly acted on the tacit assumption that his acts would be recognised and approved by the Secretary of State in Council.

Spirit of the Home Journals.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF INDIA.

The Pall Mall Gazette remarks that Lord Mayo is evidently acquitting himself with success in the ceremonial portion of his functions. His reception of the Ameer of Afghanistan has charmed the Indian press, and it appears to have made a great impression on Shere Ali himself. Ever since his arrival in Calcutta the Viceroy has shown the importance which he attaches to outward display as a means of increasing the dignity of a great position. It is some time since the wife of a governor-general delighted the natives, to say nothing of the Europeans, by driving out every day in a coach and four. Lord Mayo will evidently never neglect the magnificence and pageantry which are not without their uses anywhere, but are of especial assistance to a ruler in the East. In regard to more serious affairs of State, he appears to be anxious to leave a respectable name in the list of viceroys. We believe that he has sent home a great scheme for the extension of the railway system in India, almost the least part of which is the completion of the gap between Lahore and Peshawur, so that an unbroken journey may be made between Calcutta and our North-West frontier. Lord Mayo is applying his mind to the material improvement of the empire, rightly considering that the foreign policy must necessarily be mainly directed from home. The telegraph settles momentous questions of policy in these days. Governor-generals like Lord Wellesley or Lord Dalhousie are not to be had for the asking, but one part of Dalhousie's work can at least be imitated by Lord Mayo. Recently he has paid a visit to Raneeunge, and pointed out several causes which retard the development of the coal-fields in that district. Lord Mayo's popularity in Calcutta is of little real significance, for according to the old adage the way to an Englishman's heart lies through his stomach; but there can be little doubt that if he continues to show his present energy and inclination for hard work he will be approved in wider circles than those of the capital.

The Broad Arrow holds that to check the advance of Russia in Central Asia by force of arms is to check the progress of civilisation in the East, and yet there is no possibility of overlooking the perplexing fact that the way for Russian merchandise has been and will continue to be opened at the point of the sword. Hence the difficulty of moving energetically against the advance of Russia without placing ourselves in the wrong. It is the business of our statesmen to find the solution of this problem, and when found, to act with the energy and decision which becomes a Government with great interests, nay, with her very existence as a predominant Power, remotely at stake. The fact that commercial interests are pushed to the front must not be allowed to blind us to the equally undeniable fact that those interests are supported by the military power of a mighty empire, and that the hand which is extended to us in apparent friendship and under the cover of a velvet glove is secretly clothed in mail. In this view of the case we have hitherto strongly advocated the policy of raising Afghanistan to the dignity and importance of a protected or neutral State, and we see no reason in all that has been said relative to the policy adopted by the present Government of India to change that opinion. The recent meeting between the Viceroy and Shere Ali at Umballa tends in this direction without amounting to an offensive demonstration against the designs of Russia. We make no formal alliance, but we give our moral support to a neighbouring potentate with the addition of such material assistance as one neighbour may accord to another without infringing on the rights of a third. While persevering in this line of policy we may profitably bear in remembrance the historical analogy to which we have alluded above. Instead of intriguing against Russia in Turkistan and Bokhara and against France in Egypt, let our statesmen provide against possible contingencies in the future by establishing a direct route for commerce through the Euphrates Valley; and thus, so far as the supply of one missing link may help to do so, unlock the fettered capital of India and the East, and enable those historic regions, ages ago deserted by their population and denuded of their wealth, to play a part once more on the world's stage befitting the grandeur of their early history. Lord Mayo and Shere Ali meeting in friendly conference at Umballa suggests the possibility of this desirable consummation, and casts in dramatic shape the dream we have long had of the old world and the new meeting face to face in full recognition of each other's worth and manhood.

THE UMBALLA MEETING.

The Standard thinks that whatever may be the ultimate result of this alliance, whether or not Shere Ali continues to be faithful to his pledges—and we must be careful not to expect too much from a Dooranee chieftain—there can be no doubt that the knowledge of what he already owes to the British connection is calculated to have the happiest effect on the mind of the Ameer. He is reported to have acknowledged, in candid terms, the extent of his obligations to his English friends, and to have left the British territory greatly impressed with the evidences of the power which he witnessed, and much pleased at his reception by Lord Mayo. On every ground Lord Mayo is to be congratulated on this happy termination of a most wise and generous piece of policy—on his own personal account as having confounded his detractors by giving proof of precisely that kind of tact and ability which were needed on this occasion, and on behalf of the people of India, who have received a convincing assurance of the interest of their rulers in a matter of the deepest concern to themselves no less than to the British Government. Having always admitted the desirability of not confining ourselves exclusively to domestic affairs in India, but of cultivating an active and intelligent foreign policy, as becomes a great empire like India, having on one side at least a neighbour who watches closely our actions, we are glad to find that the beginning of a new era in Indian statesmanship has been so auspiciously inaugurated. It is scarcely possible that we can, at any time hereafter, recede from the policy of which the Umballah Conference is the exponent. That policy is not one of ambition or of restlessness, but of a prudent and watchful attention to our borders. It is a policy of defence rather than of aggression. We want nothing from the Afghans but peace and friendship, and we desire to prove to them that they are at least as much interested in continuing to be on neighbourly terms with us as we with them. They must have learnt by this time the futility of indulging in any ambitious dreams at our expense. The days when the Afghan valleys were the nursery of Indian conquerors have long gone by, as the father of the present Ameer was rudely reminded some twenty years ago, when he was chased back across the Indus by the squadrons of General Gilbert. At the present time it would be the easiest of all military feats for a British force of 5,000 men, under such a leader as Chamberlain, or any one of the Lumsdens, to conquer and occupy the whole Afghan territory. But Afghanistan is more valuable to us as a rampart than as a fortress; and it is our interest that its people should be rather goodly neighbours than subjects. It is impossible that a chieftain of so much experience, and reputed to be so shrewd, as Shere Ali, can fail to understand the motives which led us to invite him to Umballah. He must know that in our alliance lies his best hope of safety at home and immunity from his foreign enemies. He cannot but reflect that hereafter, whatever enemies he has are also the enemies of the British Government; and in this assurance will lie his strongest motive to remain faithful to his engagements with us.

A LOCAL ARMY FOR INDIA.

The Pall Mall Gazette wishes to say emphatically that in proposing to establish a local Indian army it does not contemplate a force local in the sense in which the old Company's army was local. We do not contemplate a force composed of men who from the day of their enlistment to the day of their discharge would serve exclusively in India, under a system exclusively Indian. We do not for a moment wish to rear, train, and nourish a force distinct in character and organisation from that which would exist at home. We do not, in short, desire to subdivide the Imperial army into two perfectly distinct forces. What we would propose is the formation of a force for Indian service of men who after a certain home training had elected to continue their military service abroad, instead of availing themselves of the opportunity which would be afforded them of falling back into civil life with a mere liability to military service. All men should, in the first instance, be enlisted for a short period. They should, for so many years as might be deemed necessary to secure military efficiency, be trained at home, and during these years they would constitute the mobilised and active portions of our home army. At the end of this period of training two courses should be open to the soldier. He might prefer to pass back into civil life, to accept a small retaining fee, and to form one of the reserve; or he might be disposed to adopt the army permanently as his profession, in which case he would be required to extend his services to India, and by the men so electing the Indian army would be recruited. Thus, the regular home army would consist of men in their first three years or so of active military training; and these men would feed the home reserves in one direction and the foreign force in the other. They would, in fact, be the parent stock for both the home and the Indian forces, which would be branches of one tree. But between the home reserves and the foreign army there would be this essential difference, that the one would consist of trained soldiers occupied permanently in military duties, and existing constantly as a mobilised force. Thus, whereas up to a certain point the conditions of service and training of the two would be identical, their ultimate occupation and conditions of service would be distinct.

DYSENTERY, CHOLERA, FEVER, AGUE, COLDS, &c.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S (Ex. Army Med. Staff)

CHLORODYNE

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE. The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Remedial Uses and Action.

THIS INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of Opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Colics, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

Those exhaustive diseases—Fever, Ague—so common in tropical climates, are rapidly arrested, and the cold stage in a few moments checked by a timely dose, when warmth and a general glow of the system is established, and comfort secured.

As a Sedative, Neurotic, and Antispasmodic, it is unequalled by any other known Medicine, and not to be surpassed in its specific effects.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec., 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered, the patient recovered.

Mrs. Forbes, wife of the Chaplain at Paris.—"I cannot speak too highly of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne; I have not in any single instance been disappointed with the result, even in aggravated cases of Indian Cholera."

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not supply a want and fill a place."

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

CHLORODYNE, the Great Remedy for CHOLERA.—See Report in the Times, Sept. 6, from the Malta Correspondent, who states, August 24th, that "108 cases and eighty-one deaths occurred at Messina; 80,000 people fled from the town, which is in a most deplorable condition; that Chlorodyne has been found most efficacious as a remedy, and a number of persons are reported to have been saved by its use."

Now as there are various imitations sold under the name of Chlorodyne, containing Indian Hemp, Morphia, &c., ingredients highly adverse to the cure of Cholera, the public are cautioned against the use of any compound under the name of Chlorodyne, unless it bears the name of Dr. J. Collis Browne, who coined the word Chlorodyne to designate his wonderful discovery, which he fully tested for many years in her Majesty's Service before introducing it to the public, the wonderful success of which has given rise to various imitations totally different to genuine Chlorodyne. See the decision of Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood, reported in the Times, July 13th, 1864.

The extraordinary medical reports on the efficacy of Chlorodyne renders it a subject of most vital importance that the public should obtain the genuine, which is now sold under the protection of the Government of Great Britain, authorising a stamp, bearing the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne," without which none is genuine. Sold in bottles, 1s. 1d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d., by all Chemists. Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

COUNSEL AND COMFORT.—A disordered stomach throws the whole system out of gear, and renders us unfit both for work and amusement. A few doses of these strengthening and purifying Pills, taken according to their accompanying directions, will, however, speedily restore order, and re-enable the stomach to digest its food without difficulty. These excellent Pills are suitable alike for the peer and peasant, the soldier and sailor, and particularly for home and foreign colonists. Holloway's Pills are very useful in checking feverish attacks, bilious complaints, and inflammations. They have also made the most signal cures in cases of dropsy, and disease of the kidneys, heart, and lungs, when the sufferers seemed past the reach of medicine.

ENGLISH HOMES IN INDIA.

PART I.—THE THREE LOVES. | PART II.—THE WRONG TURNING.

PUBLISHERS' NOTICE.

The writer of these volumes—an accomplished member of a family whose name is conspicuous in Indian story—being now resident in India, they have not had the benefit of her final corrections. It is hoped, however, that this inevitable drawback will detract but little from the pleasure to be afforded by the perusal of the tales, which are, indeed, what they profess to be, stories of English Homes in India, represented as such homes are in different parts of the country and under various social and professional aspects. They endeavour fairly and without exaggeration to illustrate Anglo-Indian life as it is, in its many varying phases, and to bring upon the scene, in their everyday costume, many kinds of Anglo-Indian workmen, from the Resident at a Native Court, to the subaltern officer and the railway employé; and it is believed that all who have visited the countries described will recognise the truth of the portraiture.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, April 17; Agra and Calcutta, April 13; Madras, April 12.

The Umballa spectacle is fairly over. On the 5th of April both camps were broken up; the Ameer wending his way back to Kabul, while Lord Mayo started for the Dhoon and Simlah, at which last place he arrived, we hear, by the middle of the month. About the same date Shere Ali had probably reached Jumrood. The troops who had mustered at Umballa in his honour were marching back to their several stations, in good time, we hope, to escape the perils of cholera, which has already begun its ravages at Allahabad, Jubbulpore, and some other places. During his short stay in the Dhoon Lord Mayo has enjoyed his first tiger-hunt in the neighbourhood of Hurdwar. It is reported that Major Pollock, Commissioner of Peshawar, will take up his post as political agent at Herat, Dr. Thornton replacing him at Peshawar. The report however needs confirming. It is much more likely that one of the Chamberlains will proceed on a special mission to Kabul.

We have nothing particular to add on the subject of the arrangements concluded between the Viceroy and the Ameer, except that the former has in no way committed his Government to any entangling alliance with the latter. Shere Ali has been made, we believe, to understand that we have no idea of backing him against the world, however readily we may acknowledge him as the rightful and actual ruler of Afghanistan. Help in money we are willing to give him on due conditions, and any amount of moral support; but Lord Mayo has taken care to show him that it is he who has most to gain from the maintenance of a good understanding with the Indian Government. According to one account the Ameer is perfectly satisfied with the final recognition of his right to rule Afghanistan under any circumstances short of a national uprising against his throne; and if that be so, we have no need to grumble at a result which commits us to nothing more definite, while it has already strengthened the Ameer's hands against his enemies. In the province of Balkh his power seems to be virtually re-established. If so he will be all the sooner free to turn his attention to Seistan, whither Azim Khan and his nephew are said to have found their way in hopes of shelter and aid from the encroaching Shah of Persia. If that ruler be really causing trouble on the side of Seistan, the mission of an English officer to Herat may be a not unlikely event by way of warning to all whom it may concern.

THE Maharajah of Jeypore has been rewarded for his zealous co-operation with Colonel Keatinge during the late famine in Rajpootana, by the addition of two guns to the number of his salute; such being the manner in which the Indian Government proposed to mark their sense of his "self-sacrificing efforts to mitigate the sufferings of his afflicted fellow-creatures." According to Colonel Keatinge, the beneficial results of those efforts "cannot be stated in rupees, but will be balanced by countless saving of human life and human misery." The wording here is rather faulty, but the meaning is clear enough; and there can be no doubt of the pleasure which most native princes derive from an honour so easily bestowed.

ON the 1st of April the Contagious Diseases Act was put in force throughout Calcutta, where its beneficial working ought soon to make itself felt. Some difficulty will be found at first in classifying the proper subjects of the new treatment and in checking the oppressive tendencies of the police. In Madras, for instance, the Bayadere class claimed exemption from the working of the Act on the ground of their connection with the Hindu temples. Their claim however was disallowed, and three-fourths of them had to be taken into the Lock Hospitals. In the military stations the Act has already worked wonders.

THE Bombay papers are pleased to believe that one hated institution will speedily disappear from their capital. They have learned, "from a source which admits of no question," that the Secretary of State insists on the removal of the Bengal Bank agency from Bombay. We hope that the Duke of Argyll will not be baffled in his attempt to hold the balance fair between the rival banks. It does seem absurdly unfair to keep one bank going in Bombay under Government support, and then help to hinder its fair development by sanctioning the encroachments of a rival likewise supported by the Government, and always sure of a good business in its proper sphere. Let the Bank of Bombay have a fair field for proving its right to exist, or else ignore it altogether as a semi-official institution.

WHO is to succeed Mr. Maine when he retires a few months hence? This question is exercising the minds of Indian journalists just now. Mr. Cowie, Advocate-general of Bengal, and Mr. J. B. Norton, of the Madras bar, are among the Anglo-Indian candidates for the post. Both have strong credentials and many friends. In other quarters are whispered the names of Mr. Hobhouse—who had the refusal of Mr. Maine's appointment before—Mr. Denman, M.P. for Tiverton, and Mr. Gibbs. The first two we know; but who is Mr. Gibbs?—ask the journalists of India. He was once tutor to the Prince of Wales, and is now, we believe, on the Northern Circuit. Mr. Fitz-james Stephen would be the right man to succeed the present law-member, if he would care to go out to India. But it is early yet to speculate on what may happen six months hence. The appointment will henceforth rest with the Crown.

THE Report of the Bhoze Ghat Inquiry Commission explodes the theory about heavy dew, and ascribes the accident to "mismanagement of the brakes and engine by the persons in charge of the train, combined with an inefficient and insufficient application of sand to the rails." The Government sees no reason for introducing the central rail principle on this dangerous incline, but would have some change made in the present reversing station, which is much too short. It is said that Lord Mayo means mischief with regard to the present system of railway management, which is not sufficiently under Government control.

ABOUT thirty years ago a message from Umballa to England would have taken four or five months to deliver. Now it can be delivered in about twice as many hours. Not the least of the marvels that Shere Ali will have to retail to his friends at home will be connected with the feats performed by the "Lightning-post" of the Feringhies. Before leaving Umballa he telegraphed to the Queen of England his thanks for the kind reception he had received within her dominions from the Viceroy and other high officers. It was not long before he received a telegram in return from her Majesty, which expressed in gracious terms her satisfaction at the Ameer's good report.

THE Competition-Wallahs in the Indian Civil Services have not fared badly on the whole since the first of their number set foot in India. Of the eleven who head the list the length of Indian service on the 1st January last ranges from ten years and a quarter to twelve years and a quarter. The lowest salary drawn by any of them amounts to £1,599 a-year, while the highest reaches £3,300. The remainder, with only one exception, range from two to three thousand a-year. The youngest servant in point of standing draws £2,290 as Officiating Magistrate of the First Grade. Another, a few months senior, is Deputy Commissioner of the Second Class, with a salary of £2,000. A third, counting only ten years eight months of actual service, is drawing £2,640 a-year as Officiating Legal Remembrancer. One of the seniors is Secretary to the Punjab Government, another is Registrar of the High Court, a third is or was officiating for the second time as Foreign Secretary, and a fourth is First Assistant to the Resident of Hyderabad. Six of these gentlemen add B.A. or M.A. to their names, and a seventh is D.C.L. Appointments of this kind, worth roundly from two to three thousand a-year, are not bad prizes to win after a service of ten or eleven years, and the winning of them goes far to prove the general capacity of the men thus successful, and of their younger brethren in the same Service. Nor is any fault to be found with the physical condition of the average competitor. Of the candidates examined by Dr. Gull 295 had thoroughly healthy, well-grown frames, 121 were moderately strong, and only fifty-two "inclined to be weak." The mean height exceeded five feet nine inches. Their health was actually better after the second than on the first examination. In fact Dr. Gull cannot help perceiving that "superior physical health and strength are generally essential to success in these competitive examinations." All this must be especially gratifying to those who from the first took a fair measure of the competitive principle, neither overrating its capabilities, nor misdoubting the preponderance of good contained in it. The system itself will continue to bear improving for some time to come. A careful watch must be kept on all attempts to make mere cramming pass for sound preparation. It would hardly however be fair to restrict the competition, as some propose, to youths who have passed a certain time at some public school or college. The same end would probably be better answered by an extension of the principle which Dr. Temple has begun to apply at Harrow. Let the other public schools follow his example by establishing a modern department for boys destined to compete for the civil and military services, and the worst forms of cramming would tend indirectly to die out.

OF the fifty successful candidates at the last examination it will be noticed that four are natives of India, the first of their race, with only one exception, who have hitherto won that distinction. Mr. Romesh Chunder Dutt, who took the highest marks in Sanskrit and passed second in English, stands third on the final list. Behari Lal Gupta comes out fourteenth, with high marks for Sanskrit and the third place for moral science. Surendra N. Banerjee, another Hindoo, stands thirty-eighth, and a Parsee from Bombay, Sripad Babaji Takoor, thirty-ninth among the successful fifty. We shall be curious to hear how these gentlemen acquit themselves ten or twelve years hence, how far their riper years will have borne out the promise of their youth. Young India is on its trial in their persons.

To judge by some passages in a speech lately delivered in the Spanish Cortes, the statesmen of Spain do not appear to have brought their readings in British-Indian history down to a very recent date. In upholding the duty of maintaining the State Church of his country as the only one by which Spaniards could hope to be saved, Canon Manterola pointed his arguments with a picture of the dreadful results that might happen if a system of free worship came to be adopted in Spain. "Thirty thousand widows are even now in British-India allowed to immolate themselves on the funeral piles of their dead husbands—a part of the religion of the Hindoos. If Hindoos came to Spain under a freedom of worship constitution, they would have to be allowed liberty to follow this and other barbarous practices of their creed." That would be very shocking, no doubt, and no door must be left open for such a possibility. As regards Spain, however, the Canon may set his mind at rest. No influx of Hindoos is likely to put Spanish tolerance to so sore a trial for some ages to come. For us Englishmen, however, there remains the agreeable prospect of seeing Hindoo widows burnt alive under the sanctions of English law. Perhaps at this moment some blooming young widow is mounting the funeral pile somewhere in England, unhindered of horror-stricken bystanders. In India, at any rate, according to Canon Manterola, we allow ladies to roast themselves to death at the rate of thirty thousand a-year. Really the Indian Government ought to look to this matter. Our histories indeed tell us of a certain Lord William Bentinck who put down suttee by making it criminal, and of late years the stories of suttee that have crept into Indian papers have been wonderfully few and far between. But history, as every one knows, has a strong family likeness to fable, and as for the papers informed by people on the spot, how can their knowledge of passing events in India be compared with that of a Spanish senator engaged in governing a country thousands of miles off? Besides the Canon's statement is entirely true to his logic. In the toleration of suttee he discerns the logical sequence to any system that tolerates freedom of worship for all alike. If the facts will not fit into the Canon's logic, by all means let us give up the facts. Is it not clear that the Canon must be right, that Lord W. Bentinck was a myth, and that suttee still counts her victims by tens of thousands?

ON Tuesday evening the Duke and Duchess of Argyll were to entertain at the India Office a pretty large party of guests, including a good many Anglo-Indians of both services, in honour of the Nawab of Bengal and his sons. As there was to be a Drawing-room held the same day, some of its lustre would doubtless be reflected in the evening gathering.

DR. HALL has really resigned his librarianship at last. Among the names of persons qualified to succeed him are those of Dr. Badger, Dr. Goldstücker, and Professor Rost, all gentlemen of known scholarship, between whom it would be difficult to choose, if a genuine knowledge of Oriental language and literature count for much in a post once honoured by the presence of Professor Wilson.

WE are glad to see that the Inns of Court have resolved to give gentlemen from India a fair chance of becoming barristers on reasonable terms, by decreeing the appointment of a Reader on Hindu, Mohammedan, and Indian Law, who will have to examine candidates for the Indian bar.

JUSTICE IN A FOG.

THE more we look into the case of those retired Bengal civilians who claim reimbursement of their excess subscriptions to the Annuity-fund, the greater becomes our amazement at the lines of argument pursued to their undoing by the several judges who have hitherto sat upon their case. It has already been shown that the East India Company engaged to sell to each retiring civil servant, otherwise qualified, a pension of £1,000 a-year for half its value "and no more." Any shadow of doubt as to the meaning of those words was removed by the letter from the Court of Directors in 1841, sanctioning the refund of payments "beyond the half value of the annuity" as being "in accordance with the regulations of the Fund." In accordance with those very rules several members of the Madras Civil Service had been reimbursed the amount of their surplus contributions to the Madras Fund, before a special clause was added in 1838 to the rules of their Presidency, in explanation of the principle involved in the despatch of 1824. In accordance with the same principle a member of the Penang Civil Service, retiring in 1859, received back the whole of his over-payments to the Penang Fund.

But our English judges are not content either to construe the words of the original compact according to their natural meaning, or to accept the construction repeatedly placed on those words by the Court of Directors themselves. They, one and all, go carefully out of their way in search of interpretations whose only merit consists in their extreme subtlety. Even in their decision on the case of Mr. Robertson, appealed from Madras to England, the Privy Council, overlooking the plain tenor of the despatch of 1841, confirmed the judgment of Sir C. Rawlinson, on the ground that the Company had "authorised" the Madras managers to "continue the rule as to refund as part of their rules," and thus "precluded" themselves from disputing the point at issue in the case of Madras annuitants. What the Company had really done was not to sanction any special change of rules in one Presidency, but more explicitly to reaffirm the implicit meaning of an old rule laid down for all the Presidencies alike. This plain fact the Privy Council seem to have utterly ignored or else strangely misconstrued. That it was misconstrued by Lord Westbury seems clear enough from his very inaccurate remark that the insertion of the rule regarding refunds at Madras was a measure voted by the subscribers themselves and afterwards sanctioned by the Court of Directors; the truth being, as Mr. Boulderson reminds us in the pamphlet on which we commented a fortnight ago, that the Managers inserted it of themselves, as a necessary deduction from the original compact between the Company and the Civil Services of all India, a deduction formally admitted by the Company itself.

But the process of misconstruction begins with the Master of the Rolls in 1858, himself perhaps misled by the decision of a Calcutta judge in 1852. The former could not see why, if a refund of over-payments had been contemplated by the parties concerned, the subscribers' contributions should not have ceased whenever the subscriber had contributed half the maximum value of his annuity, that value becoming less and less as his years advanced. Lord Campbell in 1860 was afflicted by a similar blindness. And yet the reason seems to us clear as noonday. Had such a subscriber ceased paying towards the Fund at the age, let us say, of 45, he would still after five or six years' further service have been free to claim the difference between the value of his annuity at 45 and its value at 50 or 51. Moreover, by the terms of the original compact, he was bound to "contribute during the full period of his service" at the rate of four per cent. on his yearly allowances, with the risk of forfeiting the whole of his subscriptions by death or premature retirement, much as any subscriber to an Indian Military Fund gained nothing in return for his past subscriptions if he died or left the service unmarried.

But what possible reason, asks the Master of the Rolls, "can be suggested for depriving of the whole excess of his subscriptions the estate of the civil servant who has notified his intention to retire and accept the annuity, but who dies the day before he retires; and yet paying that excess to the executors of the civil servant exactly similarly situated, but who happens to live two days longer?" No reason at all except the patent one that so it was ordained by the rules and essential principle of the Annuity Fund. A subscriber had to take his chance of living or dying. It was a kind of lottery, in which all ran the same kind of risks, and the strongest or the luckiest drew the prizes. It is open to any one to demur to the fairness of such conditions, but in view of the rules on which these Funds were actually worked the question of the Master of the Rolls becomes a mere impertinence.

Lord Chancellor Campbell again cannot understand the omission from the despatch of 1841 of special arrangements for a refund of over-payments, if such refund was ever contemplated, seeing that special provision was made for the payment of sums needed to make up the half-value of the annuity claimed. In face of the plain words declaring that a servant, on becoming an annuitant, should "pay half the value of his annuity and no more," we are bound to admire his Lordship's cleverness in stumbling over imaginary fences. For the case of payments under the required amount separate provision had of course to be made, while those in excess were already provided for by the words just quoted.

Is it possible that a mind long fed on legal subtleties loses its power of comprehending vulgar English? How else may we account for the fact that not only Lord Campbell in 1860, but the Lords of the Privy Council in 1865, indulged in a flight of special pleading pardonable only to suitors and their advocates? Lords Westbury, Chelmsford, and Cranworth alike conclude that because a distinct provision was made in set terms for the case of payments falling short of the mark, while no such provision was made in like manner for any excess of payments to the same end, therefore it was never meant that the over-payments should in any case be refunded. Such is the pith and purport of the decrees hitherto pronounced in flat defiance of the Company's written and oft repeated promise to sell their annuities for "half their value and no more." It would hardly be less wise to argue that subscribers who had paid less than their proper quota should not be required to make up the difference, because nothing had been said about the refund of payments in excess of that quota.

In complaining of the obscurity of the Despatch of 1841, these learned judges must surely have been "blinded by excess of light," for nothing can be clearer than the words we have so often quoted, or the context in which they appear. The directors proposed that "to maintain strict equality, the amount of the purchase money should depend upon the value of the annuity," regulated by the age of the annuitants according to a certain scale; the proportion of purchase-money being "fixed at one half the value of the annuity." In this way "all servants becoming annuitants will pay half the value of their respective annuities and no more, and will so far be placed upon an equal footing." Is there any obscurity here? Can any one not a lawyer help seeing that the words "strict equality" and "equal footing" refer alike to the "fixed proportion" of purchase money, the "half value and no more" which every annuitant would have to make good? But Lord Campbell flounders on from one false reading to another. The darkness which hid from him the plain meaning of the words "and no more," covers him with its deepest veil as he talks about strict equality meaning "the equality of potentialities to all the subscribers; not that . . . every subscriber should have exactly an equal pecuniary advantage!" In this way did his lordship interpret the words in question, as some people interpret dreams, by their exact contraries. And Lord Cranworth follows suit, being "satisfied that the equality contemplated was an equality in the value of the thing purchased, and not in the amount of the purchase-money," as if it were all one whether a subscriber paid half or three times the value of his retiring pension. Nor is Lord Chelmsford a whit less bemuddled, when he asks what possible grounds there are for contending that the Company meant "to produce a different kind of equality from that which they expressed, by providing for a refund of payments beyond what was needed for buying the annuities?" He too sees in the Despatch of December, 1824, "nothing whatever of the character of a contract" between the Court of Directors and their civil servants. As for the passage fixing the liability of each servant at half the value of his annuity, his Lordship regards it as "a mere statement of the necessary result of the previous calculations, and that it can bind the Company to nothing!" To tell an old customer that you have agreed to sell him a certain article at a certain price, and no more, is therefore to make a mere statement, which binds you to nothing if the other party accept your offer.

It is amusing to hear so high an authority contradict himself. Having scouted the notion of an equality based on the amount of money paid to secure a pension, his Lordship asks "how are the annuitants to be placed on an equal footing except by each of them paying only one-half the value of the annuity, whatever the amount of that one half may be?" Just so. For one moment his Lordship hit upon the truth, but the mists of sophistication very soon led him astray again, and his last state proved worse than the first. Lord Westbury also has a very dim conception of the case put forward by the claimants to refund, for he describes them as admitting that every civil servant was bound to contribute to the Fund during the whole period of his service, and yet maintaining that "in no case should any subscriber contribute more than one-half the value of his annuity." Of course, the contradiction here was of his own making. He too interprets the words "half value and no more" as referring only to the case of one whose payments fell short of the required amount, although the context happens to contain not one word of reference direct or implied to that part of the arrangement. He too stumbles on the truth when he declares that "the amount standing to a subscriber's credit being more than half the value of the annuity is nowhere dealt with except by the fundamental rule of the Fund;" but here again the mist prevents him from discerning that fundamental rule in the words "All servants becoming annuitants will pay half the value of their respective annuities and no more."

If this is the way in which judges of acknowledged eminence can play ducks and drakes with the manifest meaning of a few sentences of intelligible English, can any one be surprised at the prevalence of litigation in our courts, and the readiness with which a vast number of disputants take their chance of being helped to shirk their just liabilities by the glorious uncertainties and contradictions of our law? To the specimens of judicial blundering already given we might add many more, such as the misconstruction placed by the Privy Council on the letter from the Bengal managers in 1843 which referred only to the claims of members still in the service, and the utter misconception of what took place the year before in Bengal, with regard to a new scheme for benefitting subscribers who had not paid up the half value of their annuities. But enough has been adduced to show that justice in high places sometimes nods in a manner incomprehensible by ordinary mortals.

Notices of Books.

Mémoire sur les Particularités de la Religion Musulmane dans l'Inde, d'après les ouvrages Hindustanis. Par M. Garcin de Tassy. (Second Edition). Paris: A. Lafitte. 1869.

We are glad to see that M. de Tassy's instructive little volume on the peculiarities of Mohammedanism in India has reached its second edition. The author has long since made himself known as one of the leading Orientalists in his own country; and the present work, carefully compiled from the writings of the best native authorities, brings together a good deal of information hitherto scattered over a wide and little explored area. M. de Tassy complains of the scant attention paid by travellers and students to Mohammedan rites and practices in India, as compared with the interest shown in all that relates to the Hindu religion. His attempt to atone for past neglect has been eminently successful. Whoever wants to know all about Hassan and Husain, the difference between Suni and Sheeah, the name, meaning, and characteristics of the various fasts and feasts in Mohammedan India, the extent to which Hinduism has modified the character of the rival creed, and the lives of eminent Mussulman saints, may derive much profit from this very useful book. It is specially interesting for its illustrations of the change produced by the continual contact of two religions, the one gradually imparting some of its own peculiarities to the other. Thus the Tazya or mourning for Husain has borrowed some of its main features from the Doorga Poojah of the Hindoos, both festivals lasting ten days, and both ending in a procession to the river side, and the casting of a sacred emblem into the water. Some of the saints to whose tombs the Mohammedans make pilgrimages were Hindoos, not Mussulmans, just as the Roman Church worships not a few pagan deities under Christian names. M. de Tassy might have added some instances which would occur to any Anglo-Indian, of the extent to which caste-superstitions have overlain and corrupted the simpler practices and doctrines of the original Islam. In many parts of India Mohammedanism has come to be little more than Hinduism in disguise, and nowhere perhaps can it claim to be other than a mongrel creed, at least in matters of ritual and social usage.

The British Quarterly Review for April, 1869. London: Hodder and Stoughton.

Among a number of very good papers in the last British Quarterly is one which more especially falls under the notice of a journal for Anglo-Indians. We refer to the article on "The Brahmo Somaj of India," a full and interesting account of the rise and progress of a new Hindoo revolt from the old Brahmin orthodoxy. It is not forty years since the enlightened Rammohun Roy first formally founded the sect of which Debendranath Tagore and Keshub Chunder Sen have become the latest leaders. The Brahmo Somaj stands to the popular Brahminism in much the same relation as English and American Theism stands to the popular Christianity. Its numerical strength at present is not great—about two thousand, thinks the reviewer; but behind these move several hundred thousand educated natives who have practically forsworn the popular creed, and for whom remains only the choice between a purified Theistic Vedantism and some form of modern Christianity. The reviewer inclines to the latter conclusion, but we are not inclined, as things stand, to agree with him. Nor does he make due allowance for the tremendous force of existing social usages in keeping the Brahmoists from breaking at once and altogether with the friends of orthodox Hinduism. The early Christians themselves were slow to accept the practical issues of the movement which ended in an utter breach between Judaism and Christianity.

THE BEZOOTIE TRIBES.

The Englishman admits that to superficial observers the outcome of Colonel Keyes' counter raid against the allies of the Bezooties would seem to have been unfortunate. It is true a British force penetrated the hills and succeeded in setting fire to a village; but the mountaineers gathered in force, and hung on the skirts of the column when it retired, as long as there seemed to be any chance of doing it hurt. To those who knew the frontier, however, the fact that the purdah of the Othman Kheyl had been lifted, that this clan had been made to feel it was not beyond the reach of the Kohat force, was worth more than any amount of negotiation between the Deputy Commissioner and the Jiagahs of the tribes. The telegram published in another place would seem to indicate that these views were right, and that the tribes, rudely dispossessed of the notion that they were secure from reprisals, have at last determined to make peace. It may be, too, that the vigour shown in the conduct of the raid has not been without its effect on the whole of the Afreedi tribe. The tribe, as a whole, has shown a strong disposition to lend its offending sections countenance and support. It is just possible that Colonel Keyes' attack may have convinced them that to persist in such a course would be to provoke an immediate contest with an enemy who had shown himself bold, secret, and daring, and that impressed with this view the tribe has caused it to be intimated to the Bezootie, Othman Kheyl, and Sepah clans that submission to the British was the only course open to them. The submission of these tribes will render the frontier absolutely quiet for a time.

THE REJECTED RETIRING SCHEMES.

The Madras Times observes that it has been officially announced in Parliament that the plans proposed by Colonel Norman and Col. Broome have been rejected by Government. This statement will cause no little disappointment to senior members of the military service. They have so often been assured that one or other of the schemes must certainly be accepted, that they may be pardoned perhaps for having counted their chickens before they were hatched, and depended upon enjoying advantages to which the present regulations do not entitle them. So, our officers are all to be allowed to bloom into major-generals, if they can only manage to live long enough. In the interests of the public service it is perhaps not to be regretted that these schemes have been rejected. They were at the best but clumsy expedients for alleviating an evil that ought to be dealt with fundamentally. To bribe men with public money to leave the public service does not seem a healthy sort of thing to do, and we are convinced that the refusal of the Government to use the expedient will compel them ere long to deal radically with the construction of the staff corps. A stream that is dammed up at the lower end will ultimately overflow its banks, however slowly the springs at the head may flow; and in a very few years the financial burden of a staff corps from which no one ever retires will become intolerable. Unless something be done to alter the present system of admission to the staff corps its efficiency will diminish just in proportion as its costliness increases. At present young men cannot be induced to enter, and, as we showed some time ago, the present number of field officers equals the present number of company officers. If the system is to be continued, the authorities will have to solve the problem of how an army is to be officered without subalterns or even captains; for in a few years at the present rate there will be half a dozen field officers to each company officer in the staff corps. It is now announced in Parliament that while Government has rejected the bonus schemes "the Council of India contemplates a reduction in the charge for unemployed field officers in India." We shall be much interested, as the unemployed field officers certainly will be, to hear how it is proposed to effect this reduction. It is difficult to see how any such reduction is to be effected, unless by offering senior officers sufficient inducement to cause them to retire. We of course speak of the present field officers who have a covenant with the Government, for schemes of compulsory retirement applicable to others cannot be justly applied to them, unless ample compensation be given. We shall hear by-and-by how this feat is to be accomplished.

THE ASIAN MYSTERY.

The Indian Daily News thinks that it may be the "mission" of Russia to sweep away and supersede the effete States of Central Asia, just as it has been ours to do with those of Hindustan, and to establish in their stead a more civilised and a more responsible Government. For if we take the advice of Dr. Johnson, and we shall find much the same process going on. The inferior civilisations of the earth are being subdued by the superior; and we have no doubt that the process will continue, no matter by whom the agency is carried on. The Iroquois and the Chocktoo are disappearing before Brother Jonathan, and to all appearance no power on earth can save them from the fate of extinction. The aborigines of Australia will in like manner disappear before the Anglo-Saxon, just as the Maori is fated to perish from New Zealand before the same influence. Central Asia is no exception to the law. It is submission or extinction before the wave of superior civilisation, be that wave one from Russia or England, or America acting from the north-east. There should be no jealousy and no fear as regards England and Russia on the Asiatic Continent. Russia as a European Power must act up to the standard of European civilisation. She cannot have a policy of good faith in Europe, and one of treachery in Asia, where she comes in contact with European Powers; and it will be incumbent upon her to act in Asia with the same good faith that must regulate her policy in Europe, if she is to hold her place in the family of nations. Unless she can manifest a power and civilisation in Asia superior to that which we are prepared to offer, there must be a limit to her progress, and that limit will be her contact with the civilisation and good faith that she will meet in the representatives of England on the Himalayas. It is mere folly to doubt our own strength or the force of the moral principles we represent; just as it would be folly to rush headlong into a strife with an advancing power that is displacing effete governments, and superseding forms of civilisation similar in spirit and tendency to those we have ourselves swept away under an irresistible necessity. When Russia and England come in contact in Asia, one advancing from the south and the other from the north, they must find some other method of reconciliation than that of mutual destruction, which would necessitate that each should abandon the labour of centuries, and sink to the level of the Governments that they had each displaced. We are most afraid that the follies of imaginative scribes may commit us to action without wisdom, and lead to jealousies that nothing in the position of the two countries would for a moment warrant. So long as England and Russia value peace in Europe there is not much fear of their breaking it in Asia, except under the inspiration of that folly of the imagination that cannot be too strongly deprecated.

"Survey mankind with an extensive view O'er all the earth from China to Peru,"

THE LOSHAIS.

The Friend of India comments on the supposition that the frequent raids committed by the hill tribes around Sylhet and Cachar are occasioned by a sort of restless passion exciting the savages to action; or a kind of undefined thirst for plunder, rousing them to take up arms against their wealthier neighbours. This view is not only unfounded but senseless. It is worthy, perhaps, of timid Bengali villagers, but not of the ruling race, whose leading attribute is precisely the same as that of these hill tribes—the love of liberty and independence. In every case of a raid by the tribes of the Eastern Hills, which persons acquainted with the dialects and customs of the people have been able to trace to its origin, a definite cause, or collection of causes, has always been discovered. Nor is there any reason to suppose that a small group of savages so passionately fond of their independence would be more ready to raise the war whoop, and rush to arms and to danger, than a civilised nation would be. The principal difference is, the limited knowledge, the confined range of thought, and the prominence of passion over intellect in the case of the former. The most fertile cause of these raids is, undoubtedly, the internal family feuds among the chieftains and the tribes themselves. The stronger party frequently robs the weaker one of its rights and territories; and the latter attacks its neighbours either with a view to recoup itself, or because the war spirit is already moving society. An instance of this is seen in Manipore. In some cases where slavery and slave markets prevail amongst the tribes, lust of gain by the sale of slaves gives rise to sudden raids into the territories of inoffensive neighbours. But this cause cannot be said to exist among the Looshais, Kojacks, Kookies, Nagas, Koupoies, nor any tribe on our border from Agurtoah in Tripura to the Borail range. Amongst the Sindos on the Koladyne river, and other hill tribes bordering on Burmah, slavery exists as a system. Another cause of disturbances among the hill men is the hostility between one tribe and another. When the weaker is oppressed by the stronger, the former not unfrequently rushes into the territories of a peaceful neighbour, just as an inferior wild beast rushes into a human abode to escape the more powerful neighbour of his forests. Such was the case in 1848-9 when the Kookie tribe burst into Cachar and Sylhet to avoid the more powerful Looshais. Such, also, in some measure, is the case with the Looshais at present. They are driven northward by the formidable tribe of the Sindos, Shindoos or Shamdoos, which is itself pressed northward by other tribes from the sources of the Koladyne to the northern hills. The Looshai chieftains say, whether rightly or wrongly, that the Sindos get fire-arms from Burmah, and that the British forbid them to keep any; hence the conquests by the former.

STATION TALK.

UMBALLA, April 6.—I was fortunate enough a few days ago to have a private interview with the Ameer. I was first of all shown into the drawing-room, but had not to wait long before a long robed man, a little over the middle height, entered the apartment, laughing heartily at something which had been said to him by one of the British officers attached to his suite. On being presented to him he shook hands with me, sat down to have his portrait taken, and then motioned me into a chair at his side. After a pause he put in Oordoo the usual routine question regarding my health, to which I gave the routine reply. He then made a remark about the shell practice of the Artillery which had taken place that morning, on which I took the opportunity of telling him, through the interpreter, that the chestnut troop, whose performances he had a few hours before witnessed, had years gone by achieved a feat unexampled in war. I then related the story, which is one of the most brilliant passages in Napier's brilliant history; how Norman Ramsay at Fuentes d'Onor, when surrounded by French cavalry, had cut his way through without losing a gun, though quite unprovided with escort. He seemed to take an interest in the tale, but displayed a most amusing and ingenious perversity in trying to prove that Norman Ramsay ought to have adopted some other means for securing the safety of his guns. The discussion between us became at last quite warm, though carried on with the greatest good humour. At last, changing the conversation, I asked him if he liked the Highland pipes. He replied in the affirmative, saying that in his country there were instruments of similar nature, but somewhat different in structure. I then said I supposed he had seen the 92nd Highlanders dance the sword dance at Jullundhur. He replied that he had, but did not much care about it, adding that nautch girls were the only real dancers. Post is close at hand, so I must finish the account of my visit in my next letter. The Lieut.-Governor of the Punjab leaves for Lahore to-morrow.

April 7.—In continuation of my letter of yesterday I now proceed to finish the account of my visit to the Ameer. Whilst I was talking to him he was sitting for his portrait in oils, the artist being a Mr. Landseer, nephew of Mr. Landseer. Nothing could exceed the interest taken by the Ameer in the progress of the work. Every two minutes he jumped up and went to the easel to see how Mr. Landseer was getting on. At length, with a view to keeping him quiet, Mr. Landseer produced a portfolio of chalk drawings of scenes in the Himalayas. These struck his fancy very much, and at the sight of several he exclaimed in tones of great admiration, "Werry good, werry good, shahbash, shahbash." Even these drawings, however, failed to keep the Ameer quiet, and he had frequently recourse to pinches of snuff to dispel the fidgettiness by which he was impressed. In the midst of the sitting an attendant brought in a wide-awake, which the Ameer put on his head with the most amusing complacency. I am told that he has carried his admiration of British, or rather Anglo-Indian head-dresses to such an extent that he has ordered several solah topies or sun hats. At length a tray of teacups full of tea, apparently Russian caravan tea, without milk, was brought in. This beverage would have been excellent had it not been most inordinately sweetened. Tea over, permission to depart was asked in the usual formula, and, with a cordial shake of the hand from the Ameer, I took leave of this certainly remarkable man. My impression of him was decidedly favourable. There is a soldier-like frankness never degenerating into roughness, and an amount of bonhomie tempered by a sense of his dignity which are very pleasing. The Ameer seems to have thoroughly enjoyed his visit, and I doubt whether he has ever been so happy before in all his life. His shrewdness in all matters is remarkable, especially in military matters. Our manoeuvres at the different field days he criticised in the most searching manner, and displayed considerable knowledge of tactics. The 40th N.I., the last of the regiments brought here for the Durbar camp, left here by train for Agra at seven A.M. The tents of the Commander-in-Chief's and Viceroy's camps have been nearly all struck and packed, and the plain, lately so studded with tents, now looks quite bare. It was full time that the camp should be broken up, for the heat has increased perceptibly during the last few days, and cholera is always to be dreaded when large bodies of men are collected at this time of the year. I mentioned in one of my previous letters that a bearer of an officer of the Governor General's camp had been attacked by cholera, but did not succumb to the disease. I have since learnt from the best authority that a native, employed in the printing establishment of the Commander-in-Chief's camp, died at Kussowlie, on the 4th, of a disease strongly suspected to have been cholera. I have since been informed that cholera has broken out among the Artillery at Morar, and that several cases have also occurred at Lucknow. God grant that we may escape a visitation of the dread disease here! I am in great hopes that we shall, for every sanitary precaution has been taken. The sites of all the camps occupied during the durbar have been ordered to be ploughed up, all filth is to be collected and burnt, and quicklime is to be thrown over all the latrine trenches, which are to

UMRITSUR, April 7.—It was the general impression that we had seen the last of the Ameer of Cabul, and that he would pass on to Lahore without stopping, but whether he wished to show his appreciation of his reception here, or desired to make some purchases here, he changed his mind, and word was passed that he would arrive here on the forenoon of the 6th, and halt the whole of to-day. He came in by special train a little before eleven A.M. of yesterday, and was received at the station by Mr. Egerton, Commissioner, and Major Stubbs, commanding the station, Major Birch, Deputy Commissioner, having gone to meet him at Wuzer Ghat. A guard of honour of the 92nd Highlanders was on the platform, and all the "Rajahan, Raeesan and Sirdaran" of the place, drawn up to swell the cortege. A procession was formed of the description as on the former occasion, and proceeded to the house in the town, where his Highness is again to be a guest, as far as the house is concerned, of the members of the Church Mission. It was generally remarked on his Highness's alighting from the railway carriage that the anxious care-charged look he wore on his downward trip had entirely disappeared, and that he returned with the word "khoosh" legibly impressed on his features. He leaves to-morrow (Thursday, the 8th April) morning at six A.M., by special train, and after another day's rest at Lahore resumes his journey towards Peshawar, evidently a happier, and we hope a wiser and truer man than he came. There is a good deal to write about here, but I must defer doing so till to-morrow, having only just time to mention that our Commissioner, Mr. Egerton, leaves very soon on furlough for England.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

MOVEMENTS OF LORD MAYO.—We learn by telegraph that Lord Mayo arrived at Simla on the 15th April.

RESULTS OF COLONEL KEYES'S RAID.—The Deputy-Commissioner of Kohat has reported to the Punjab Government, under date of the 5th April, the complete submission of the Bezootie, Othman Kheyl, and Lufa tribes.

LORD MAYO AND THE CALCUTTA RACES.—It is said that, in addition to the Viceroy's plate of Rs. 1,000 to be run for at the next Calcutta meeting, Lady Mayo will give a Queen's plate of equal value to be run for at the same meeting.

MANUFACTURE OF SNIDERS.—We understand that the Supreme Government have issued instructions for the construction of a Snider ammunition factory at Bombay and another at Madras, according to a plan forwarded.

JUBBULPORE.—We are glad to learn from the Jubbulpore Chronicle that with the exception of that of Lieut.-col. Espinasse there had been no death from cholera or small-pox amongst the European portion of the garrison at that station.

NEWSPAPER POSTAGE.—The Madras Times hears from Calcutta that there is every prospect of the half anna postal rate being conceded to newspapers in India. The Director-general has, we understand, been convinced that the English press in India has as a good right to the concession as the native press.

CASHMERE.—It is said that Lieutenant-Colonel Bristow, Deputy-Commissioner of Jhelum, is to be the Civil Officer "on special duty" in Cashmere this season; Dr. Bellew, lately attached to the suite of the Ameer of Cabul, is designated as medical officer, and the Rev. S. H. Beamish as chaplain.

LORD MAYO ON RAILWAYS.—It is said by a contemporary that the Viceroy has been impressed with the conviction that the system of railway management in this country is not such as to secure all the public advantage and convenience which might be easily attained, and that a somewhat more peremptory intervention on the part of Government is on more than one point urgently called for.

ENCOURAGING.—We are happy to observe that at a recent meeting of the Shahjehanpore British Indian Association the native gentlemen and a number of influential pundits present decided in favour of Hindoos travelling to Europe; they declared such a step not to be contrary to the precepts of the shastras.—Orissa Patriot, April 1.

THE NEW LOAN.—The Government of India is understood to have been anxious to encourage small and bona fide investors to tender for the new Four per Cent. Loan. The rule that a small deposit shall be made in every case is intended to discourage such speculators without capital as those who obtained several lakhs of the Five per Cent. Debenture Loan, on which they soon after made a considerable profit.

QUITE RIGHT.—The Customs Department has been told for the future to leave goods sent by parcel post alone. The Director-General of Post-offices in India has telegraphed to Colonel Pears, Postmaster-General at Madras, stating that the Supreme Government does not approve of the systematic interference by the Customs' authorities in seizing packets sent out from England by the overland post. The Government of India add that they would rather forego the duty leviable upon such packets.

AN UNPLEASANT SURPRISE.—We read in an Umballa letter that when the Ameer left that station by rail one of his retinue, who had stood musing somewhere out of sight when the train was set in motion, was left behind on the platform, "and there he sat on his box gazing after his departed brethren with a look of combined dejection and astonishment."

REPRIEVE BY TELEGRAPH.—Two men were recently sentenced to death by the Judge of Agra, and the sentence was confirmed by the High Court and approved by the Lieutenant-Governor. They then adopted the unusual course of telegraphing an appeal to the Governor-General in Council. A reprieve was thereupon granted by telegraph, and finally, we learn from the Pioneer, the sentence has been commuted to transportation for life!

A MURDEROUS OUTRAGE.—A Brahmin who had been dismissed for laziness by the coffee shop contractor of the 106th Regiment at Umballa managed to obtain permission of the regimental guard to sleep in their room on the night of the 28th. At 11 P. M. he rose, and taking a bayonet from one of the sleeping soldiers, stole over to the centre, where the contractor passed the night; he mortally wounded him, and was escaping, when he was arrested by the sentry. —Indian Public Opinion, April 9.

CIVIL ITEMS.—We learn that Mr. Morris, acting Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces, has determined on taking furlough to Europe on the arrival of Mr. George Campbell, who is expected to return in July next.—Major-general Skinner, C.B., Staff Corps, has, we observe, been appointed to act as Political Resident and Commandant at Aden during Major-general Russell's absence on leave.—Sir Richard Temple returned to Calcutta from Darjeeling on the 11th April, and was to remain there until about the end of the week, and then to proceed to England via Bombay.

SIR SALAR JUNG.—Rumour has it, says the Bangalore Herald, that Sir Salar Jung wishes to resign power, at least for a time. He contemplates visiting Persia, and then it is not improbable that he may proceed to England, visiting Turkey and France on his way. His Highness, we are certain, is sure of a cordial welcome wherever he goes, and as there is no special necessity for the retention of his services by the Government of India, now that the great crisis has passed over quietly, we should not be surprised to hear that he had left Hyderabad on a lengthened tour.

RAJPOOTAINA.—We hear that the efforts of the Agent of Rajpootaina to discover and collect valuable Sanscrit works have been successful. The Pundit whom he deputed on this duty has found 150 rare books in the library of the Rajah of Jodhpoor. Among the literary treasure much is hoped from a History of Ancient India, written about 300 years ago. The list of the books in the Rajah's library has been sent to Europe. Why is not an effort made to recover the many valuable Persian and Arabic treatises that once were familiar in India? Even the books required by Yakub Khush Begi cannot be procured.

FOREST DEPARTMENT.—From the Budget estimates of the Forest Department it appears that in six years the gross revenue has risen from thirty and a-half lakhs in 1863-4 to nearly forty-two lakhs, the estimated gross receipts of the present official year. The charges for the current year are estimated at twenty-eight lakhs, and the surplus or net profits on the working of the department at thirteen and a-half lakhs. It also appears that while the gross revenue has gone on constantly increasing, the charges (especially the item of establishment) have increased in a still greater ratio. Thus in 1864-5 the establishment charge stood a little over seven lakhs; for the current year the estimate is for nearly twelve lakhs. This increase is due to the reorganisation and increase of the establishment.

TIGERS.—The following, says the Indian Daily News, is from the Kurutdeer district:—"On the evening of the 1st, while returning from surveying the jungles in this district, we were suddenly pounced upon by two tigers, evidently male and female. The coolies bolted, taking with them the gun, so that I was compelled to witness the cruel death of a human being, within almost arm's reach, without being able to render the slightest assistance. The second coolie escaped with a severe mauling. As night was fast approaching, we were obliged to put off the chase until next morning, when we found the remains of the unfortunate fellow, some two miles away, nothing remaining but the head and lower part of the trunk. I am sorry to hear that these brutes have, for some time past, been a terror to the district, and, if we can believe native report, have killed several men."

ALLIGATOR SHOOTING.—The Mofussilite has heard from Mooltan that an officer, lately arrived there in the John Jacob, shot on the passage up the Chenab an alligator which measured eighteen feet nine inches from tip of snout to tip of tail, and seven feet in girth. The first shot hit the monster in the snout, and rolled him over—luckily for the sportsman—not into the river, which is usually the case on such occasions, but on the other side of the bank. Two or three hits more rapidly followed in succession, when it was observed the brute ceased to move. The cutter was now despatched by the captain, and the huge carcase dragged to the steamer, and towed to the place of putting to for the night, where it took six men all night to remove the skin, which has been beautifully preserved, and of which the possessor is quite proud as a trophy of his exploit.

LOCK HOSPITALS IN CALCUTTA.—The new Bill for the establishment of Lock Hospitals in Calcutta would appear, says the Englishman, to have created quite a consternation amongst women of a certain class in the northern part of the city. Many have retired to Chandernagore, whilst several of the most notorious have solicited the opinion of the best counsel in town as to the scope and general application of the Bill.

REPORTED ARREST OF MR. W. TAYLER.—It has been reported in Allahabad that Mr. W. Tayler (formerly Commissioner of Patna) has been arrested by order of the Calcutta High Court for writing seditious and defamatory letters published in the Englishman, and that he has been remanded for a week." The telegram added:—"Great excitement prevails." "If," says the Pioneer, "the letters alluded to be those in the Englishman of the 7th and 12th inst., and if the fact be that Mr. Tayler has been abruptly arrested by the High Court, solely in consequence of having written them, we do not wonder at there being excitement. Such an act would naturally seem to every Briton an act of presumptuous tyranny. But we can hardly believe the fact of the arrest; or, if it has been made, it must have been on some other ground than merely that Mr. Tayler challenged and quizzed the decision of a judge of the High Court. Sublime personage as he is, a judge's judgment is no more sacred from fair criticism than any other publication, and well for the purity of justice that it is so."

LORD MAYO'S NEW BROOM.—The Indian Daily News writes:—"We noticed yesterday a movement amongst the dry bones of the Indian Government in sympathy with the activity of the new Ministry at home. There was something said of attempts at economy in the Military Department, while we indicated the possibility of something being done in another quarter. It is said that Earl Mayo contemplates some considerable changes in the Administration. Beginning in high quarters, his Excellency is said to have in contemplation a complete redistribution of work amongst Members of Council and in the Secretariats. It is even possible that there may be something like a Ministry of Public Works, with a special official, whose duty it will be to battle with the 'tyranny' which appalled Mr. Massey. If his Excellency will fix responsibility a little closer, and make highly paid officials do the work they are paid for, we should either hear less of deficits, or have a much more satisfactory return for taxation and expenditure."

SICKNESS IN FURREEDPORE.—It is said that a group of villages in the Furreedpore district, only a few years ago very populous, have actually lost three-fourths of their inhabitants from an endemic disease generated by the density of the jungle which their neglect allowed to grow up around their habitation. The roads are so obstructed by jungle that it is difficult to pass on horseback. The tanks are completely choked up with a rampant growth of monstrous weeds. The villagers suppose that gigantic snakes live in these, which prey on goats and jackals. Wild pigs are so numerous that cultivation even in the immediate precincts of the villages has been abandoned. Under these circumstances the villagers took a step which only despair could drive them to. They spontaneously subscribed Rs. 300, and brought it to the magistrate, begging him to employ it in the best way for mitigating the evils under which they were suffering. Government has added a similar sum, and directed such measures to be taken for ameliorating the condition of the unfortunate villages as the limited means available will permit. —Pioneer.

DEPARTURE OF SHERE ALI.—The date of departure of his Highness the Ameer Shere Ali Khan, of Cabul, from Umballa, which was fixed for Saturday, the 3rd of April, was on the Friday changed to Monday, the 5th, on which day he started, under a ceremonial similar to that observed on his arrival, by train at six in the morning for Kunna-ke-seraie. At this temporary terminus of the Delhi Railway his Highness, who was accompanied by the same officers who brought him down from Peshawur (Major Pollock, Colonel Chamberlain, and Mr. Bellew), took breakfast, and thence pushed on to Phillour, the recollections of Looddeana not being sufficiently pleasant to induce him to halt there. At Phillour a halt was called, luncheon discussed, and the journey resumed to Jullundhur, which station was reached at six P.M., or in twelve hours from Umballa. Here again the same distinguished reception was in store for his Highness as greeted him on his downward progress, and a novelty in the shape of an exhibition of dissolving views provided. They afforded the party immense satisfaction. After leaving Jullundhur station at an early hour on Tuesday morning, the 6th April, the party halted for a cup of tea at the elegant dwelling house of Mr. T. D. Forsyth, in the Civil Lines; thence on to Wuzeer Booler (Beas station), where breakfast was served at nine, and immediately afterwards the party entered a special train and proceeded to Umritsur, where they were again received by the civil and military authorities, and the notables of the town, with much distinction, and conducted to their former residence, the Mission-house in the town, in due procession. The Ameer and party were to halt at Umritsur on Wednesday, the 7th, proceed to Lahore on the 8th, and in all probability halt there also one day. From Lahore the journey would be by the same stages as those assigned for the downward journey, so that his Highness will in all probability reach Jummoo by the 15th or 16th of April.—Delhi Gazette, April 10.

ANOTHER MURDERER CAUGHT.—Another of the suspected murderers of 1857 has (says the Delhi Gazette) been captured, and will shortly be brought to trial in the Agra Sessions Court. It will be remembered that on the 5th of July, 1857, after the Agra garrison had been taken into the Fort, several people, trusting to the fidelity of their servants, or unable to realise the gravity of their position, remained in the station and came to grief. Among them was Major Jacob, an East Indian officer, at one time in the service of the Gwalior State. He, if anybody, had a right to suppose that the disaffected would not harm him; but they did. He was foully murdered, after a gallant defence, in his own house, and by his own servants. His khanasama, a Mawatee, decamped at the time, but had the temerity to return to the station the other day. He was apprehended on a charge of murder, and it is said there is ample evidence to secure his conviction. It is not impossible he will try, if convicted, to obtain a commutation of his sentence by disclosing the names of others implicated in the deed of which he alone at present stands accused.

AN AFGHAN VIEW OF THE VISIT OF THE AMEER SHERE ALI KHAN (taken from the Pioneer).—Azecz (or dear) Brother,—By the beard of the Prophet, I swear these Angreze people are wonderful! Since we reached Peshawur I have been immersed in the sea of wonder, and my intellectual tablet is covered with pictures that can never be obliterated. Everything is so different to Cabul! Where do all these white faces come from? One tribe of these Kafirs are called Hill men, and they play a wonderful musical instrument—a water carrier's bag filled with air! These men do not wear pantalons, because they are poor and cannot afford to get them—even the officers have not got them! The Angreze Government, however, feed these men well, for I never saw such stout legs. Have all the English soldiers such legs? These bare-legged Kafirs were dreadful men in the Sepoy mutiny. We were not quite sure that they would not attack us and steal our pyjamas, but they were very civil. Some say they are the wives of the soldiers who were killed in 1857, but surely their women cannot be so powerful! Allah is great! Oh what a fearful engine they have! It has hundreds of wheels. No horses draw it. It takes in as much water as would do for 500 elephants. Then they make a fire and boil the water. After the water boils it makes a noise that the devil would be afraid of—bbles would be startled to hear that noise. Then a man turns a handle, and the birds of the air cannot go so fast! My heart was shrunk up, and I felt that this was magic. These are "rail glarees," and one of these engines draws two hundred or more carriages. I swear by the Prophet that if five hundred elephants were to draw against these they would be like one cannon behind a single elephant. Then these Kafirs fired cannons every time the "Lord of the Universe" (viz., the Ameer) halted. Then one "Bokkur," or "Bokharu" sahib (not the Russ) took the likeness of the "Embellisher of our Religion" (i.e., the Ameer) by means of the sun. He hides his head and prays for a few seconds, then the sun comes down into a box and prints the picture. No painter (nussavir) could draw like that. Then these Kafirs have the telegraph (tarburkee), which is lightning made up expressly by the Governor-General and put into "jams" (i.e., jars). They send word to London and Calcutta in a few seconds. One karanee (Eurasian Feringhee) told me that when the Lord Sahib's boots are worn they put them on the wire at Calcutta in the morning and the "karigur" (i.e., maker) in London sends out a new pair in half an hour. All their powder and cannon balls come by this iron wire from Englistan. This is why they expend so much powder in salutes. You will say Abdoolah is mad; but Allah knows I write the truth. Their ways are the ways of Ibles (i.e., the Devil). They have guns without ramrods! They do all things in silence—the General Sahib gives an order and there is not a word! All their eyes are as one eye—all legs as one leg. The bird of my imagination begins to drop its feathers from awe. This country is "firdous" (heaven). These Kafirs would not care for the "Rus." They go at thirty koss an hour. They could demolish the Khyber Pass by taking the Railway on the lightning wires. All they have to do is to hook up their Lord Sahib, Commander-in-Chief and regiments to these wires; and, after having taken their morning repast at Peshawur, the lightning would land them in Cabul half an hour after. Oh! Allah is great, and the dark deeds of "Shitan" are as nothing. I shall go to Mecca on my return to Cabul. I will shave off the hair of ignorance, and deposit myself in the corner of retirement for ever after, because Sadi has said—"There is much profit to be had on the ocean of life, but those who desire contentment must keep to the shore." I am now floating on the ocean of astonishment. Allah grant that the "bird of my reason" may not entirely leave its nest with mere addled eggs. God is our Hafiz (i.e., protector).—ABDOOLAH.

VILLAGE FORTS.—Village forts in the Madras Presidency are doomed. A mandate has gone forth from the Board of Revenue for their demolition. "We have given up fighting in Southern India," writes the Madras Athenæum, "and the strongholds, so famous in history, have descended to very vile uses. The sooner, therefore, they are razed to the ground the better perhaps it will be for the health of those who live in and about them. This is the age of severe sanitation."

A MISSING THIEF.—We mentioned some time ago an enormous fraud which had been perpetrated by an East Indian employé in the Forest Department at Madras. The sum of money not accounted for is thirty-three thousand rupees. A warrant for the arrest of the defaulter is still out. It is supposed that he was last at Galle, from which place, after drawing bills on England, under an assumed name, for £800, he took his passage by the steamer Mooltan for Suez. The Madras Government is stated to have sent a communication, with a photograph of the accused, to the Secretary of State, requesting that should the man turn up in England he might be arrested and sent to Madras.—Bombay Gazette.

SEVEN PAGODAS.—The Secretary of State approves of the Madras Government having entrusted to Captain M. W. Carr the preparation of an edition of the collected papers on the sculptures, inscriptions, and monolithic temples known as the Seven Pagodas, in the Madras district, and copies of the volume, when ready, are to be forwarded to him.

RAJAH OF VIZIANAGRAM.—On Wednesday evening his Highness the Maharajah of Vizianagram entertained Madras society to an evening party in the banquetting-hall, lent to him by Lord Napier. The proceedings commenced with a concert, for which the French opera company now in Madras were engaged, and was followed by a ball on a large scale. Lord and Lady Napier and the Prince of Holstein arrived about half-past ten, and remained till after supper. The front of the banquetting hall was beautifully illuminated, and the Maharajah and his son received the guests as they arrived at the top of the flight of steps. The entertainment was as perfect as money and good taste could make it, and passed off with great success. On the previous evening a more unusual entertainment was given by a native lady. On that evening Auzum Oon Nissa Baigum Sahiba, widow of the late Nabob of the Carnatic, entertained the Master of Napier and a party of European gentlemen at dinner at her own residence. The Baigum, of course, was not visibly present; but she was represented by her relative Mouzooz oo-Dowlah Bahadoor, who acted as host. After dinner there was a nautch and a grand display of fireworks. We believe that this is almost a unique instance of an invitation of this kind being issued by a native lady.—Madras Times, April 12.

GREAT FIRE AT PEGU.—It is with regret we have to record the occurrence of a great fire at the old historical city of Pegu, after which this central province of British Burmah has been called. A fire broke out in the Zyneganing quarter of the town on the north bank of the river, between two and three o'clock in the morning on the 12th of March. It spread so rapidly from one end of the quarter in which it commenced, that it speedily crossed the river to the Pegu side, when the flames spread with great rapidity through the whole town. The Court House and dwelling of the Extra Assistant Commissioner in charge, together with all the records and books of the Judicial officer, were totally destroyed. The number of houses burnt down is said to be four hundred and sixty-eight, and property valued at fifty-five thousand rupees has thus disappeared in the course of two or three hours. The Deputy Commissioner, Major M. Lloyd, in charge of the district, purposes to improve the present opportunity of laying out a new town, to be confined to the limits of the old city wall. He has most humbly recommended to the local government that the Municipal tax now levied on all householders be remitted for the period of one year, from the sufferers by the late fire, with the understanding that the new houses to be built shall be tiled by the 31st of March, 1870. The occurrence of fires in Burmese towns and villages in our province will never cease until the regulation be made compulsory that none but tiled houses will be allowed to be erected. This rule has saved Rangoon from such a visitation for the last ten years, whereas formerly seldom a dry season passed over without the town being destroyed from end to end, and thus swallowing up annually lakhs upon lakhs' worth of property.—Rangoon Times.

OFFICIALISM IN LOW PLACES.—A correspondent of the Madras Mail describes an amusing adventure with a Madras policeman in the Tinnevely district. The writer was putting up at a dak bungalow, where his bandy driver, who had absconded and found his way to an arrack shop, arrived in a state of intoxication. When the man became uproarious and abusive a policeman was desired to arrest the offender. "For what, sir?" demanded the policeman. "For being drunk and disorderly." "I want proof of that," replied the policeman. "Proof," asked the gentleman; "why, can't you see that he is drunk; can't you see that he is disorderly?" "True," said the policeman, "but that is not evidence. I want evidence." After some more conversation the policeman appeared to consider the "evidence" sufficient, for he carefully spread a large handkerchief on the ground, on which he deposited his turban, belt and tunic, and last of all he took off his trousers, which he folded carefully and put with his other garments. He then tied the whole in a bundle, threw it over his shoulder, and stood up before the gentleman, with only the smallest piece of cloth which natives use for a covering. He then drew himself up to "attention," made a military salute, and addressing the gentleman said, "I now proceed to arrest the man according to Act," and accordingly did so, when a right royal fight ensued between the naked policeman and the drunken bandy-driver. The Madras policeman appears to be no less imbued with the "official mind" than his Bengalee brother, but his courage is greater. We doubt whether a Bengalee would have ventured to make an arrest as in the above case without a pose-comitais of half-a-dozen constables.

STATION TALK.

NEEMUCH, March 30.—News was brought into camp the other day of a tiger having killed a man and a bullock near a place called Purdan, about eighteen miles or so from here, and two eager Nimrods—or, as it turned out, would-be Nimrods—started off at once in pursuit. Whether it was that the weather is not as yet warm enough to prevent the tiger from wandering about the country in the daytime, or that the whole thing was only a story got up by the Bheels with an eye to profit, is, of course, a matter for conjecture; but our two sportsmen came back without seeing anything, and bitterly inveighing against the bearers of false khabor, the more especially as they had to stand a good deal of chaff about their arrangements, having gone out for only one day, and on finding that they should have to stay longer, having sent in a letter imploring further supplies of food, raiment, and ammunition. The latter, indeed, they got sent out in profusion, at the rate of about five pounds of powder per diem. The other shikar party that had gone out for ten days' leave, came in with not much better luck, having only killed one tigress, which was all they saw the whole time. This they got in the Kokee ravine, a place well known to every sportsman who has been out after large game near Neemuch, and which used formerly to be a certain "find" for tiger. For the last couple of years, however, it has lost its good name, having been several times drawn blank. This year, however, on its being beaten, a tigress appeared and received a shell behind the shoulder from Captain Freeborn's rifle at about forty yards' range, after which it disappeared for some time. On following it up—dangerous work among such thick jungle as there is at the bottom of the ravine—it was heard to growl, but could not be seen, although it made a half charge, scattering the beaters and gun bearers in a remarkably expeditious way; they seemed, indeed, to fall up the trees, as if the laws of gravitation had been reversed. After spending some further time in following up the track, a loud roar was suddenly heard close by, though nothing could be seen. A momentary silence succeeded, during which our two shikaries had just time to jump on the branch of a low tree, about a couple of feet from the ground. The head Bheel meanwhile earnestly exhorted them to fire at the spot at the other side of a small stream, where the leaves were seen stirring, and the flopping of the tigress' tail could be heard. It suddenly charged, made one spring on to a low rock in the middle of the stream, about eight or nine feet from Captain Freeborn, and was shot by him in the spine, just as it was making the final spring that would have brought her to him, and fell dead at his feet. Another shot was put through her head to make sure, and it was then borne in triumph amidst much tom-tomming to the neighbouring village of Gopalpoora.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

KURRACHEE, April 7.—The first battalion 21st Fusiliers was inspected by Major-general Sir George Malcolm, K.C.B., commanding the Sind division, last Saturday. The battalion was drawn up on the regimental parade-ground shortly after 5 A.M., and at six o'clock Sir G. Malcolm, accompanied by Lieutenant Percy Heath, Aide-de-Camp; Colonel E. A. Bacon, Assistant Adjutant General; and Major R. Mallaby, Assistant Quartermaster General arrived on the ground, and was received with the general salute. Dismounting from his horse, the General walked down the ranks, and minutely inspected each company. He was much pleased with the appearance of the men, and at the conclusion of the inspection expressed his satisfaction to the Commandant, Colonel Dalyell, at finding the battalion in a state of discipline so creditable to all concerned. Sir George afterwards visited the barracks, hospital, patcheries, &c., attended by the principal medical officer of the British troops (Dr. Trousdell), and the barrackmaster (Mr. Tarlton), and found all the arrangements were in strict accordance with the regulations, and calculated to contribute to the comfort of the new corps. While passing through the patcheries, the General, with characteristic bonhomie, chatted with the women and children, and was pleased at the intelligence they evinced in their replies to his numerous inquiries. About the end of the present month he intends to give them a grand treat in the Government gardens, and to invite the families of the Royal Artillery to meet them and participate in the entertainment. There are few Generals who take a livelier interest in the soldiers' olive branches than Sir G. Malcolm, and though this may be deemed a weakness by people of a certain calibre (of whom we have a good many here), to others it betokens a kind and loving nature. History gives us many instances of the fondness exhibited by great men for the society of children. To refer only to moderate instances, the great Duke and Napoleon were fond of them, and enjoyed their gambols extremely. Richter observes, that he must be a bad man indeed who does not love the society of children. Among those who leave for Bombay to-day in the steamer Abyssinia is a distinguished officer of the Bengal Staff Corps, Major W. D. Hoste, who was passed by the Kurrachee standing medical board yesterday, and proceeds home on two years' furlough. Major Hoste served in the Punjab campaign of 1845-46; also in the Crimea in the advanced trenches as captain of a division of the Land Transport Corps, for which he obtained two medals and a clasp. In 1857 he was with the 5th Regiment Punjab Infantry, and led the upper column of attack against the rebel village of Naringee, for which he received the thanks of the Supreme Government. He served with the same regiment in the mutiny in Oude, and was present in the actions of Barree, Nawabgunge, Simree, and all the engagements under Lord Clyde during the latter part of the campaign. About the termination of the mutiny he was Quartermaster-general to Brigadier-general Horsford, and was present at the passage of the Raptce, and the entrance into the Nepaul territory. During the Umbeyla campaign of 1863-64 he commanded the 6th Punjab Infantry, and was thanked for marked gallantry in action on the 26th October, 1863. He also commanded the detachment of his regiment in action against the Bezootee Affreedees in March, 1868, when he was wounded severely on the head, from the effects of which he is still suffering. For his bravery on this occasion he was again thanked by the Supreme and Punjab Governments.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

HIGH COURT.—Mr. F. Lloyd, formerly Judge and Session Judge of Poona, took the oaths as a Judge of the High Court, and his seat on the bench of the Appellate Side of the Court, on April 13.

BELGIAN CONSUL.—The Right Honourable the Governor in Council is pleased to recognise Mr. Emil Thomas as Acting Consul for Belgium in Bombay, during the absence of Mr. Havenith.

POMBAY MINT.—The value of silver in the Pombay Mint at the close of the week ending April 10 was Rs. 2,07,23,813, of which Rs. 1,48,02,000 belonged to the Currency Department.

KURRACHEE.—The ship Three Bells, Captain Simpson, left Kurrachee yesterday for London, with a cargo of cotton, wool, rapeseed, indigo, tea, hides, &c., and the following passengers:—Mr. and Mrs. Wells, and four children; Mr. and Mrs. Plummer, and four children; and Master Sheen.—Sindian, April 10.

MR. W. FOXTON, the Deputy Collector of Roorkee, received charge of the office of Judge and Session Judge of Shikarpoor from Mr. Macpherson on April 3, and the latter gentleman left Sukkur on the 5th for Kurrachee, where he will appear before a medical committee, with a view of obtaining a furlough to Europe for twenty months.

SMALL-POX IN HYDERABAD.—We regret to learn that small-pox is raging among the natives of the city of Hyderabad. The principal medical officer, British troops (Dr. Trousdell), has, we hear, recommended the advisability of issuing instructions to prevent the troops at Hyderabad having any intercourse with the people of the town.—Our Paper, April 9.

MR. NEWTON.—The honourable Mr. Newton refused, with his characteristic unostentatiousness, the honour of a bust, offered by the Bombay branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, and accepted the humbler offer of a set of the Transactions of the Society and its honorary membership. This is an instance of self-denial, rare in these fruitful days, when the contagion of testimonials is spreading so rapidly and has found so many willing—but too willing victims.—Hindu Reformer.

COLONEL DISBROW.—Lieut.-Colonel H. Disbrow's sick leave to the Neilgerry Hills, for two years, having expired, he has resumed charge of the political and consular duties at Muscat, relieving Captain G. Atkinson, who has been acting during his absence. The tact and discretion displayed by Captain Atkinson during the late revolution under Syed Azan, as also when Muscat was attacked by Syed Thorkee, are said by the Sindian to have saved the lives of the British subjects at the time held as hostages by the insurgents. "These services will," continues our contemporary, "in time be duly acknowledged by Government, we hope. For the public, we can safely say these traits in his character—his unremitting attention to business, and the accessibility of Captain Atkinson as Consul, to all, whatever their condition—have endeared him to the inhabitants of Muscat—Banian, Khoja, Arab, and Christian alike; and we hear that the British subjects, to show their appreciation of his worth, intend forwarding him an address, which could not, for the want of time, be completed before his departure from Muscat."

EUROPEAN VAGRANCY IN BOMBAY.—A great number of destitute Europeans on Wednesday presented a petition to the Acting Chief Magistrate of Police, in which they stated that they had been recently turned out of the Strangers' Home, it having been resolved to turn out all men who could not pay a rupee a day. The men who appeared before the magistrate were in great distress, and evidently suffering from starvation. The magistrate ordered food to be given to them from the poor fund, but as about thirty reliefs have been given from that source within the last few days, this practice, it was intimated, could not be continued. We understand that the magistrate has either addressed, or is about to address, Government on this subject. These unfortunate Europeans are to be seen in all parts of the town, and many of them really look wretched in the extreme. Gangs of them sleep on the Green at night, and find their way to the Fort Police-court in the morning, where they manage to get a little food during the day. The men appear to be mechanics, engine-drivers, firemen, fitters, &c. It is really time something was done towards removing this growing evil.—Bombay Gazette, April 17.

CARWAR.—In the port of Carwar there are now three square-rigged vessels taking in cargoes of the new Dharwar cotton, the Guam, Pontiac, and Anna; the ship Mahableshwar is also looked for, and these four are chartered to sail to England direct from the new port. The first named of these vessels brought out a cargo of stores and machinery for the Carwar Company, and another ship is daily expected from London with stores and materials for the Dharwar Cotton-Gin Factory. At the old port of Compta trade is also brisk, according to the old methods; so that the dealers and carters from above the Ghauts, without waiting for the Duke of Argyll's surveyors, are doing their best to get the produce of the South Mahratta country to the coast in spite of the gaps and boulders of the bridgeless cutch road down which the whole of this traffic has to come. The Bishop of Bombay has changed the order in which he was pursuing his pastoral search for the few sheep in the wilderness of the Southern Mofussil. On Sunday, the 28th, he was to preach at Carwar; on the 11th he was to hold two services and a confirmation at Dharwar; and on his way home he is taking Belgaum, where he will consecrate the new church and officiate two Sundays.

BOMBAY BANK COMMISSION.—Although the report of the Bombay Bank Commission has not yet been formally published, it has, we believe, been seen by a good many persons both in Calcutta and Bombay. There can be no doubt that in some respects it will disappoint public expectation. For instance, no opinion whatever is expressed in it on the question whether or not any of the shareholders should receive compensation for their losses. The commissioners were appointed to ascertain the causes of the bank's failure, and they considered it beyond the scope of the inquiry to do more than record the actual results of their long and patient investigations. They, however, while strongly censuring the Government directors, and especially Mr. Birch, ascribe the ruin of the bank mainly to the influence enjoyed by Premchand over Mr. Hannay, Mr. Tracey, and the secretary, Mr. Blair, so that the shareholders' chance of obtaining from Government compensation for losses caused by the misconduct of their own elected representatives is necessarily a very slight one. The Commissioners' report on the relations that ought to exist between the State and the Presidency Banks, and on the general question whether there should be one or more State banks in India, has not yet been sent in to Government.

SIR SEYMOUR FITZGERALD.—"It is believed," remarks the Pioneer, "in Bombay that Lord Mayo arrived in India pre-disposed to attach much weight to the opinions of Sir Seymour Fitzgerald on certain questions of India foreign policy. It is well known that one of Sir Seymour's idees fixes is the restoration of the Indian navy, with the particular view of, on occasion, putting pressure upon Persia. Another of his views is said to be that an effectual means to paralyse a Russian movement on Herat would be the menace of an irruption on our part by the Shiraz and Kerman towards Seistan, on the flank of the Russian advance. A third is deep displeasure at the Persian occupation of the Afghan province of Seistan. On this last point, at any rate, we believe the Governor of Bombay may be satisfied with the result of the Umballa conference."

CIVIL ITEMS.—Colonel Lambert, the Collector of Kurrachee, will leave shortly on furlough to Europe; and the Sindian informs us that he will be succeeded by Major Lionel Dunsterville, the Collector of Shikarpoor. —Mr. William Wells, the Deputy-Commissioner of Paper Currency, left by the Three Bells (from Kurrachee) yesterday morning. This gentleman's health is said to be in a very delicate state, and it is to be hoped that a sea voyage round the Cape will prove beneficial to him.—Sindian, April 10.—The steamer Satellite arrived at Khetty on the 3rd instant, having on board Sir William and Lady Merewether, Mr. and Mrs. Moore, and Major Lambert, the Collector of Kurrachee. Sir William inspected the old and new towns of Khetty, as well as the Custom-house lately erected. The Commissioner and party left for up-river on the 4th inst., to receive on board the members of his establishment whom he left somewhere near Gorabary. Our Khetty correspondent mentions that whilst the planks of the steamer Satellite were being removed, Mr. Tarrachund, the kotwall of Khetty, fell into the water, and with great difficulty saved his life.—Sind News, April 8.—Mr. Gerald Fitzgerald, Private Secretary to H.E. the Governor, as well as Mrs. Fitzgerald, sails for Europe to-day. Mr. Fitzgerald, we are happy to learn, is not driven home by failing health, but departs on regular leave. He will only be absent for a short time.

BANK OF BENGAL IN BOMBAY.—Intimation has been received in India, from a source which admits of no question as to its accuracy, that the Secretary of State for India has informed the Supreme Government that the Bank of Bengal's Agency must be removed from Bombay, even if special legislation should be necessary to effect that object. It is needless to say that the news affords unqualified satisfaction to all interested in the Government bank of this Presidency, as well as to every one who can realise the suicidal policy adopted by the Government of India of subsidising two rival banks in the same field. The scandal has been allowed to continue too long already, and would have gone on for ever for anything the self-seeking and all-powerful Bengal element of the Government of India cared, or, at any rate, till the Bank of Bombay had been virtually absorbed by sheer force of partisanship between the rival institution and the Financial department at Calcutta. As it is, we are not sure that we have yet seen the end of the matter; for the most determined underhand opposition will be offered to the carrying out of the Duke of Argyll's order, both in Calcutta and in England. Every species of device will be employed to evade it altogether or to get it delayed or modified, and it is impossible to say when it will be attended to, or whether the Bank of Bengal will not proceed with its arrangements for opening a branch at Oomra-uttee, as it now contemplates doing. Of course Lord Mayo may see to it that the Secretary of State's order is promptly obeyed without evasion, or he may, as hitherto, allow himself to be blinded, or his better judgment to be swayed, by those who have hitherto pulled the strings so successfully in connection with this scandal. Another despatch from his Grace may, therefore, be necessary.

MILITARY.—We regret to announce the death of Staff Commander H. B. Akaster, H.M.'s troopship Malabar, which took place early on the morning of the 12th April. We regret to learn from the Deccan Herald that Colonel Robert Palmer Warden, second in command 24th Regiment N.I., and late director Land Transport Corps, Abyssinia Field Force, died at Poona on April 11. The deceased officer served in the Land Transport Corps at the siege of Sebastopol, commanded a division of that corps attached to the 3rd division of the British army employed in the trenches during three successive bombardments of Sebastopol, and with the 3rd division of the army, under Sir L. England, engaged in the assault of that town. For these services he received the Crimean medal, and Sebastopol siege clasp. He was also, as is well-known, director of the Land Transport Corps in the Abyssinian Expedition. By the recent promotion of Colonel Wyatt, of the 11th Foot, to a brigade, Major Peebles and Captain Maunsel, of the 2nd battalion, Lieut. Trotter, of the 1st, and Ensign A. Aphthorp, of the 2nd battalion, obtain immediate promotion without purchase. H.E. Lord Napier of Magdala left Bombay for Poona April 14. His lordship was to return to the Presidency in the course of a week. Previous to his departure he visited Butcher's Island, and inspected the detachment of H.M.'s 49th Regiment at present quartered there.—Colonel John McNeil Walter, C.B., has arrived at Jubulpore and assumed command of her Majesty's 2-12th Regiment.—Colonel H. W. Holland, Commissary General of the Bombay Army, will proceed to England shortly, on six months' leave of absence.—The Government of India have authorised the removal of a company of Native Infantry, now at the Andamans, to hold the Nicobar Islands, its place being supplied at Andamans by another company from Moulmein.—Captain Forbes, the English officer whose conduct occasioned the recent scandals in Kewah, has been forbidden by the Government of India to enter that State. Nothing is to be done towards effecting a further settlement of the difficulties caused by that officer until the return of Colonel Moade at the end of the year.—We observe that a paper called The Sentinel has been published at Hazareebagh by and "for the entertainment and edification" of the men of the 107th Regiment, at that "isolated and rural situation." The idea is certainly a good one, and is in every way deserving of encouragement. The first number is said to have been very well got up.—The Secretary of State for India has intimated to the Government of Bombay that three Artillery non-commissioned officers (viz., one for each Presidency) who have been instructed at home in the manufacture of Boxer ammunition for the Snider rifle have been sent to India.

SERVICE IN GOVERNMENT SCHOOLS, &c.

Pensions and Gratuities.

With reference to Deputy Accountant general Mr. Eede's letter, No. 17,583 PA, dated 25th January, 1869, the Governor general in Council is pleased to rule that when an officer in the service of Government is authorised to take service in a Government school or institution, or on any establishment under Government control, which service is remunerated otherwise than by the State, and does not therefore count for pension, his previous service shall remain at his credit as service towards pension in case of his re-entering the regular service of Government without any other break than that herein described.

ARMY MEDICAL SCHOOL.

Fort St. George, April 6, 1869.—No. 122, of 1869.—The following extract from a military despatch from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India is published:—

Despatch, dated March 4, 1869, No. 29.

1. I have to inform you that the following candidates having completed the course of instruction at the Army Medical School, and having been reported qualified, have been appointed as assistant surgeons on the Madras establishment, their commission as such bearing date 1st October, 1868, viz.:—

Alfred William Lupton, M.B., William Evatt Wright, Frederick Henry Blenkinsop.

2. They have received instructions to proceed to Madras within two months from 6th February, 1869.

3. They will be entitled to count as service for full pay pension the period of their residence at Netley, from the 1st October, 1868, to the 6th February, 1869, inclusive.

APPOINTMENT TO NEW OFFICES.

Financial Department, Fort St. George, April 6.—With reference to the notification of the Government of India, dated the 25th January, 1865, No. 794, and the despatch from the Secretary of State, authorising the announcement that after the age of fifty-five no military or naval officer nor any uncovenanted servant shall be appointed to a new office or be permitted to retain an office which he has held for five years, H.E. in Council observes that this Rule has been hitherto held to apply to Gazetted officers only.

2. That reasons which rendered the above Rule desirable in the case of gazetted officers apply, in the opinion of Government, with equal force to all uncovenanted offices, and H.E. in Council hereby notifies that after January, 1872, the Rule prescribed in the notification of the Government of India above quoted will apply to all offices under the Government held by the Uncovenanted Service.

CHARGES AGAINST THE 2ND MADRAS NATIVE INFANTRY.

No. 36, of 1869, dated April 2.—The C. in C., after inquiring into the allegations prejudicially affecting the conduct of the 2nd Regt. N.I., now serving in the Northern Districts, has a duty to perform to the Madras army in notifying to it how unfounded were such allegations; they were defamatory to the reputation of a corps which had previously stood high in the estimation of this army, and had won honourable distinctions in the field since its first formation previous to 1772.

2. The C. in C. notices that the native ranks of the regiment have been injuriously and dangerously reflected on by ill-founded accusations, disseminated firstly in India, and thence to England.

3. The native regiments, to vindicate their character, have a right to look to the head of their army for support, and the C. in C. acknowledges the justifiable annoyance that the European officers of the corps have felt at aspersions cast on a regiment in which they are serving; six of these officers have remained in the corps from their entry into the service, the junior more than eleven years ago.

4. The C. in C.'s opinion of the creditable state of the discipline of the 2nd regiment remains unchanged since the corps first came under his command from service in Burmah early in 1863, whilst he commanded the centre division, and during the two following years it was under his frequent personal supervision. On his return to India in 1867 he found the regiment still in cantonment at Madras, and he inspected it previous to its proceeding, in March, 1868, to the northern districts.

5. Lient. gen. McCleverty still retains his confidence in the corps, as, after full investigation, he records his own conviction and those of Brigadier gen. Hamilton, now commanding the northern districts, and of his predecessor, Major gen. Babbington, as to the unfounded nature of the serious allegations against the regiment.

6. The returns and other regimental documents to the present date disprove them, and Lient. gen. McCleverty willingly bears testimony that no regiment since its reorganisation has more upheld the discipline and character it maintained under the old system than the 2nd regiment N.I., during a period of nearly a hundred years.

FIRE AT POONAH.—On the forenoon of Sunday last a fire broke out in the lines of her Majesty's 23rd Regiment N.I., which completely destroyed two entire ranges of huts. Colonel Whitehill and other officers of the regiment were on the spot, and rendered every assistance in extinguishing the fire.—Poona Observer, April 13.

A DIVORCE CASE.—BROWN v. BROWN.—This case, which was heard before Lord Penseance on May 1, was a petition by Colonel David Brown, of the Madras Army, for a dissolution of marriage on account of his wife's adultery. Dr. Spinks and Mr. Searle appeared for the petitioner; the respondent did not appear. The petitioner was married to the respondent—who was a Miss Nuthall—at Burmah, in 1861, and there are two children the issue of the marriage. They lived together in India, but not very happily, until 1865, when the respondent returned to England in consequence of ill-health; on doing so she resided with the petitioner's relatives until March, 1868, when the petitioner came to England. The respondent was then living with the petitioner's sister at St. Bernard's-crescent, in Edinburgh, and the petitioner joined his wife there. After residing some time there in consequence of a letter the petitioner intercepted addressed to his wife, and which raised his suspicions as to her conduct. A separation accordingly took place, and they lived apart.
 Some time afterwards the petitioner found out that in December 1867, while the respondent was residing in Edinburgh, she had a miscarriage, on which occasion she was attended by Dr. Keith, an eminent surgeon. On that circumstance coming to the knowledge of the petitioner he commenced the present suit. After hearing the evidence the Court considered the adultery proved, and pronounced a decree nisi, with costs.

MONEY ORDERS ON ENGLAND.—For some time we have heard nothing of the proposal for extension of the Money Order system to drawals by and on England. For some years such facilities have existed between England and the colonies, and we cannot think we ourselves shall have to wait long. It is easy enough to send home £50, but £2 can only be remitted at disproportionate cost. Yet it is worth while to warn our readers that any rates which can conceivably be sanctioned must be in all appearance very unfavourable to Indians, for the fancy that a rupee is worth two shillings is a fallacy almost too deeply rooted to be overthrown. It is true that it is fixed year by year as the rate for adjustment of transactions between the English and Indian Governments, but this is for convenience only; and where in the long run transactions may pretty nearly balance convenience deserves to be looked to. Certain privileged classes, too, are allowed to draw on England at the same rate; but a few years ago certain others drew at 2s. 6d. the rupee. In neither case is there a pretence of strict justice, but a conferred privilege. The fact is, a rupee is simply three-eighths of an ounce of silver, somewhat worse than the English standard; and as bullion, at ordinary rates, it is worth the merest fraction over 22½ pence. We may compare it with gold, with like though more favourable results. As the sovereign is taken and issued by Government at Rs. 10-4, this may be called Indian Mint price, and gives as the value of a rupee 23½ pence. The market price is generally higher, and, at Rs. 10-6 to the sovereign, gives 23 1-16th pence to the rupee. Thus, if in England one per cent. be charged for an order on India, the charge here should be five per cent. to put remitters in the two countries on equal terms.—Pioneer.

INNS OF COURT.—The Inns of Court have resolved to appoint a Reader on Hindoo, Mahomedan, and Indian Law, with a view to the examination of gentlemen from India who ask dispensation of terms as a qualification for call to the English Bar. The Council of Legal Education have the election of the Reader and Examiner on these subjects.

JUDICIAL APPOINTMENTS.—INDIA-OFFICE, May 4.—The Queen has been pleased to appoint Lyttelton Holyoake Bayley, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, to be a Judge of the High Court of Judicature at Bombay. The Queen has also been pleased to appoint Francis Lloyd, Esq., of the Bombay Civil Service, to be a Judge of the High Court of Judicature at Bombay.

LONDON, BOMBAY, AND MEDITERRANEAN BANK.—Messrs. T. G. A. Parkyn and Jas. Cooper, the official liquidators of the London, Bombay, and Mediterranean Bank (Limited), have given notice of a first dividend of 2s. 6d. in the pound to the creditors. This notification is accompanied by a full report of their proceedings down to the present time.

INDIA CONFERENCES.—The fourth of these conferences on Indian subjects was held on Friday evening, April 30, at the Society of Arts. Mr. George Campbell was in the chair; and the conference was opened by Mr. Leonard Wray, who read a paper on "Indian Fibres," excluding silk and cotton, which have received separate attention. A large and beautiful collection of fibres, lent by the India-office and Mr. Bainbridge, was exhibited. The discussion was continued by Mr. Bainbridge, Dr. A. Campbell, Mr. Briggs, Mr. J. C. Wilson, Mr. C. Horne, Mr. Turnbull, Mr. Cornelius Thorne, Mr. Hyde Clarke, and Mr. Login, C.E. The next conference will be held on Friday evening, May 14, on the subject of "Waste Lands."

CROSS-CUPPING IN THE ARMY.—With a view of removing any possible misunderstanding, the Director General of the Army Medical Department is, we are informed, about to issue an order prohibiting the practice of cross-cupping altogether. We do not believe that any medical officer would think of cupping a soldier labouring under the effects of organic disease for the simple purpose of marking him. There could be no occasion for such a barbarity. Cupping has, no doubt, been practiced in the army as a substitute for leeching where local depletion was required, on account of the expense of leeches, and their not being always available. It would be absurd, of course, to prohibit all medical treatment which might cause a mark on the skin. We hold, however, that all treatment should have one aim, and one only, in view—namely, the cure or relief of disease; and we think the authorities will act judiciously in abolishing a method of performing a simple operation which, as it is not the ordinary one, is calculated to excite misapprehension if not animosity.—Lancet.

PROPOSED TESTIMONIAL IN MEMORY OF THE LATE MAJOR-GENERAL SIR HERBERT EDWARDS.—A meeting has been held in London to take into consideration a communication to the residents of Lahore and its vicinity, on the part of Sir Donald Macleod, Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab; and a committee has been formed, consisting of General Sir Sydney Cotton, Lord Lawrence, Sir Neville Chamberlain, Sir Hope Grant, Sir George Lawrence, Sir Robert Montgomery, Sir George Pollock, and others, with Colonel J. R. Becher, R.E., as honorary secretary, to co-operate with the Punjab committee in raising funds for a testimonial to the memory of the late Sir Herbert Edwards. As part of the scheme, a marble bust, executed by Mr. Foley, who was well acquainted with the illustrious officer, is to be presented to Lady Edwards. Messrs. Grindlay and Co., of 55, Parliament-street, S.W., and Messrs. H. S. King and Co., of 45, Pall Mall, S.W., have consented to receive contributions on this account; and post-office orders on the Charing-cross Post-office, or cheques, can be made payable to Colonel John Becher, 16, Suffolk-street, Pall Mall, S.W.

THE MOYAR COFFEE COMPANY.—The directors of the Moyar Coffee Company (Limited) have issued their report, in anticipation of the fourth annual meeting, called for the 10th of May. The final instalment is to be paid to Mr. Lascelles immediately, and the company's estates will then be free from encumbrances. The directors say:—"The large payments to Mr. Lascelles will sufficiently explain the reason why no dividend has been declared since May, 1868, but, when the present crop is realised, the directors trust to be in a position to declare a small dividend. They are happy to add that coffee has risen considerably in price lately." Great difficulty has been experienced through the destructive ravages of the insect known as the borer, on the company's properties. Upon this subject the report remarks:—"It appears that hitherto nothing has been discovered to avert the evil. Opinions differ as to the nature of the scourge, and some eminent authorities contend that it will disappear like an epidemic, whilst others fear that the coffee interests in India generally are seriously jeopardised." The directors conclude their report by congratulating the shareholders "on the present position of the company, which, considering the adverse circumstances which have surrounded it since its formation, can but be regarded as satisfactory."

BILLS ON INDIA.—The biddings for £350,000 in bills on India took place on Wednesday, the 5th inst., at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £335,900; and to Madras, £14,100. The minimum price was fixed at 1s. 11d. on both presidencies. Tenders at 1s. 11½d. will receive about 29 per cent., those above that price in full.

ACCELERATED MAIL COMMUNICATION WITH JAPAN.—The mail steamers of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company will, until further notice, run fortnightly from Hong Kong to Yokohama and vice versa direct, instead of via Shanghai, as heretofore. The Hong Kong and Shanghai mail service will be continued as at present. The gain by this arrangement will be five days on the homeward passage and two days on the outward passage.

EXPORT OF BULLION.—The exports of bullion by the P. and O. Company's steamers between the 24th April inclusive and 2nd May inclusive have been as follows:—To Bombay: Gold, £65,755; silver, £344,600. To Madras: Gold, £1,260. To Calcutta: Gold, £2,020; silver, £93,280. To Singapore: Silver, £10,000. To Penang: silver, £10,000. It will be noticed that the week's exports of silver to Bombay have much exceeded the large amount of a quarter of a million sterling; but it may not have been remarked that for some time past we have been sending silver out of the country in vast amounts, chiefly to the East.

THE LATE SIR A. BULLER.—Something more should be said of Sir Arthur Buller than has yet appeared in very meagre obituary notices. The differences of wit and humour were well illustrated, and the one and the other quality excellently exemplified, in the elder and more distinguished brother Charles, and Sir Arthur. A more humorous man than Sir Arthur probably never lived; but a peculiar diffidence prevented him from showing his powers in the House of Commons, where the witty Charles Buller had made himself early a leader of opinion and a favourite. In private circles, and as an after-dinner speaker on semi-public occasions, Sir Arthur Buller was exceedingly and endlessly amusing. He was capable of serious things as well as of being amusing. In early life he was, with his brother Charles, one of the band of writers who, under John Stuart Mill and Sir William Molesworth, made the brilliant beginning of the London Review, soon after merged in the Westminster. He afterwards went to Ceylon as Advocate-General; and in 1847 Sir John Hobhouse made him an Indian judge. This appointment was doubtless mainly owing to the influence of Charles Buller, who was then a member of the Whig Government. There was something beautiful in the affection of the two brothers. They were both pupils in youth of Thomas Carlyle. They were both members of Lord Durham's staff in Canada. Something more than twenty years have passed since Charles Buller was suddenly snatched away, after a few days' illness, at the early age of forty-two, his name already circled by fame, though he yet stood only at the threshold of political power.—Pall Mall Gazette.

THE LATE LORD GOUGH.—The Irish probate of the will of Field Marshal the right Hon. Hugh Viscount Gough, G.C.B., K.P., G.C.S.I., P.C., Colonel Royal Horse Guards (Blue), and Colonel-in-Chief of the 60th Rifles, late of St. Helen's, Booterstown, Dublin, was sealed in the London Court on the 22nd ult., having been first proved in Dublin. The personalty in Ireland exceeded £11,000, and in England £27,000, paying a probate duty of £525, as being together under £40,000. His lordship entered the army at the age of 15, and from that time was actively engaged in military duties over all parts of the globe—the Cape, the East Indies, the Peninsula, China, the Indian Mutiny—and closed his career at the successful termination of the war with the Sikhs. He was rewarded by the East India Company with a pension of £2,000 a-year, and a like pension was also granted to him by the Houses of Parliament for the lives of himself and his two next successors. His successor is his only son, Lieutenant-Colonel George Stephens Viscount Gough, M.R.I.A., F.R.S., of Loughcultra Castle, Galway, late of the Grenadier Guards, retired, who has three sons and two daughters. This distinguished Field-Marshal attained the advanced age of 80, and died at his residence, St. Helen's, on March 2 last, having executed his will in 1858, and a codicil in 1859. Probate was granted to his son, Viscount Gough, the sole acting executor, power being reserved to the Right Hon. Frances Maria Viscountess Gough, his relict, and his sons-in-law, Mr. Archibald Frances Arbuthnot, and Lieutenant-General Sir Patrick Grant, G.C.B. The testator has left his residence to his wife for her life, together with an annuity of £2,000, and has made a liberal provision for his three daughters of not less than £8,000 to each. His lordship inherited considerable property under the will of his late father-in-law, Lieutenant General Edward Stephens, R.A., and from which provision is made for his daughters and their children. To his son and successor, Viscount Gough, he leaves his gold and silver plate, sword-boxes, freedom of cities, jewels, gems, books, MSS., and all presentations as marks of honour, and all insignia worn by him, which shall be held as heirlooms. He has appointed his son, Viscount Gough, sole residuary legatee.

GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.—The report of the directors states that of the total amount of stock and share capital created—namely, £17,000,000—£1,299,184 was received in the past half year, making, with previous receipts, a total of £15,634,134 to the 31st of December last, leaving a balance of £1,365,866 then to be received.

The sum of £277,030 was also received in the half-year on debenture stock, leaving the balance of borrowing powers unexercised, £1,144,766. The company's officers in India continued to bestow their earnest attention on effecting the completion of through railway communication with Calcutta and Madras at the earliest date possible. Altered arrangements were adopted, with the sanction of Government, during November last, on the north-east line, for carrying on the works of the several sections from the end of the open line at Beerh to Jubbulpoor, which enabled Mr. Brereton, the company's engineer, in a recent report, to express his conviction that all the mass of work in hand would be successfully completed by May, 1870. The directors had great pleasure in recognising the skill and energy evinced by Mr. Brereton in the performance of very arduous duties, by which considerable difficulties had been overcome. They had every reason to expect that under Mr. Le Mesurier's able superintendence satisfactory progress would be made with the continuation of the line from Sholapoor to the junction at Raichoor with the Madras Railway. The second or double line from Callian to Kurjut (twenty-nine miles) had been open for traffic, the old line being temporarily closed for the purpose of renewing sleepers, worn out rails, and ballast. The works of reconstruction generally upon open lines were being pushed forward, and good progress had been made with them. The doubling of the line between Egutpoora and Kujgaum, a length of 130 miles, was completed on the 10th of January last, and opened for traffic. It was expected that a further portion of 25 miles to Myjee would be ready about the present time, and the works on the remaining 35½ miles to Blossawul were being actively carried on. The number of miles worked over in the past half-year was 874½ miles, against 852 in the same half of 1867. The gross revenue for the half-year ending 31st of December last amounted to £610,095, and for the corresponding half of 1867 to £509,756, showing an increase of £100,339. The number of passengers carried during the half-year was 1,640,904, against 1,756,900 in the same half of 1867. The expenditure for the half-year amounted to £425,586, or 69·76 per cent. of the receipts, against £381,618 or 74·86 per cent. in the same half of 1867. The net revenue of the half-year amounted to £184,509, and that of the corresponding half of 1867 to £128,138, showing an increase of £56,371. The capital account to the 31st of December last showed that £20,328,280 had been received, and £17,096,994 expended, leaving a balance of £3,231,286. The balance of interest account with the Government chargeable against half surplus profits over 5 per cent. was £3,408,381.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, May 4.—COST OF THE ABYSSINIAN WAR.—MR. CANDLISH asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he had ascertained and could now state the total cost of the war with Abyssinia which would have to be paid by the United Kingdom.—THE CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER: I am sorry to say that I have not yet ascertained the exact cost of the war, as some of it still remains a matter of estimate. I will, however, state all I know on the subject. Mr. Turner, our agent, anticipates that the expenditure in India will be reduced to £6,800,000, but there may be charges and also credits that he does not take in. I cannot say, therefore, that I have ascertained the amount, although I do not think that the estimate I gave will be very much deviated from. The rest of the expenditure is as follows:—£461,000 paid by the War-office; £1,262,000 paid by the Admiralty; and £250,000 paid by the India-office. The total is £8,773,000. The House will remember that on moving the estimates on the 4th of March I anticipated that the amount would be £8,673,000, and that in my financial statement I stated that it would be somewhat under £9,000,000. So that, on the whole, I am encouraged to hope I am pretty nearly right in the amount I have now stated.

Spirit of the Home Journals.

THE REJECTED RETIRING SCHEME.

The Home News concedes force to the argument, based on Sir Charles Wood's declaration, and allows that great dissatisfaction would have been expressed by those officers who, on the strength of his decision, have retired from the service, but is quite certain that the disappointment will be much more widespread and general when the numerous unemployed officers in India realise the determination of the Secretary of State not to offer them any inducement to retire. These officers have for a long time been indulging the hope that relief would speedily be afforded them, and that a sum in hand would have given them the same facility for leaving India which they would have enjoyed had not the bonus system of "John Company" been destroyed by the amalgamation. That hope is now done away, and no officer can be advised to hold on in the expectation of a re-consideration of the decision of the Indian Council. It was inconsiderate—it was even cruel—to raise expectations which there was no real intention to satisfy, and the wrong has been greatly increased by the delay in issuing the documents. Far better not to have allowed the proceedings of the Bengal Government to become known. But we failed to see the force of the Secretary of State's remarks on this subject, inasmuch as his Council have needlessly increased the disappointment by the manner in which they sought to keep their secret. We would ask, moreover, whether it is possible that their decision has been influenced by the belief that, now that the revelation has been made, officers who have hitherto abstained from retiring will leave the service in such large numbers as to establish the correctness of General Hannington's calculations. Even if this should be the case, and ultimately half a million per annum be the extent of the charge for Staff Corps colonels, it will be impossible to acquit the Indian Council of the reverse of wisdom in their dealing with this important and, to our minds, deliberately mystified "situation."

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.

The scrofulous and consumptive will find in these noble remedies the means of casting out the bad humours which originate and prolong their sufferings. The Ointment should be well rubbed twice a day over the skin as near as possible to the part affected. It will penetrate and act most wholesomely and energetically on the diseased structure; it manifests a wonderful power in removing all taints from the blood, and consequently in curing a multitude of chronic ailments which seemed to be almost irremediable. No invalid who carefully studies the plain instructions folded round every packet of Holloway's medicine will be at a loss to know how his preparations can be used to the greatest advantage.

ENGLISH HOMES IN INDIA.

PART I.—THE THREE LOVES. | PART II.—THE WRONG TURNING.

PUBLISHERS' NOTICE.

The writer of these volumes—an accomplished member of a family whose name is conspicuous in Indian story—being now resident in India, they have not had the benefit of her final corrections. It is hoped, however, that this inevitable drawback will detract but little from the pleasure to be afforded by the perusal of the tales, which are, indeed, what they profess to be, stories of English Homes in India, represented as such homes are in different parts of the country and under various social and professional aspects. They endeavour fairly and without exaggeration to illustrate Anglo-Indian life as it is, in its many varying phases, and to bring upon the scene, in their everyday costume, many kinds of Anglo-Indian workmen, from the Resident at a Native Court, to the subaltern officer and the railway employé; and it is believed that all who have visited the countries described will recognise the truth of the portraiture.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, April 24; Agra and Calcutta, April 20; Madras, April 19.

After the stir caused by Shere Ali's visit, comparative quiet reigns in British India. Lord Mayo and his Council, with the exception of Sir W. Mansfield, are all at Simlah. Lord Napier of Magdala had reached Poonah on his road to Bombay. Sir Seymour Fitzgerald was wending his way to Mahableshwar, and Lord Napier, the Governor of Madras, was to leave his capital for the Shevaroy hills in the beginning of June. Sir Joseph Arnould's departure from Bombay, which was fixed for the 1st of May, has been heralded by a public meeting of native residents, who resolved to found an Arnould Scholarship for the study of Hindu and Mohammedan law.

SHERE ALI reached Peshawar on the 14th April. The Indian papers are still discussing the terms of the compact between him and Lord Mayo. In flat contradiction to the Friend of India, the Bombay Gazette denies that the Ameer asked either for the services of European officers or the presence of European agents in Afghanistan. Had any such request been made, Lord Mayo would not have listened to it for a moment. The same journal adds that Shere Ali never urged the Viceroy to notice the Persian encroachments on Seistan.

THE cause of Mr. W. Tayler's arrest in Calcutta, which last week was shrouded in so much mystery, has at length been explained. A lady, to whom he sold an estate, had sued him for not telling her that an attachment lay against it. Mr. Dwarkanath Mitter, the native judge who tried the case, declared in plain terms that Mr. Tayler had committed a fraud. Indignant at what he deemed a false charge, Mr. Tayler wrote several letters to the Englishman reflecting on Mr. Justice Mitter's fitness for his post. On the morning after the last of these appeared, he was summarily arrested and brought before Sir Barnes Peacock for contempt of Court. Having owned to the authorship of the letters, he was allowed, after some discussion, to return home with an order to reappear on the 20th April. What happened then we have yet to learn. Opinions differ as to the justice and wisdom of proceeding at all against him for strictures published in self-vindication from a charge which Sir Barnes Peacock himself appears to have retracted, if the other judge had not. Are legal judgments sacred from outside criticism, or did Mr. Tayler exceed the bounds of fair comment thereon? But in Calcutta it is generally felt that the mode of procedure smacked too much of personal spite. On the other hand it is pleaded that the summary arrest was caused by a rumour of Mr. Tayler's impending departure for England. It seems that he offered a full apology for any expressions that might be construed into contempt of Court, but retracted none of his reflections on Mr. Justice Mitter.

THE tenders for the loan of £2,000,000 were opened on the 17th April, as we have already seen. The lowest tender was at 90, but the sums tendered above that rate amounted to £1,670,170. All these latter were of course accepted, leaving the balance to be divided among the tenders at 90. The whole loan has been taken up at an average of Rs. 90-2-10, or rather more than 4½ per cent., which the Financial Department calls a decided success. Of the accepted tenders 115 come from natives and 125 from Europeans. The latter include the Rothschilds, accepted for £200,000, the National and the Chartered Mercantile Banks for £400,000 each, and the Bank of Bombay for £100,000. The Times of India gives the figures somewhat differently from its Calcutta rival, the Friend. According to the Englishman the amount divided between the National and Mercantile Banks stood at ninety lakhs. The whole sum tendered is said to have been five millions and a quarter.

As a Bombay paper truly remarks, the occupation of the Nicobar Islands is "not a very great event" in itself. It is noticeable chiefly as a formal transfer of the islands from Danish into British hands, the Danes having long since virtually abandoned them. Under the Indian Government this group will become at once a centre of action against the pirates who still haunt their neighbourhood, and also the seat of farming operations on the part of the Government. Three only of the main group will, for the present, be occupied, but they are all placed under the charge of Colonel Man, Commissioner for the Andaman Isles. No convicts are to be sent there.

THE Indian papers are re-echoing our own intimations regarding the likelihood of Sir N. Chamberlain's being attached to the suite of the Duke of Edinburgh during his stay in India, as a sort of manager-general to prepare the Prince's way before him from place to place. All eyes in India are now mentally looking forward to the long-promised advent of his Royal Highness. It is said that Colonel Seymour Blane will be on the Duke's personal staff.

APPLICATIONS for divorce have already been filed in Madras and Calcutta. The Madras scandal is said to touch persons of high social standing, and the damages are laid at a lakh and a half of rupees. The Madras Mail hopes—in the interest, we charitably assume, of public morality—that this case will not be heard in the judge's own chambers. Certainly, unless the details are peculiarly disgusting, there is no reason for allowing the rich a privacy denied to the poor. In this connection, we may note that the Indian press is talking with much sorenness of the way in which English writers exaggerate the moral shortcomings of Anglo-Indian society. Exaggeration there may be, but does it not cover a certain amount of truth? It is certain, however, that gossip in India is far more prurient and ill-natured than even at home, and that many fair characters are foully lied away through sheer recklessness.

MR. PICKFORD, the new Professor of Sanskrit in the Madras University, has been busy rummaging among the libraries of Southern India, in search of Sanskrit books. At Tanjore he discovered some valuable works in duplicate, the Rajah having shown his fondness for Sanskrit literature by having copies taken of most of his manuscripts. Mr. Pickford proposed to overhaul the libraries at Venkatagiri, Mysore, and Travancore. Government has also placed at his disposal a number of old manuscripts which have long been lying in the out-houses of the Old College at Nungumbaukum, a prey to white ants and the climate.

We hail with no small satisfaction the reappearance in a pamphlet form of Sir Vincent Eyre's masterly lecture on the Affghan war in connection with passing events in Central Asia, on which we commented some weeks ago. The retrospect of campaigns in which he figured as "a wretched subaltern of artillery," and to which he devoted his first essay as a historian, serves as a useful and very readable introduction to his survey of the present position in Central Asia. From the comparative ease with which Afghanistan was twice conquered by our troops, he draws the lesson of abstinence from any similar enterprise in the future under the impulse of a Russian panic. What we have done before we could easily do again under more favourable conditions; but for that very reason he would deprecate the attempt, as a counter movement to any supposed designs on the part of Russia. What General Eyre thinks of Russian policy and of the probable results of a Russian march among the Afghan mountains, we need not here repeat. Enough to say that he utterly scouts the chimera of a Russian invasion and the belief that we are not strong enough to crush any force that showed itself on the plains of India. But he has made two useful additions to his lecture, a very good map at the beginning and a sketch of Russia's progress in Turkistan at the end. From both together we may see for ourselves how next to impossible it would be for Russia to invade India with success, either by the Leh and Cashmere line across two lofty mountain ranges, or by the way of Khoondooz, over the great Hindoo Khoosh and through a number of intricate passes to Peshawar. The treaty with Persia has barred against Russia the road by Candahar and the Bolan Pass, itself sixty miles long and impracticable for a large army; while the Suliman Range and the vast deserts bordering Sindh hold out no sort of inducement to an attack in that direction. In short, a glance at the map prefixed to this pamphlet ought to satisfy any intelligent being that Russia's game for ages to come will be played in the broad regions between the Tien Shan and Kuen Lun mountains, and that she will never be fool enough to attempt an invasion of India while a British army garrisons the Punjab and guards the line of the Indus. It is at once rude to keep on making rash charges against a foreign Power in the teeth of repeated denials, and unfair to charge a Government remarkable for shrewdness with designs that would only convict her of extravagant folly.

INSTEAD of raising up bogies on the North-West frontier, we would invite the alarmists to prepare for squalls from quite another direction. Our next assailant, if we are to have one, will most likely come by sea. A war with America is not at all likely; but it might happen some day, and Bombay, even more than Calcutta, would prove a tempting target for the guns of an enemy's fleet. In view of such a possibility what steps are being taken to fortify Bombay Harbour or to guard the approaches to Calcutta? Kurrachee too and Rangoon are worth considering. A Torpedo Committee was to be appointed a year ago, with power to consider the general question of harbour defences, but no one seems to know what it has been doing or whether it really exists. A beginning is said to have been made in the seaward defences of Bombay; and the Friend of India "hopes" that the projected works at Fultah and Diamond-harbour may soon be "set about in earnest." A couple of iron-clad monitors have been ordered, we believe, for the defence of Bombay-harbour. But what has hitherto been done in this matter must be only a small instalment of what ought to be done. Australia has started a navy of her own; why should India be denied the same independence?

WE regret to find Sir Sydney Cotton among the obstinate Russophobists. He cannot see, with General Eyre, that along the Punjab we have one of the strongest natural frontiers in the world. He, a military man of some repute, would actually advance our outposts beyond the Khyber, even to Kabul and Herat, thus placing in our rear the whole of those border tribes whose turbulence we have never yet succeeded in quelling for any time, and on whose loyal help in the event of a reverse befalling us we could never for a moment reckon. A wilder proposal under the circumstances we could hardly conceive. If Russia were really bent on fighting us for the possession of India, she could wish for no move on our part more conducive to her own ends. So long as we keep the Afghan passes and the hill-tribes in our front, our position is all but impregnable. To talk of occupying Herat or the Koorum Valley in a time of perfect peace is like going into action without field-guns or musket-ammunition. When the proper time comes, we can always count on the independent spirit or the greed of the hill-men to close the passes against our enemies.

WE learn by telegram that Sir R. Temple sailed from Bombay for England on May 8.

REVERTING to the question of a successor for Mr. Maine, we should mention the name of Mr. W. Forsyth as one of those which rumour has brought most prominently into view. Of the high qualifications of a gentleman who for many years has been Standing Counsel to the India Office, a post for which in 1866 he had to resign his fair prospects of a Parliamentary career, there can be no question. Indeed, we believe that Mr. Forsyth had the first offer of the appointment afterwards bestowed on Mr. Maine. If so, we can only hope that the reasons which led him to refuse it on the last occasion may prove less powerful on the next, if the choice should once more be open to him.

WE understand that Prince Alamayoo, son of the late King Theodore of Abyssinia, is likely soon to be taken out to India, under the charge of Captain Speedy, who has had the guardianship of the prince ever since he was brought into the British camp. We have heard this with much satisfaction, as we have always considered that there was little need to bring him to England at all; and we trust that the intelligence will prove correct.

WE understand that applications on the part of gentlemen conversant with Oriental languages are being received by the Duke of Argyll for the Librarianship of the India-office, vacated by the resignation of the present holder.

THE Duke of Argyll has appointed Mr. Francis H. Pryce to be a senior clerk in the India-office, in the place of Mr. Richard C. Plowden, who has retired in consequence of ill health.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

WEDNESDAY, May 19, 1869.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE AND THE COUNCIL OF INDIA.

THE right of appointing seven out of the fifteen members of the Indian Council was taken away from the Council last Thursday by the votes of a considerable majority in the House of Lords. Lord Salisbury's amendment, vesting the sole power of nominating members in the Crown, was vainly opposed by the Duke of Argyll, who pleaded that the old system had always worked well, and quoted in evidence the names of four of the elected members. In spite however of Lord Halifax's testimony to the same effect, the amendment was carried against the Indian Minister, Lords Lyveden and Lawrence both maintaining that however good were the men selected by the Council, the Secretary of State had always appointed men as good, if not better. Lord Lawrence had no doubt of the advantage to be gained by limiting the right of appointment to one responsible head. He also laid some stress on the tendency of aspirants for place to canvass existing members of the Council. This evil, such as it is, will hardly be removed by shifting the right of choice from seven pair of shoulders to one. In future the Secretary of State may fill up the vacancies in his Council with whomsoever he will; but his choice will still in a measure be guided by some influence outside himself, whether by the advice of one or more members of Council, or by the prompting of personal friends. In either case candidates will be just as likely as they are now to try and bespeak the good offices of powerful mediators; and the fewer these may be, the greater will seem the inducement to seek their help. Such means however might be employed under the best conducted system of selection, and the only efficient check to such solicitations lies in the patron's sense of responsibility, quickened by the free play of public opinion. It has not hitherto been found that the nominees of the Secretary of State have been less carefully chosen than those of the Indian Council, and we have no reason for apprehending a change for the worse in that respect under the new rule. The whole question indeed is of no great importance. Men of Indian mark and experience would continue to be appointed under any system, and probably few members of the present Council will much regret the transfer to other shoulders of a privilege which Lord Lawrence himself regarded as more of a burden than a boon.

On the other question once more mooted by Lord Salisbury, the real power of the Secretary of State in matters connected with the spending of money, we are no nearer daylight than we were before. His Lordship's notice of an amendment, afterwards withdrawn, for a clearer limitation of powers so differently interpreted by different lawyers, had the effect of drawing from the Duke of Argyll an admission that he is compelled to consult his Council on questions involving money, and a statement of his belief that the power of the Secretary of State, "already the greatest power exercised by any man in the empire, because it was practically uncontrolled," ought not to be increased. In spite of the seeming contradiction between the two parts of his Grace's reply, Lord Salisbury accepted the latter as, on the whole, a virtual recantation of the sweeping statement that the Secretary of State was "supreme in all matters whether they did or did not cost money." Possibly it is so, but Lord Salisbury himself appears to have changed also since the day when he talked as if the Indian Minister had not power enough over the votes of his Council.

THE DEMAND FOR BONUS COMPENSATION.

IN view of the appeal they are once more about to prosecute in Parliament against the recent awards of the Bonus Compensation Committees, the retired officers of the Indian army have done well to put forth in the form of a pamphlet a brief categorical statement of the facts on which they rest their claim to further redress.* Confining his own remarks to the briefest possible explanations and criticisms, the compiler has so arranged the documentary evidence as to let it speak as far as it can for itself. He begins by showing in an extract from their despatch of November, 1837, how the East India Company formally sanctioned the practice of subscribing to regimental bonus funds, as one which "must conduce to the contentment of the officers and to the efficiency of the army." From the famous "Henley Clause" in the Act of 1858, on the transfer of India from the Company to the Crown, an Act which formed the basis of all subsequent legislation, we may learn the true significance of a guarantee renewed in the Act of 1860, providing that "the military forces" of the dispossessed Company "should be entitled to the like pay, pensions, allowances, and privileges, and the like advantages as regards promotion and otherwise, as if they had continued in the service of the said Company." These words are the Magna Charta of the old Indian army. Their meaning was made clearer, if that were possible, by Lord Derby's public assurance—he was then Prime Minister—that the officers and men of that army "shall have reserved to them all rights, privileges, and expectations which they were led to form at the time of their admission into the service." In 1860 again Sir C. Wood declared in the Lower House that there would be "no change in the position of the officers," in token of which he "was willing to accept" Mr. Henley's amendments "with respect to the rights and privileges of the officers and soldiers of the local army of India."

Put these passages side by side, and what is the natural inference? What else can fairly be inferred from them, than that the system of regimental bonus funds, as finally sanctioned in 1837, formed an essential part of the rights, privileges, advantages, and so forth, reserved to the old officers by the Acts of 1858 and 1860? All quibbling apart, is it not clear that the practice of buying out senior officers by means of a bonus raised from the joint subscriptions of their juniors, a practice which, in the twenty years before the Mutiny, had grown into a regular system, established a right or privilege which, under the Henley guarantee, could not be done away without full compensation granted for consequent losses? As securing "advantages" in the way of promotion, it was the chief countervailing benefit to the drawbacks of a strict seniority system, and therefore was it sanctioned by the Court of Directors. The reorganisation of the old army, delayed for nearly three years, and crowned at last by the institution of the staff corps, gave the system its death-blow; a result foreseen and deprecated by several members of the India Council, in written protests from which Colonel Phillips has made some pertinent extracts.

* Abolition of the Bonus System in the Indian Army. Compiled by Lieutenant Colonel J. C. Phillips. London: W. H. Allen and Co. 1869.

For the losses thereby entailed on a good many officers, through no fault of their own, some compensation was surely due. Petitions for redress flowed into Parliament. At last, in May, 1865, Colonel Jervis moved an address for the appointment of a Royal Commission on the grievances of the Indian army. His motion was seconded by Colonel Sykes in a speech from which some telling passages are quoted in the pamphlet before us. He showed how the bonus system, "twice officially sanctioned by the Court of Directors and the Board of Control, and consequently by the British Government," had nothing in common with that personal sale of offices which the Act of George III. had made illegal. The working of the regimental retiring-funds was "literally in the interest of the public service," and it was "most ungenerous to take advantage of a supposed legal impediment, and a decision in the Queen's Bench which was inapplicable to the bonus system of the Indian armies, to confiscate all the contributions of present officers, and all advantages which they had a right to derive from these contributions." By way of showing the market value of these retiring-bonuses, Colonel Sykes quoted the case of Major-general Pears, now Military Secretary at the India Office, who received as much as six thousand pounds from his juniors for his regimental step. We should like to know whether this officer approves of the excuses on which officers in like circumstances have since been shut out from all chance of like additions to their retiring pay.

The motion was carried, and a year later, in August, 1866, Lord Cranborne sketched out before the House of Commons a scheme for partially satisfying the demands of Indian officers. Of course he contrived to make light of the Parliamentary guarantee, and to misstate the real objects and working of the Indian bonus system. Misstatement on Indian subjects may indeed be accepted as the rule. But his speech contained at least one important admission, and one intelligible promise. "It is clear"—he says to the House—"that if your servants have been largely damnified by any sudden or unexpected act of yours, the principle that ought to be observed in every branch of the public service is, that we ought to do something to compensate them." And how does he propose to compensate the sufferers from the legislation of 1858 and 1860? He proposes to appoint in each Presidency a committee "which, as soon as an officer retires, shall inquire into his case, in order to ascertain how much money he is really out of pocket in payments to officers who have retired, and the loss, whatever it may be, the Government propose to make good to him." "With interest?" asked a member. "No, not with interest;" all things considered, his Lordship thought that "interest on neither side should be allowed, neither for nor against the officer." It was further calculated that the process of compensation would cost about £8,000 a-year for twenty years.

How has the principle been applied and the promise fulfilled? Two days after his speech Lord Cranborne signed a despatch containing certain broad rules for the guidance of the Indian Committees. One of these limited their inquiries to the claims of officers "borne on the strength of the army on February 18, 1861," thus ignoring the claims of those who had retired between that date and 1858. A second excluded from consideration all sums paid on account of invalided officers, an exception utterly at variance with the usage of the Indian services, which made no difference between officers who went to the invalids and officers who retired on their pensions. By a third, the committees were instructed to "estimate the value in money of the advance in rank or position which accrued to the officer from his bonus subscriptions, and to debit him therewith," in the very teeth of Lord Cranborne's promise to "allow no interest on either side," and in strange ignorance or disregard of the fact that such advance in rank was sometimes purchased by actual loss of present allowances, while very often it would be virtually impossible to strike a fair balance between the money spent and the resulting gain in respect of promotion. A fourth rule deducted from the amount of an officer's claims "the value of any special annuity" granted in addition to "the regulated pension;" as if such annuity had been granted not for the special purpose of bribing unemployed officers to retire, but as an actual settlement in full of all demands.

The Indian Government in its turn bettered these instructions by ordering the committees "not to take into account any deaths of officers subsequent to retirement as affording a claim to a credit, on the ground that the purchase of the step had not produced the full benefit anticipated. Moreover "the burden of proof of payment" was in each case to "rest with the officer preferring a claim," as if all or even most officers were likely to have kept the needful documents by them through a long space of years, under the influence of some wild foreboding that such proofs would some day be required!

The results of this very pretty game of "Heads I win, tails you lose" ought to surprise no one of average shrewdness. "In the majority of cases either nothing has been refunded, or the awards have been so small as to prove a perfect mockery of compensation." In some cases the claimants have found the injury of a rejected claim enhanced by insulting attempts to turn the tables and prove them debtors to the Government. To no officer who received an extra pension, however small, has a single penny been refunded, however large his previous outlay. Some officers who were borne "on the strength of the service" at the end of 1861 have been put off with the short answer that their subsequent retirement dated back from before the 18th February, 1861. The absence of documentary proof, however explicable and often inevitable, has been made a convenient handle for the dismissal of other claims, however fortified by declarations made on honour and references to private memoranda. "Interest," in the shape of quickened promotion, additional pensions, and such like advantages, has been carefully reckoned up against the officers, while interest of any sort telling in their favour, such as the early death of bought out officers, the frequent loss of a staff appointment involved in the gain of a step of rank, and the years that have elapsed since the stoppage of the bonus system, has been just as carefully ignored. Thus in most cases the principle and the promise contained in Lord Cranborne's speech have alike been set at naught, and the desire of Parliament to make some reasonable concession to a just claim has been every way stultified by the methods used to that end. It is not therefore without good reason that the officers so aggrieved are ready once more to appeal to the fountain-head of Imperial justice against the mockery of justice awarded elsewhere. "All they ask," says the writer of the pamphlet, "is a full, impartial, and unbiassed inquiry into their several cases," at the hands of gentlemen "elected by the voice of their country to see justice done to her Majesty's meanest subject." Had Lord Cranborne's promise, which limited compensation by the payments actually made in each case, been fairly carried out, the question would probably never have been stirred afresh. The present demand, however, includes the broader question of compensation for the average value of an officer's step on retirement; and that, no doubt, is the true way of testing an officer's actual loss from the amalgamation of the old Indian services with the Queen's. It is also by far the simplest way, and we have very little doubt that the officers concerned would be satisfied with something less than the full average value of their steps, if only this method of adjusting their claims be finally conceded. Smarting as they do under the proffer of a few fallacious crumbs, they would feel comparatively grateful for the concession, let us say, of half the loaf.

The Parks, Promenades, and Gardens of Paris, Described and Considered in Relation to the Wants of our own Cities, &c.
By W. Robinson, F.L.S., with more than 400 Illustrations.
London: J. Murray. 1869.

This is a handsome volume on a subject which ought to interest all who, dwelling in cities, would like to surround themselves with reminders of the pleasant country beyond. "A belief that London may, without great sacrifice on our part, be made the noblest city in the world—as fair and clean as wide-spreading and wealthy—and the knowledge that the system of public gardening now pursued by us is not the one calculated to lead to this end," have induced the author to show his readers how successfully the art of public gardening has been applied in Paris to the embellishment of the city and the sanitary advantage of its inhabitants. London also has its parks and gardens, but they are mostly in the wrong place for benefitting the million, crowded together in narrow streets, courts, and alleys, into which no fresh air worth speaking of can find its way. We are still babes in the matter of boulevards, and the planted spaces in the heart and the slums of London are growing yearly smaller and fewer. If our streets were properly lined with trees and our chimnies forced to consume their own smoke, London might soon become the cleanest and healthiest city in the world. Whoever would see how this can be done should study Mr. Robinson's ample volume, full as it is of practical suggestions, and enriched with hundreds of useful woodcuts.

Lives of Indian Officers. By J. W. Kaye. London: Strahan and Co. 1869. Vol. I.

We have here before us a second edition in smaller type, at a reduced price, of a work which has already found a wide circulation. This unabridged reprint, which is very neatly got up in a handy form, will doubtless ensure for Mr. Kaye's pleasantly written sketches a yet wider popularity. There is no need to discuss over again the special characteristics of a work we noticed on its first appearance. Its republication seems to show that another public besides the Anglo-Indian has interested itself in a book devoted to Anglo-Indian heroes.

INDIAN FINANCE.

The Englishman believes that, as regards making up returns from furnished data, the Indian Finance Department can challenge competition with that of any country in Europe, both as regards the rapidity and the accuracy of its work. We have arrived at this decision from a series of facts and figures with which it is unnecessary to trouble the reader. But the same series of figures prove that if statistical manipulation is well performed by the finance department, the data which it has to work upon are slender and unreliable compared with those at the disposal of the English Exchequer. Mr. Gladstone can predict with admirable precision what an extra penny of income-tax will yield. But the Indian Finance Minister can only estimate what it would yield if the increase does not alter the conditions under which the lesser rates were levied. The event alone can decide this. Our English forms of taxation are new to the people, and very imperfect evidence exists as to the effect which any new import or any alteration in an old one will produce. Take, for example, the change of the Certificate-tax into the Income-tax, which this month ushered in. If the tax-paying classes were precisely in the same position that they were when Sir Charles Trevelyan left India, and if the machinery for collecting the income-tax were neither less nor more effective than then, it would be easy enough to predict the results of the recent import. But every year witnesses changes among the Indian rate-paying classes, such as do not take place in a decade at home, and since Sir Charles Trevelyan's administration the whole machinery of collection has been destroyed and reconstructed. It would, therefore, be mere quackery to claim for prognostications regarding the resuscitated income-tax anything like the precision which belongs to Mr. Gladstone's estimates. Various calculations have appeared varying from three-quarters of a million sterling to a million and a-half, and if the Budget estimate of £900,000 turns out to be the true one, all that can be said is that the Finance Minister has been very fortunate. So much for the revenue. With regard to the expenditure, the disturbing influences peculiar to Indian estimates are threefold. The first arises from the sudden calls upon the military department, which so extended a frontier and such a vast and loosely consolidated Empire may occasion. War in England is a very deliberate proceeding, but, nevertheless, war expenses are almost provided for in the first instance by supplementary estimates, nor is the necessity for exceeding the original budget considered a discredit to the Chancellor of the Exchequer. In India we have no civilised neighbours, and at any moment a conflagration may be lighted upon our frontier that a million sterling will scarcely put out. Fortunately such sudden outbursts are becoming rarer, but it is right to bear in mind that they form an element of uncertainty wholly unknown in the English estimates for the expenditure of the coming year.

NATIVES IN THE CIVIL SERVICE.

The Friend of India expects that practically the Act will be worked by the Governor-general in this way. The long desired separation of the Covenanted Civil Service into an executive and judicial branch will be effected, and native gentlemen will be appointed to the latter in the first instance. If Justices Sumbonath Pundit and Dwarkanath Mitter have proved entirely satisfactory judges on the highest bench, and if more than one of their educated countrymen have shown similar qualifications as Small Cause Judges and Principal Sudder Ameens with all the civil powers of a covenanted district judge, it will not be difficult to find able and pure, because highly-paid native judges, for many of the Zillah or District Courts. We have no fear that this will tell injuriously on the present covenanted service, by diminishing the number or the value of its prizes. It will probably be long before many of the new native appointments are made, and meanwhile Competition-wallahs will be more than recouped by the covenanted posts in the old non-regulation provinces now filled by military men, the supply of whom is dying out as a consequence of the death of the Indian army. It may be said, however, that much of the usefulness of the two native judges of the Bengal High Court is due to the fact that each has had, or has, so many English colleagues and works under an able Chief Justice. That is true, but a similar result is likely to be secured by forming those benches of Mofussil Judges which even Mr. Maine lately advocated: Such benches, besides enabling Government to restrict the evil facilities for appeal, would associate the new native judges with one or more English colleagues, to their mutual benefit, and the supervision of the High Court would be even more strict than it is now. Such covenanted native judgeships would form an admirable training for the High Court bench and even the Governor General's Council. Nor let it be supposed that the new appointments would be given exclusively or chiefly to the novi homines, whom we manufacture in our colleges at such an expense to the public and at a rate which threatens to prove so serious to the general contentment. The moment appointments of from Rs. 2,000 to Rs. 5,000 a month are open to natives, the sons of the old families will be trained for them. Our children will doubtless see the sons of the Nawab Nazim of Bengal, or that pensioner himself, and the younger sons at least of the old Rajahs and Nawabs all over the country, pressing to fit themselves for offices worthy of their ambition. This and the general success of the plan will depend on the regulations to be adopted for carrying it out "slowly and tentatively." The principle does justice to the people of India, while, unlike the competitive system, it will be applied only where there is fitness for the office, and that fitness is to be judged of by the responsible Governor General in the light of public criticism. It will now rest with the natives themselves to do their part.

OUR AFGHAN POLICY.

The Pioneer can quite understand the feeling which prompts the Supreme Government to be reticent as to the result of the late negotiations at Umballa until the Ameer has had time to communicate with his sirdars at Cabul, and the Secretary of State has had the chance of laying his despatches before Parliament. But, whenever the moment may come for revealing the understanding between the two countries, we trust that all the steps which led up to the recent interview will be disclosed also. In the autumn of last year a memorandum by Sir H. Rawlinson, advocating an aggressive policy towards Afghanistan, is said to have reached India, and to have provoked minutes from the Governor-general and his Council remarkable for their unanimous condemnation of Sir Henry Rawlinson's views. We should like, too, to see whatever correspondence took place between the Ameer and Sir John Lawrence during the last few months of the latter's administration, for then there would be the means of judging whether the Friend of India's oft-repeated assertion that Lord Mayo has reversed his predecessor's policy has a particle of truth in it. We ask for the publication of these papers, as much in the interest of the Government as in our own. We are convinced that much misunderstanding would be obviated for the future, and much wrong inference in the past be belied, if the whole action of our rulers in this important subject were made known. A turning-point in our relations with the Ameer has doubtless lately been reached, but the public has not thus far the means of determining whether the change is simply the development of the principles on which Sir John Lawrence conducted foreign affairs, or whether Lord Mayo has taken a distinct line of his own. It is desirable, too, that it should be shown whether certain of our contemporaries, who assume to

STATION TALK.

SMILA, April 10.—Though the season has not yet commenced, your special Simla correspondent deems it but proper to apprise you of his existence and presence here, and his desire to open another annual Simla special correspondence campaign, in the good cause of the Times of India. This beautiful hill retreat never looked better than it does just now. The hill slopes are burdened with bright green foliage and the crimson flowers of the rhododendron; the air, clearer than crystal ever was, is vaulted in with light azure, dotted and flocked with spotless white; bright welcome sunshine is bathing every spur, cliff, bluff, tree, and flower with pale gold; while, far away to the north, north-east, and north-west, are the sublimely contoured peaks and ridges of the great Himalayan range, still completely shrouded in snow, whose marble whiteness shows in beautiful contrast with the verdure of the nearer hills through whose openings the range is seen, and throws every swell and visible feature of the range itself into proudest relief against the dark blue northern sky. The weather is, however, as yet rather too much of the kind which a new arrival from Europe would style sharp, crisp, and bracing. The nights and mornings are keenly cold, and blankets and blazing grates are things that, for at least another month, will continue to be desiderated. Yet, during the middle of the day, the sun is not only powerful, but fiercely so; and, to such a degree, that going out without an umbrella, or hat as good as umbrella, is anything but wise. Simla, is, however, still empty; that is, there is not yet visible more than a weak advance guard of the crowd who will throng it a month hence, or within less time. Lady Mayo has been here for some days, and some, not all, of the members of Council have arrived. The same may be said of the Secretaries, some of whom are yet due. The Foreign, Home, Military, and Public Works offices are at work, but as yet have not been able to put "full power" on. A considerable proportion of the office establishments—especially the married men—continue due, but a day or two will see them all here. Government-house is supposed to be non-existent at present, but before the month expires it will have asserted its pre-eminence. Its locality is unchanged, Peterhoff, the viceregal residence of Sir John Lawrence, having the honour of having for its present lessee Sir John Lawrence's viceregal successor. The site is an excellent one, and in your correspondent's humble opinion about the most salubrious in Simla, while commanding as abundant foliage and as picturesque views as any other site in the place. The house itself is about the very best in Simla—two-storied, with apartments of goodly size, and admirable furniture. Orbitted round it, at convenient distances, or rather at very short distances, are the houses occupied, or to be occupied, by the personal staff. Sir Richard Temple did not come to Simla. He is now in Calcutta, preparatory to starting for England on six months' leave; but before he embarks he will have paid a flying visit to Darjeeling to sketch the snows! Your correspondent does not give you this as a joke, but as what he has heard as sober fact. Lord Mayo may well pride himself on his management of matters at a most critical period of our Afghan policy. There has been no actual change in the policy of the Government of India; and yet there has been change, and great change, too, in the manner of working that policy. In spite of all the special correspondents say of the inscrutable secrecy preserved with reference to the purport of the recent negotiations, no thoughtful, well-informed Anglo-Indian need be at a loss for the substance of what has been done—that is, agreed to by the India Government. A tolerably safe guess would be that a somewhat larger degree of assistance, pecuniary and of every other kind,—short of sending Europeans of any grade to Afghanistan—than was accorded Dost Mahomed in 1856-57 at the rate of a lakh of rupees a month, has just been re-accorded his son and successor, Shere Ali, to enable him to achieve victory over his enemies, defend his just and lawful rights, and effect the consolidation of his dominions. In return, Shere Ali, it may safely be presumed, has promised a faithful friendship in the fullest sense, encouragement of trade, and active frontier co-operation, should such be desired of him. Your correspondent says promised, for the Ameer's verbal promises have probably been deemed better than a treaty, which would bind us, and which he would be certain to break whenever it suited his purposes to do so. The only reason for attempting to keep matters so secret as the Government of India is doing, is deference to the Secretary of State. It is, however, probable that every paper connected with the negotiations, and a number of Central Asian and Frontier minutes of preceding date, will be given to the public by Lord Mayo's Government on the earliest possible date; that is, very soon. . . . But to Lord Mayo, and Lord Mayo alone, is due the credit of having brought Shere Ali to Umballa, instead of having had him met and negotiated with by Sir Donald Macleod at Peshawur, or some place in the Punjab. That was the great stroke of policy of the whole affair; and the good it has done, as regards native India, is incalculable. Lord Mayo may well plume himself on the opening scenes of his administration of the sovereignty of India. He has taken up the threads of a great and wise, but assailable and difficult foreign policy, and holds and pulls those threads with the skill which thorough competency alone could im-speak with authority, have had real grounds for statements, the worth of which at present only those who are behind the scenes can rightly estimate. . . . Lord Mayo has followed step by step in Sir John Lawrence's path. Sir John Lawrence held off until a strong Government had been established in Afghanistan, but as soon as this had been effected he at once recognised the de facto ruler, and long before Lord Mayo had set foot in the country, Ameer Shere Ali received effectual aid in money, arms, and ammunition from Sir John Lawrence's Government. It was Sir John's masterly inactivity which saved this country from being compromised by connection with a failing cause, and which secured it the friendship, or at any rate spared it the active enmity, of the dominant party in Afghanistan. We are, however, glad to see that the Englishman accords to Lord Mayo the credit of carrying on where needful the "masterly inactivity" policy. The Englishman adds:—"The other great result of the conference would seem to be that Lord Mayo reserves himself until Ameer Shere Ali shall have finally extinguished the fortunes of his rival and enemy Azim Khan. In what, we would ask, does this great result differ from the great policy of wise reticence which the Englishman ever hastes to decry? To us, at all events, it seems to be "masterly inactivity" writ large. That Lord Mayo should have given in his adhesion to his predecessor's wise and thoughtful foreign policy is not the least of his claims to our confidence and admiration.

SNOBBERY.

The Pioneer exclaims with Thackeray, what incomparable snobs we, English are! It is not so much that we all of us dearly love a Lord, and abjectly adore the rising sun, but that we so utterly and quickly forget the orb that has once sunk below the horizon! Listen to the chorus of claqueurs as they bid against each other. "Lord Mayo," says one, "entered the durbar looking every inch a king—how different his innate dignity from Sir John's gauche manners!" "Lord Mayo," remarks another, "true sportsman that he is, has expressed a wish to see a tiger, and has laid a dawk of horses, of which he has no less than twenty-eight. Sir John would have gone in a dooly." "The present Viceroy," chimes in a third, "with prince-like magnificence has pitched out of the windows of Government House the furniture that so well satisfied the late Viceroy, and was perhaps good enough for one sprung from the people." "What bonhomie, what perfect courtesy, what vigour, what energy!" is re-echoed on every side. "No 'masterly inactivity' now! No fear of his being led by the nose!" "Perfect taste in dress," suggests the tailor instinct! "Dear, how sweetly he sneezed, God bless him!" pleads Parvenu Witting, Esq.; "Sir John would have had a dry, hard cough." And so on, da capo. No doubt this is all very unjust to the late Viceroy, but there is some one else to whom it is still more cruel, and that is the present. Praise as yet unearned is exasperating to any man who feels he can earn it. Lord Mayo would too be the last man in the world to wish his reputation built up by the destruction of another man's glory. We may reasonably believe that, surrounded as he is by able advisers, and possessed himself of sagacity and decision, he will administer the Empire placed in his hands in such a manner as to make himself a name in story, and win the admiration of all whose admiration goes for aught. But as yet he has hardly had time to fit on his harness, much less to return triumphant from the struggle; and in the meanwhile he would, one may be sure, choose to be painted with all his scars, rather than be made beautiful for ever by the enamel of sycophants. If when, five years hence, his Lordship comes to resign his trust, he is able to look back upon his career with that proud sense of duty done which made happy to Sir John Lawrence the last days of his reign; if, too, the weathercock of popularity, now steadily turned in one direction, shall never have veered round to the opposite point, then may Lord Mayo reckon himself among the most fortunate of the sons of men. Without any foreboding, nay, with the brightest possible expectations, we may still refuse to pronounce anyone blessed until he has passed away.

SHERE ALI AT PESHAWUR.—The Ameer arrived at Peshawur on Tuesday, April 13th. Unpunctual as usual, his Highness arrived before his time. He was not expected until Wednesday morning, but a telegram from Attock informed the civil authorities that the Ameer was on his way to Peshawur, and had left Attock at three o'clock in the afternoon. The ordinary time of the journey is five hours, but Mr. Faichnie's good arrangements facilitated the Ameer's progress to such an extent that he "did" it in three hours, arriving at six o'clock P.M. A battery of Artillery arrived just in time to give the Royal salute, but the Commissioner and escort were too late to receive him. His Highness, however, should have learnt by this time that it is just as unpunctual to be too soon as too late. He was accompanied by Dr. Bellow, Colonel Chamberlain, and Captain Uperton. His Highness again occupies the Church Mission House, which is situated in the corner of a large quadrant called the Ghurk-hutree. His Highness has several times expressed himself as much pleased with the noble and kingly bearing of the Viceroy, and appears much pleased with his reception at every station, except Loodiauh, where the authorities appear to have done their best to perpetuate the "unpleasant associations" connected with that place.

part. He has, moreover, to change the metaphor, assumed charge of the helm at a very difficult crisis; and instead of nervousness, or the faintest sign of bewilderment, has boldly steered the good ship of the State into broader and more open waters, where her own beauties, and the advantages of the course given her, will, more than heretofore, be visible to all. Colonel Seymour Blane left Umballa for England, via Bombay, on the 4th inst., and is probably in your good city by this. He became full colonel on the 18th of last month. He will return to India in time to meet the Royal Duke at Calcutta in November, though it is next to certain that his Royal Highness will not reach this country until, at earliest, next December. There is no reason to doubt the statement which has appeared that Major-General Sir Neville Chamberlain meets the Prince on his landing, and accompanies him during his tour. No official information to this purport has been received by the Government of India Department most concerned; but that is not a conclusive reason for rejecting the statement. The probability is that as the Royal Duke is still considered to need "looking after," Sir Neville will, under the designation of Special Commissioner, be the chief bear-leader, while Colonel Blane and another will be equerries. At any rate, Sir Neville Chamberlain will be the representative of the Government of India with his Royal Highness, while Colonel Blane and the other equerry will be on the personal staff. The Duke, despite winter, will force his way into Cashmere, and will be to many the chief attraction of the great durbars to come off at Agra. He will also visit Benares, Lucknow, Allahabad, Cawnpore, and some of the hill stations, trying his hand at a tiger, if one can be had somewhere near where Lord Mayo is now trying his prentice hand at the same sort of high game. The Duke's stay in India is to last until March, 1870.—Times of India Correspondent.

KUSSOWLEE, April 14.—Lord Mayo left Umballa for Simla on the 13th, arriving at Kalka the same day, where his Excellency remained for the night, moving on in the early morning, and arriving here at 8.45 A.M. His Excellency breakfasted with Major-General Taylor, and left this for Sanawur about a quarter to one P.M. A more propitious day for travelling could not be desired. Before the day was light a thunder-cloud passed over these parts, besprinkling the ground with rain, and making it deliciously cool for travelling. His Excellency must have been much struck at such a transition of temperature from the plains as this day must have proved. Fleecy cirrus clouds, the remnant of last night's storm, covered the canopy of heaven, enfeebling the fierce rays of the sun, and making the day delightfully pleasant. Lord Mayo, accompanied by Major-General Taylor, Major Bourke, Colonel Dawson, Captain Beadon, Colonel Strachey, the Rev. C. Toussant, the Rev. Father Mackin, Captain Lockwood, and Captain Wingfield, proceeded to visit Sanawur. On gaining the grounds two arches were seen quaintly decorated for the occasion. Over the first arch, on entering, might be detected, without the help of binoculars, the word "Welcome!" Two hundred yards farther brought the notables to the massive stone gate of the institution, which was ornamented with flags of various colours, and over the portals, lettered in glaring hues, "God bless our noble Viceroy." Here there was a guard of honour composed of the bigger boys and the institution band; this with pièces de position on the height thundering forth 21, gave a right loyal reception to his Excellency. The boys were then marched past in slow, quick, and double time, stepping to the music of their band. The drilling was excellently conducted, and apparently gave every satisfaction, after which the companies were formed in line, and Lord Mayo addressed the children:—"Well, boys, I am very glad to see you this morning looking so well and happy. I think you should be very grateful to Government for all the advantages of this institution; and I hope that you may profit by them. I also hope always to hear of your good behaviour and strict attention to your studies, which will alone insure happiness in after years." Three hearty cheers from the boys vociferated in appreciation. His Excellency next inspected the dormitories, then proceeded to the Church, and from thence into the girls' room, where they were collected in order to greet his lordship with their melodies. In this they evidently succeeded, for the pathos of one of the songs affected his Excellency so much that he was seen to "wipe away a tear." However, to give the darlings their due, they sang very sweetly, as becometh their sex. By this time, Mr. Editor, you may imagine that his lordship was tired and hungry. Seemingly fortune always smiles on the great; and here, just in the nick of time, his Excellency's nasal organ was tickled with the odour of sweet steaming cakes. "What do I smell and hear?—something very nice." "Yes, my lord," was the rejoinder, "You smell savoury things and good; Hear the fryingpan on the wood!"

"Will your Excellency just step into the girls' kitchen, and see and taste?" His Excellency turned in and saw a few girls hard at work in a very cleanly-kept kitchen, and ate some cakes, which his Excellency pronounced to be really good. Being now quite fortified against further inspections, Lord Mayo was shown over the girls' building, hospitals, infant-schools, &c. The thunder rolls; the sky is overcast with dark clouds; the wind whistles through the trees; and amidst this ominous scene the Governor-General is determined to reach the dak bungalow at Hurrepore, and started from Sanawur about 3.30 P.M. The Mountain Battery from Allahabad reached Durumpore to day on its way to Jutogh.—Pioneer Correspondent.

RAWUL PINDEE, April 13.—The Ameer Shere Ali Khan reached Rawul Pindie on the afternoon of the 11th inst., and it being Sunday, was received with no salute or military ceremonial of any kind. At first the whole garrison was ordered to parade to receive him as on his previously passing through, but better counsels ultimately prevailed, and the parade was countermanded. At sunrise on Monday the whole force, namely, D battery, 7th brigade, R.H.A.; E battery, 19th brigade, R.A.; No. 5 battery, 25th brigade, R.A. (mountain battery); 1st battalion 6th foot, 1st battalion 19th foot, 16th Bengal cavalry, 23rd Punjab pioneers, 24th Punjab N.I., and a company of sappers, paraded in line of quarter distance columns on the 19th parade, and received the Ameer with a Royal salute, after which a field day was gone through over the hilly ground to the southward of cantonments. The enemy were supposed to occupy the first ridge beyond the new fortified magazine now in course of construction. Throwing out skirmishers, the infantry and field artillery proceeded to attack the enemy's position in front, the mountain battery ascending a small hill on the left, whilst the cavalry and horse artillery, under Lieut. colonel Renny, v.c., R.H.A., making a rapid detour to the right, seized an eminence whence the horse artillery were able to enfilade the enemy's position. The enemy were then supposed to be driven from the first ridge across a valley to a second and higher ridge. Here the same manoeuvre was repeated, the cavalry threatening the retreating enemy on his way across the valley, and enabling the Horse Artillery to crown the end of the higher ridge. Our infantry following the retreating enemy drove him from the second ridge and finished the affair. The force then returned to cantonments and marched past the Ameer in quick time. Throughout the field day the Ameer accompanied the troops in his carriage horsed with a team of Horse Artillery horses, which carried him over the ridges in fine style. He appeared much interested in all he saw, and expressed himself much pleased with the practical nature of the evolutions. In the afternoon the Ameer called on Major-General Haly, Commanding the Jhelum Division, and on Lieutenant-Colonel Farrington, the Deputy Commissioner. In the evening, attended by Shahgassie Shere-dil Khan and his Wazir, he went to an amateur concert given by the officers of the 19th Regiment, and appeared much pleased. This morning he left for Attock under a Royal Salute. While here he occupied Lieutenant-Colonel Chamberlain's house, the same he lived in on his way down, and which was gorgeously decorated for the occasion. It is again beginning to rain. It is to be hoped it may not continue, or much damage will be done to the crops already in ear.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

A WISE DECISION.—At the request of the Secretary of State, the Government of India has intimated to the local Governments that all news of importance should in future be communicated by telegraph to the Home Government.

ORISSA.—The Commissioner of the Orissa Division has reported to the Bengal Government that the outturn of the season's crops is such as to render unnecessary any remission of Government revenue either to zemindars or on Government estates.

PUNJAB RAILWAY.—The construction of the Punjab Northern (State) Railway has not yet been commenced. Meanwhile, according to a contemporary, the staff and establishments, who are, perforce, doing nothing, have to be maintained at a cost, it is said, of some like a lakh of rupees per month.

PLOT AGAINST THE KING OF BURMAH.—The Rangoon Times, which now appears as a daily paper, announces that a conspiracy against the King has been discovered in his Majesty's zenana, but that the intrigantes have been pardoned. Fighting is still going on in Yunnan, but no detailed accounts reach the Burmese capital.

THE STUD COMMITTEE.—We read in a letter from Saharunpore that "the Stud Committee has been here and gone. The officers will very shortly assemble at Simla to come to a final decision as to whether the present system of supplying the several regiments with horses that cost twice their real value is indispensable."

JODHPORE.—The Pioneer instances some symptoms of amendment on the part of the Jodhpore Rajah. The difference between him and his chieftains will, it is believed, be adjusted by the grant of puttahs, and several lakhs of rupees have been placed in the hands of his dewan to satisfy the demands of the State. Colonel Keatinge returned from Calcutta to Ajmere on March 29.

THE KHETTREE RAJAH.—The small chief of Khettree, in Rajpootana, who was so highly and deservedly praised for his enlightenment by Sir John Lawrence, has published an autobiography. The extracts given by the Hindoo Patriot bring more grave charges against feudatory chiefs than any of our political reports. Polygamy, concubinage, slavery, want of education, drugging and drunkenness even among "respectable ladies and women," widow unchastity and infanticide, are all charged against the Rajpoot chiefs at least, and are mostly traced to Mahomedan influences. The autobiography seems to be written in fairly good English; we commend it to the school which upholds the divine right of princes in feudatory States as against the people from whom we have taken the power to rebel.

HURDWAR FAIR.—The Hurdwar fair has passed off without sickness, disturbance or accident of any kind. There were two bathing days, the 11th and 12th April, and quite two hundred thousand pilgrims have visited the fair. His Excellency the Viceroy was present for nearly two hours on the 11th, at the sacred Ghat, watching the bathers. He left on the morning of the 12th for Roorkee.

PESHAWUR RAILWAY.—It is said the Peshawur line of railway, instead of, as at first proposed, going round by Jalalpoore towards the salt mines, is to be carried through Jhelum. Economy being the order of the day, it is expected that, where practicable, the line will be laid on the bank of the Grand Trunk Road, that is, taking a twelve or fifteen feet wide track along the top and laying the ballast and rails on it.

THE FOLLOWERS OF THE AMEER OF CABUL AT PESHAWUR.—It is said that the men left by the Ameer at Peshawur are constantly committing themselves; on the 5th inst. two of them beat a carpenter near the Kotwali to such a degree that doubts were entertained of his life. Another of their number treated a bania the same way at the Cabuli gate of the city. No notice was taken by the police, as the men implicated belonged to the Ameer.

POOR SPORT.—On his way to Simla the Viceroy does not seem to have done much in the way of sport. A Saharunpoore news-letter says:—"His Excellency the Viceroy returned from his hunting expedition yesterday (13th) and left the same evening for Simla, accompanied by Major Bourke and others. I have not heard whether any tigers, &c., were bagged; but am rather inclined to the belief that the expedition proved a wild goose chase."

FRONTIER POLITICS.—Should the Ameer consolidate his power in Afghanistan, there is now little doubt, says the Friend of India, that, on the departure of Sir Donald Macleod ten months hence, the management of the frontier, our relations with Cabul, and our new intercourse with Russian Turkistan, will be entrusted to an officer of high political ability, with a jurisdiction more or less direct over the country from the Indus to that part of Russian-Turkistan in which our Consul may be stationed.

A GUBBINS SCHOLARSHIP.—Mrs. Bathoe, widow of the late Mr. Charles Gubbins Bathoe, of the Bengal Civil Service, formerly Magistrate and Collector of Delhi, has assigned the sum of eleven thousand rupees for the purpose of founding a scholarship to be attached to the Government College of Delhi, and called the "Gubbins Scholarship," in memory of her late husband, Gubbins being the name he is known by at Delhi. This fact is culled from the Punjab Educational Papers for 1867-68.

IRRIGATION.—The progress of irrigation projects, it appears, has not been arrested by Colonel Strachey's removal to the Public Works Secretariat. The Damooda canal is to be begun immediately. The Gunduck and Oudh canals are about to be sanctioned. Colonel Anderson has been inspecting the Delhi Works, and is satisfied with the progress on the head weir of the new canal for the Agra and Muttra districts. Work will soon be begun on part of the canal on the left bank of the Ganges for Rohilkund.

THE LOSHAIS.—Some of those who shared in the Loshai expedition are of opinion that these refractory hill men intend again to give trouble in November next. Their rajah is said to have some 20,000 fighting men, amongst whom are small bodies tolerably well armed and disciplined. Whatever may have led to the raid of last year, the "demonstration" it provoked on our part, will, we fear, serve only to suggest to the Loshais the organisation of another foray, and ten to one it would be successful.

BUST OF GENERAL NICHOLSON.—The bust of General Nicholson, ordered for the Dalhousie Institute, has arrived in Calcutta. It is said to be a very fine work of art, and with the busts of Havelock and Neil, received some time ago, will add greatly to the attractions of the Institute. The Englishman records that some progress is being made with the Institute building. The marble panneling and pillars are being erected, though at a rate which will even yet make the completion of the building a work of time.

SINGULAR ACCIDENT TO A LANCER.—A most extraordinary event is reported by the Mofussilite to have occurred to a trooper of her Majesty's 5th Royal Irish Lancers at Lucknow. The man was in the act of mounting a restive animal, having his lance slung on his left arm, when the horse plunged, and eventually succeeded in unseating the rider and impaling him on his lance, which passed through the right side of his ribs and came out near the spine. In order to extract the lance without endangering the man's life, it had to be sawn off near the head. There is every hope of the man's ultimate recovery.

A HOAX.—The Delhi Gazette relates a hoax perpetrated upon a poor old native of Delhi by a couple of budmashes, who induced him to give them 100 rupees in return for a young and beautiful bride whom they promised to procure for him. The marriage was to take place at Jugadhri, and thither the old man proceeded and was duly married, with as much haste as possible, to a veiled bride. The happy pair set out for Delhi, and on the way the bride got down from the ekka and vanished in the jungle. The bride was afterwards found to have been personated by a young male accomplice of the budmashes, shaved for the occasion, and the old man has since been able to get no satisfaction for his promised spouse.

THE RETURN JOURNEY OF THE AMEER OF CABUL.—Indian Public Opinion reports that his Highness Shere Ali Khan arrived at Jhelum on the 10th instant, between eight and nine o'clock A.M., and started the following morning for Rawul Pindee at five A.M. The evening of the day of his arrival was very lovely; and in company with the chief civil authority, Colonel Chamberlain and Captain Upperton, he spent some hours on the river fishing. The river was dragged, but the haul was not successful. The sunset was however so beautiful, and the snowy range was so gorgeously swathed in brilliant colours, that the steeled heart of the renowned warrior gave way to an emotional surprise, and burst forth with the exclamation, "How beautiful!"

CHOLERA AT AJMERE.—A correspondent of an up-country paper, writing from Nusseerabad on April 12, says:—"I have just heard that cholera of a virulent type broke out in Ajmere on Wednesday last, when four cases occurred, with three deaths. On Friday there were six deaths, all natives. I have no later information about the spread of the disease. No European had been attacked, but yesterday morning the company of the Royals stationed in the fort was marched out and quartered in the residency bungalow at some distance from the town. The fort is situated in the focus of the disease, and yet I hear that Captain Repton, the officiating deputy commissioner, was opposed to the removal of the troops. The appropriation of the vacant residency bungalow, his absent chief's winter palace, was, it is said, at the bottom of this remarkable policy."

PLETHORA OF FIELD OFFICERS.—A glance at the last Bengal Army list reveals the fact that the number of lieutenant-colonels exceeds the number of subalterns by 43, the strength of the two ranks being respectively 248 and 205. Recent calculations, again, make the number of lieutenant-colonels to stand at the end of the year at 281, while the number of subalterns can possibly be increased by only a few units. We see further that there are 26 lieutenant-colonels doing "duty" throughout the Bengal Presidency at an annual charge to the State considerably exceeding £25,000, and 18 majors who receive more than £13,000 for doing nothing. Now that Colonel Broome's scheme has been rejected by the Home Government, what escape is there left from the evils of such a system?—Friend of India.

DISTURBANCES IN THE EAST OF BURMAH.—The Burmah Herald, a vernacular paper, gives some particulars regarding the disturbances on the eastern frontier of Burmah. The primary cause seems to be the feud between Tzolopawghee, the chief of the eastern Karens, and the Zimmay chief, of which all the lawless characters on the frontier are taking advantage. The greatest evil resulting from these feuds is the cessation of the timber trade, to which so many circumstances are at present adverse. Lately several parties of foresters who had gone from British territory to the Karennee woods have had to pay duty twice over, and have been plundered of their elephants and other property, so that they are on the point of returning to British territory. The decline of the Moulmein timber trade has now become a matter of public anxiety.

INDORE.—We are sorry to learn from Indore that cholera pervades the greater part of the town, causing a panic amongst the inhabitants. Holkar, instead of making proper conservancy arrangements, issued lately the following absurd orders. All the bazaars and streets were ordered to be closed, in the houses no fire was to be lighted, no grain of any sort ground, nor any bunniah to weigh anything. No person was to carry one gurrah of water above the other, nor one basket upon another on his head. Every person having occasion to go out of the city was to go by one road, over the roadway of which a rope extended, and under this every one was to pass, returning by another street across which a similar rope was stretched. Besides this, each resident was to place five gurrachs of water at his door, under a penalty of 5 rupees! It was hoped that by doing this the god who particularly watches over Holkar's palace would be propitiated.—Times of India.

MILITARY.—Brigadier-General H. Milne has succeeded General Bouchier, C.B., in command of the Dinapore Brigade.—Lieutenant Colonel Ross, C.B., of the 3rd Battalion Rifle Brigade, has been appointed Commandant of the Kussowlie Depot.—The head-quarters of the Peshawur Division have been changed from Rawul Pindee to Murree during the coming hot season. The permission was granted to General Haly on the plea of inability to secure houses for the divisional staff at Pindee when the transference from Peshawur to that station was made.—We observe that Lieutenant Jordan, of the 107th Regiment, who was convicted at a former Sessions of the High Court at Allahabad of trespass in the house of Mr. Elias, has been sentenced to four months' imprisonment.—A bungalow in the Husars lines at Umballa was destroyed by fire on the morning of the 12th instant. This is supposed to have been the work of an incendiary, for it is the second time that this same house has been burned down in the same way.—It has been noticed for the information of all whom it may concern, that the order for building native lines at Jhelum was only issued on the 6th instant by the local senior military officer. The order had taken just three months to filter its way through departmental channels from Army Head Quarters to Jhelum. Surely the machinery of Army Head Quarters is rusty somewhere.—The Pioneer announces that Brigadier General Bouchier, C.B., has left Dinapore for Shillong, in the Cossyah Hills, to take up the command of the Eastern Frontier Brigade.

CONTEMPT OF COURT.—Mr. W. Taylor, of Patna, lately returned to India to check the proceedings of his native agents in certain cases before the courts. He has been addressing letters to the Englishman commenting severely on a judgment delivered by Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter. The Englishman states that, on Tuesday, he was arrested on a writ issued by the Chief Justice, for contempt of Court in writing such letters. Sir B. Peacock stated that the printer and publisher of the Englishman also was liable to prosecution—an opinion which raises an interesting question as to the liberty of the press in India.

LADY CANNING'S TOMB.—In our correspondence columns a letter will be observed stating that the expenses of the repairs of Lady Canning's tomb at Barrackpore have been defrayed by Lord Burke. Our thanks are due to Colonel Bowie for the correction, but our remarks regarding the state of the tomb need not be altered. The repairs have been carried out in such a manner as to mar the artistic beauty of the tomb. All the new mosaics are of an inferior stone, and the places of not a few have been supplied with putty or some other cement, and where the larger slabs have been repaired, the marks of the joinings have been left without any effort having been made at their concealment. The hideous thatched shed still remains, and the beautiful railings, the design of Colonel Yule, have now become anything but ornamental through the want of repainting and gilding. If Colonel Bowie could see the tomb in its present condition we have no doubt he would be indignant at the way in which the money has been expended.—Friend of India.

PETROLEUM IN BURMAH.—The Arracan News contains an interesting letter from Captain Plant, the Deputy Commissioner of Akyab, directing attention to the petroleum wells of the Arracan district, especially to those in Ramree and Sandoway. In the Laya-doung circle of the latter district the deepest well is thirty-two cubits, with an opening four feet square and a bottom about a cubit square. The sides of the well are ingeniously boarded, and a receptacle about four inches deep is constructed at the bottom, containing water on which the oil floats as it oozes out of the well. The well has been in existence for a number of years, and yields a dozen quart bottles a-day, which are sold at the rate of five per rupee. The oil looks like a blue whitish water with a dense coloured sediment, the surface liquid being the oil, the apparent sediment pure water. In the hands of an energetic officer like Captain Plant something may be made of this petroleum which would, if produced in any large quantity, make Akyab the richest district in British Burmah.

THE PUNJAB RAILWAY MANAGEMENT.—The Delhi Gazette remarks that the railway management at the Ghazeeabad junction has long been a great scandal. On account of some want of cordiality between the companies they will not arrange to run through-trains and make the Delhi line virtually a branch, as it should be. The consequence has been that for the first two months of its running there were only two or three days on which passengers by the E.I. express from Calcutta escaped the penalty of waiting sixteen hours at Ghazeeabad. The same result occurred whenever the trains on the Punjab line from Amballah were delayed. The down express on the E.I.R. would not wait for them, and they had to wait twenty-four hours. We have known people lose the English mail through this misfortune. We hear, however, with great satisfaction, that the trains are now running with a very tolerable punctuality. But the real remedy is a through-train from Calcutta to Amballah, with a rest of an hour at Ghazeeabad or Meerut to make up lost time.

CIVIL.—Mr. Morris, the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces, will, it is reported, take leave to Europe on the return of Mr. George Campbell in July next. Mr. A. S. Harrison, B.A., has been appointed Mathematical Professor, and Mr. G. A. Stack, Professor of Literature, in the Bareilly College; Mr. J. Sime, B.A., late Principal of the Doveton College, Calcutta, is appointed Professor of Literature in the Agra College. The Englishman states that Mr. E. C. Bayley, Home Secretary, has been appointed Vice-Chancellor of the University of Calcutta. The Chief-Justice of Calcutta has appointed Mr. Albert Birmingham Miller, Barrister-at-Law, to be the Official Assignee of the Court for the Relief of Insolvent Debtors in the Presidency of Bengal. The Varad Samachar says:—"It appears from the last residency orders that the Rev. J. Aitken is permanently appointed as Educational Inspector in Berar. In securing the services of this learned officer on 500 rupees the Government has indeed made a very cheap bargain. This gentleman, whom we have known for more than a quarter of a century, is remarkable for his eminence in English literature and high proficiency in the vernacular. We are confident that all schools of the circle to which he is at present appointed will prosper under his inspection." The Punjab Commission has at last obtained Colonel John Becher's step. Major Cra-croft has obtained the substantive Commissionership of the Derajat, but will continue to officiate at Lahore.

NATIVE DOCTORS' ENGLISH.—A copy of a report furnished by a native doctor in Rajshahye to the Deputy Magistrate of his subdivision, on the examination of the body of the native woman who was murdered:—"One excoriation in the right side of her back. Four ecchymosis in the whole position of trechea. Saw that of similar kind on the right side of her surgical neck, one just below the ramous position of her right lower jaw; another one on the right side of her frontle bone; one large, about two inches in length, on the circumference, is above the internal angular process of the frontle bone. The back side of the neck was also inflammatory state. The thumb of the corps crossed over to the pumps. [Sic in orig.] Feet flexed, turn downward Prolapsus enteræ [Uteri?—Ed. I.M.G.] mixed with blood, displaced from her female organ. Eye extraordinary congested, but little swelling on the right eye. Long congested and full of froth; right article and ventricol full of darkish colour of blood; liver congested; small intestines stomach spleen and kydnies also congested. It was also seen that about  $\frac{1}{2}$  pound of rad-dish effusion of serum on the pelvic cavity. Brain congested. Vessels of the piameter full of block blood; stomach full of  $\frac{1}{2}$  digested rice. Under these circumstances I conclude, that the lady died from the effects of strangulation made by robbers."—N.B. The above is given in original, to show how lamentably and absurdly deficient some native doctors are in a knowledge of English and of forensic medicine. This is by no means an exceptional specimen.—Indian Medical Gazette.

A REBEL OF 1857 SENTENCED TO DEATH.—The trial of the rebel sepoy, Ramtahul Singh, of the 17th Bengal Native Infantry, for the murder of Lieutenant C. W. Hutchinson, has concluded. He was committed by the magistrate of Azimgurh, on Monday, the 5th instant, to take his trial at the Sessions Court, where he was arraigned on the following Friday before Mr. Henry George Keene, judge. Five men deposed to having witnessed the prisoner shoot Lieutenant Hutchinson, and in consequence of which a dispute occurred between him and Madho Singh, as each claimed the post of adjutant of the regiment for his "heroic conduct" in having been instrumental in the murder of that officer, and that the revata questio was settled by the native officers, who decided in favour of Ramtahul Singh, by presenting him, in recognition of his services, with Lieutenant Hutchinson's double-barrel fowling-piece, sword, and buggy and horse. Two other witnesses deposed to having seen Ramtahul Singh shoot the officer, and on being interrogated by the Court as to how they recollected the prisoner, they replied that he was well known at Azimgurh as a renowned wrestler and good songster. The prosecution was conducted by Mr. J. E. Burton, District Superintendent of Burra-Bunkee Police, and Moonshee Mahomed Ikram, Government pleader, and as the prisoner was undefended the judge asked the vakeels if any of them would come forward and undertake the defence, but they refused, on the plea of its being considered that by doing so they would be placing themselves in a position of hostility to the Government. Mr. Keene disabused them of this false impression by explaining to them that according to British notions of justice every defendant was entitled to a fair trial; upon this Moulvie Tuwujjo Hossein undertook the defence. The defence set up by the prisoner was a denial of the crime, and a desultory statement of the manner in which he had spent his time since the Mutiny, and that he was in the bosom of his family, or, as he expressed it, with his "bal-bucha," at his native village in the Futtehpore District, when he was arrested by head constable Bindadeen, of the Burra-Bunkee Police, by order of Mr. Burton. After a fair and impartial trial the prisoner was found guilty by the assessors, under the regulation then in force, of the wilful murder of Lieutenant C. W. Hutchinson, in which verdict the judge concurring, he was sentenced to suffer death, subject to the confirmation of the High Court, North-Western Provinces.—Delhi Gazette.

STATION TALK.

OOTACAMUND, April 11.—I have just come up here from hot, dusty Madras. The place seems filling fast, and as many must come over the same ground, a few hints on the best way of managing the journey may be of interest. It economises time to leave Madras by the morning's train, when the time runs thus:—Reach Coimbatore by train at 10 P.M. Leave at once by bullock transit and reach Kullar at the foot of the Ghaut at 5 A.M. Mount a pony and reach Coonoor at 8 A.M. Take a horse transit and get into Ootacamund at 11 A.M. The cost is, Madras to Coimbatore, 1st class, Rs. 28.5. Coimbatore to Kullar Rs. 15; Kullar to Coonoor Rs. 8; Coonoor to Ootacamund Rs. 18½; total, Rs. 69.5. For every coolie required for luggage the charge is ten annas from Kullar to Coonoor. The Madras Carrying Company arrange everything; and I must say for this company that their depots and agents seem now under perfect control. They take you up at the Coimbatore Station and put you down at any house in Ootacamund, and, in the case of myself, this was done without a single hitch; what was wanted at each station, bullock, coolies, &c., was waiting at every place, and there was not five minutes' delay throughout. In one matter there is room for improvement however—in the transits. The covering of all that I saw seemed of painted canvas, and in the sun this becomes as hot as a sheet of iron, and the inside of the transit like an oven. I left Coimbatore in the transit at 1 P.M., and the heat was terrific. If the company would adopt the very simple plan prevalent throughout Malabar, of fastening a mat outside the roof, the heat in the transits would be greatly reduced; but my advice to every traveller is to go from Coimbatore to Kullar by night. Next to the means of transit a traveller is interested in the halting places, and the sort of refreshments obtainable. At the Coimbatore station there are good rooms; and something to eat and drink is generally to be got. A person staying some hours will, however, find the hotel more convenient. It is some three hundred yards from the station, and though styled an "hotel" is really a travellers' bungalow, in which refreshments are supplied; and the traveller has to pay the Government occupation fee of one rupee, plus the other charges. At Metapollum most people stay a short time. There are two "hotels" I believe, though I have seen but one. In order to ensure a good dinner here I sent an order beforehand for the preparation of dinner for two; and when we reached and were told the order had been received it was not unreasonable to expect something decent. Imagine, then, our disgust at finding a tough three anna chicken, and the remains of a leg of mutton, part in the shape of cutlets and about a table spoonful hashed! For my own part I declined touching the wretched spread. There is no halting place between Metapollum and Coonoor. A transit takes you five miles from the former station to a place called Kullar, where the ascent begins. At Coonoor, in a small iron house belonging to the Carrying Company and close to its office, capital chops are always to be had, and the delightful change from the heat of the plains doubles the relish with which they are discussed. The drive from Coonoor to Ootacamund is very pleasant, and is done in two hours. Before reaching Ootacamund most travellers have engaged a house or rooms. Not having had time to do this I looked over my Athenæum for advertisements, but was surprised to find that only East-end had room, and had determined to drive there. At Coonoor, however, I learnt that there were rooms available at Sylk's Hotel, and there we went and found first-rate rooms, first-rate food, and a lovely garden, the balmy air of which seems to the dust-begrimed pilgrim from the hot plains as if laden with

Saban odours from the spicy shore
Of Araby the bless'd.

This hotel is certainly a charming retreat, and the climate is "magnificent." I feel inclined now to feast my eyes on the flowers fronting the room I write in, backed as they are by the rich green of the Australian trees skirting the road, and forming a shade that may be strolled in during all hours of the day. The place seems made for rest, and even a few days' enjoyment of it is worth the money it costs. I am myself up but for a short time, and shall be off again before this reaches you, but my enjoyment of the change from Madras is intense, and, if any reader is hesitating about coming up here, let me assure him that the climate seems perfect. Often as I have been here and at Coonoor, the place never before seemed so enjoyable. Then this hotel is a model. Our accommodation consists of a drawing-room, a dining-room, a dressing-room, and two bath-rooms, all well furnished, and we are, if we choose, as private as in our own house. For bachelors there is a separate suite of bedrooms and a common room, where the papers can be read. Meals are served like clock-work, and are generally unexceptionable in quality. But in two matters there might be improvement; for morning coffee they will persist in serving tea; and in curries and mullagatawnies the cook is decidedly weak. When the general management is so admirable there should be no difficulty in remedying such trifles as these.—Athenæum.

Miscellaneous.

LAWRENCE ASYLUM.—The Madras Government have sanctioned the revised estimate, amounting to Rs. 3,94,137, for the construction of the male branch of the Lawrence Asylum at Ootacamund.

ARCHDEACON DEALTRY.—From Madras we learn that the Venerable Archdeacon T. Dealtry goes home this month, and will be succeeded in office by the Rev. Mr. Gorton. The Rev. Dr. Sayers, it is expected, will be appointed garrison chaplain of Fort St. George.

OFFICIAL CHANGES.—Major Hastings Fraser, recently appointed Military Secretary to the Resident at Hyderabad, has been obliged, consequent upon a severe domestic affliction, to go away on six months' private leave to Europe.

LIGHTING OF THE TOWN.—The Municipal Commissioners are at last going to improve the lighting of the town. We learn that three hundred kerosene lamps have been sanctioned, and that Popham's Broadway, including the new stone foot-paths, are the first to benefit by them.

FISH BREEDING.—The South of India Observer is happy to report that the fish introduced to the Ootacamund Lake by Dr. Day are not defunct. Fish have lately been seen in the lake from six to eight inches in length, and as the only original inhabitants of our lake waters were minnows of most diminutive proportions, and those seen by our contemporary's informant were decent-sized fish, it is concluded that the latter are the product of Dr. Day's experiment.

THE HEAT.—The weather is now unusually hot for the season, as will be seen by the following readings of the thermometer on the 14th of April in the years 1868 and 1869 respectively:—

Mean temperature ...	83.8	87.4
Maximum in shade ...	89.7	100.4
Minimum in shade ...	77.5	82.7

—Madras Times.

MILITARY.—Colonel C. G. Macdonald, commanding the 27th Madras Native Infantry, who was recently promoted to Brigadier-General, is to get the command of the Trichinopoly Division, in succession to General Duke. The Mail considers it questionable if this appointment is not premature, as the India-office sanction of the new arrangements for the command of the Southern Division has not yet arrived, and there is now a Brigadier-General in excess of the establishment. With respect to General Duke's departure, we read that he "bids farewell to Trichinopoly amid the regrets of all classes of the community, for his hospitality and unfailing courtesy have won the regard of every one. He now retires after nearly fifty-one years' service in India. Out of respect for a senior officer's feelings, the Commander-in-Chief postponed his visit to Trichinopoly early in the year, and will not inspect that station until late in the year." It is understood that Dr. Cooke, Acting Garrison Surgeon at Trichinopoly, is to be Civil Surgeon at Chittoor, in succession to Doctor Fleming, who retires from the Service. Doctor Peterkin, 35th Madras Native Infantry, will, it is thought, be posted to Trichinopoly. We, Madras Athenæum, are informed that after the expiration of the six months' leave Colonel Gillilan intends retiring from the Service, and that Colonel Greenlaw, the Presidency Paymaster, is most likely to succeed to the appointment, as Colonel Touch expects to get the Judge Advocate Generalship when it becomes vacant.

ACCIDENT.—On the morning of Saturday, April 17, the steamer Oriental, while coming into the roads, ran foul of the ship Dunphail Castle, and caused some damage to the bulwarks of the latter. On the same day a native brig went against the barque Blackwall, and took away the jibboom and bowsprit of the latter.

THE LATE NIZAM.—Indian Opinion vouches for the orthodoxy of the late Nizam. He kept in his private employ some four hundred Hafizes, or priests, who had learnt the whole Kuran by heart, forty moollahs for lecturing on the Bokhara Sharif and two hundred other Moolvies. This must have been a rather costly retinue, for these holy men are as a rule by no means averse to good living; but we dare say the Resident will manage to get along without their ghostly comfort, and the reverend fathers will be "disestablished." The late Nizam was also prodigal in his gifts and charities during the festivals of the Ramazan and the Muhurram.

STATION TALK.

DEOLALEE (CAMP), April 15.—We had the Commander-in-Chief, Lord Napier of Magdala, and suite here last Monday. He inspected the troops stationed here, and expressed himself highly pleased with the appearance of the men. In passing down the ranks of the detachments of the 95th Regiment and the 108th, his lordship having noticed a few men wearing two and three good-conduct badges, addressed the men as follows:—"I perceive among you some old soldiers. I hope the old ones will make good comrades for the young, and set them good examples. You are a fine lot of good-looking young men, and I hope to hear a favourable account of you all after joining your regiments, as I intend making inquiries about you hereafter." To the two batteries of the 6th Brigade of Artillery (the 1st and 5th) his lordship said he had not seen a better lot of young men for some time past; he would not forget them when he went to Bombay, but would send them up some means of amusing themselves, of which he thought they stood much in need. He visited the hospitals and seemed pleased with the arrangements. By-the-bye, the hospitals are located in two of the barracks, which are not at all suited for sick people; moreover, they are not situated in a proper place, being directly in front of the camp. This, I suppose, will be remedied when the Sanitary Commissioner comes up. The new barracks are double-tiled, which is a great improvement on the corrugated iron-roofed ones. Three have already been completed, and the remainder will be finished before another year passes over.

POONAH, April 17.—Instead of going on straight to Mahableshwar, Lord Napier has taken up his quarters here, and that in a way betraying no particular hurry to "move on." When he will go, nobody seems to know, or, at any rate, seems to inquire, which, as it is only the business of a very few people, is in every way commendable. Soldierlike, he will, no doubt, quietly take his leave just about the period when gossiping folks have comfortably settled it in their own minds that he had decided upon not going at all. His Excellency the Governor has been up, and down again, and is daily expected up on his way through once more. The arrival of the 59th Regiment from Ceylon, it being a corps particularly strong in officers, the total approaching thirty-five, or thereabouts, has led to a removal of those discomforts and tribulations which always arise with respect to officers' quarters at Wanowrie whenever any change is made in the regiments occupying them. Nor is there in this anything to be wondered at. The accommodation, which is both dear and bad in itself, is wholly insufficient to meet the ordinary demand in a comfortable way; and as the demand is now extra-ordinary, the incompetence of the supply to meet it is still more pronounced. It really is a great hardship, and one which falls with peculiar severity upon young married men. It has been once or twice pointed out that the only remedy for a state of things in whose defence not one word can be urged, would be that of Government constructing chambers for the single officers in the vicinity of the two Wanowrie Mess Houses—say enough to accommodate in all twenty bachelors. This would immediately and permanently reduce the demand for house accommodation, and would restore the conditions of the present supply to its natural state. It, indeed, seems to be a mistake in itself to allow private house owners to exist at all in a military cantonment. The reply to this usually is that Government does not care to encumber itself with a property which does not always find tenants. But, if private persons find the investment profitable, as they undoubtedly do, why should not Government do the same? The latter has the advantage of being its own bricklayer and carpenter, and could thus keep them in repair very much more easily and inexpensively than private owners are enabled to do; at any rate it ought to be able to do so. The advantage of being its own landlord, in purely military lines, would be that it would be able to regulate and fully understand the nature of the demand for accommodation, and would save one-half, at least, of the worry and vexation and ill-feeling which periodically arise whenever the occupants of these lines are changed. It appears that the Council-hall will not be completed prior to the beginning of the ensuing season, nor will the new Government-house. The members of the Western India Club are just now temporarily lodged in a large bungalow across the road, while the whole of the old building is being re-roofed, repapered, and subjected to a thorough overhauling. So many public works are now going on in Poona that the swimming baths will not be commenced just yet.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

KURRACHEE.—The Sindian understands that Captain E. Giles, the Master Attendant of the Kurrachee port, has obtained a furlough to Europe for fifteen months, and that Captain F. Fletcher, the commander of the Government steamer Satellite, will act for Captain Giles during his absence.

BOMBAY AND BARODA RAILWAY.—A telegram has been received in Bombay stating that the Secretary of State had decided that the original plan of the Bombay and Baroda Railway was to be carried out, so that it is now settled that the terminus of that railway will be at Colaba.

CIVIL.—The Observer understands that Mr. E. T. Richardson, full power magistrate, has been appointed city magistrate at Poona. The Deccan Herald understands that Staff-surgeon Bell is to succeed Dr. Beatty, as superintendent of the city jail at Poona, in addition to his present duties.—We learn from the Deccan Herald that Lieut. H. B. Jacob, of H.M.'s 24th Regiment N.I., has been selected by the Resident at Nagpore to be an educational inspector of that State.—The Hon. M. J. Shaw Stewart has been allowed furlough to England for eighteen months.—Surgeon-Major J. R. Miller, M.D., has been appointed to act as Examiner of Medical Accounts during the absence of Surgeon-Major Smith on leave, or until further orders.

MILITARY.—It is said that General Malcolm will shortly proceed on furlough.—Deputy Inspector General of Hospitals E. Mahaffy, C.B., has been posted to the Sind division of the army.—Sergeant J. Hackett, B company H.M.'s 1-2nd Queen's, committed suicide on Thursday morning last, by the aid of his rifle; the bullet passed under the chin and through his skull. An inquest was held at the hospital at noon, president, Lieutenant-General Berry, Commandant General Depot, the verdict of which we are not in a position to state.—Poona Observer.—We regret to hear of a serious accident which has happened to General Adams, commanding the Mhow division. When driving through the bazaar, on the 17th inst., on his way to Indore, one of his horses shied, the carriage was overturned, and the general was thrown to the ground, sustaining a fracture of his collar bone.

ACCIDENT AT SEA.—A shipping casualty occurred off the entrance of Bombay Harbour on the morning of April 19. The barque Atalanta, bound for Bushire, left Bombay harbour on Sunday afternoon, having a cargo of coals on board, as also a number of native passengers for the Persian Gulf. No sooner had the vessel well cleared the harbour mouth than she showed symptoms of leaking extensively, and rapidly filled. The pumps were set to work, but were unequal to keeping down the water, which soon reached the upper hold. The vessel's head was put to landward, but a panic seized the crew (the captain and two officers only were English), and they took to the boats, shortly after which the vessel sank in seven fathoms water. The first officer and a number of passengers reached Bombay in a pattimar on Monday night, and the captain with another batch on Tuesday night. A steamer was despatched to the scene of the wreck early on Tuesday morning, and found the third officer and several of the crew on the coast of Alibaug. Efforts are being made to recover some of the cargo, but the vessel will have to be blown up, as she lies right in the fairway to Bombay harbour. The foundering of the Atalanta has caused some surprise, for though she was a country-built barque, she has just undergone a complete overhaul in dock, and was considered in every way seaworthy. An inquiry into the circumstances will no doubt be ordered by Government. Eighteen of the passengers and crew are still missing, believed to have been drowned.

A NARROW ESCAPE.—The following tale is told in the Times of India by the chief actor:—"I had not proceeded far up the valley, and was standing on the brink of the nullah into which he had been seen to retreat, peering about me, when I heard the low, snarling growl peculiar to the tiger when meditating a charge, and had barely time to look in the direction from whence the sound came, when a magnificent tiger rushed at me from under a thick bush, where he had been lying perdu, about twenty paces distant from me. I had not a second to lose, and therefore let drive my right barrel at the head of the beast; the ball, however, only grazed his skull and passed through the bottom of his left ear, inflicting a deep flesh wound, but doing no further injury. Unchecked by my salute, on he came, and with my left barrel I gave it him right in the centre of his chest at not more than a yard from the muzzle of my rifle; although my second bullet, delivered at such close quarters, did instantly fatal execution, still the impetus of his rush was such that his body, carried forward with the last spurt of his vital energies, hurtled against me with tremendous force, knocking me clean off my pins, giving me an awkward backfall from top to bottom of the nullah of some fifteen feet. Of course we both toppled over at the same instant; and on recovering my wits, for I was momentarily stunned by the fall, I found myself underneath my late antagonist, he stark dead, with his head laid across my left arm and purpling my old phiz with his life's blood. With an effort I succeeded in getting myself clear of his carcass, but on attempting to stand discovered, to my chagrin, that my left leg was broken. Just then my two assistants, who had, on first hearing and seeing the tiger, taken to flight, came up, still under the effects of their late panic, and imagining the beast to be still alive, fired simultaneously at him, but with such bad aim that instead of hitting the tiger they very nearly 'did' for me. After an hour's delay a charpoy was procured, and I was carried to my wigwam (the tiger in rear slung on a pole), and next day I was brought into Jubbulpore to the Royal Artillery Hospital, where I am very kindly treated. Barring my dislocated leg and a few trivial bruises I am not much hurt. So you see my good shooting has once again saved me from a mauling."

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

LEAVE TO MEDICAL OFFICERS.

April 2.—No. 392.—The following despatch from H.M.'s Sec. of State for India is published for general information :—

Military.—No. 52.

India-office, London, Feb. 25, 1869.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council.

My Lord,—A question has been raised whether, under paragraph 5 of despatch of April 21, 1861, No. 172, published in G.O. by your Govt. on June 4, No. 497, a medical officer below the rank of deputy-inspector general of hospitals, who has obtained the qualifying certificate of efficiency on attaining the age of fifty-five years, may, at the expiration of the period of three years, for which such certificate holds good, again appear before a medical board in view to obtain another certificate of his efficiency for a further period of service.

2. It was observed in despatch of Aug. 22, 1866, No. 326 (paragraph 2), that it has been found necessary, even in the climate of Europe, to limit the age of regimental surgeons to fifty-five years, and it cannot be supposed that a wider limit of age is admissible in the more exhausting climate of India.

3. I fully concur in that observation, and although the rule has been relaxed to some extent in the case of those medical officers who entered the service prior to the promulgation of the Royal Warrant in India, I have caused an officer who had submitted the question to be informed that it is not intended that an officer, who has been examined on attaining the age of fifty-five years, and obtained the certificate of efficiency above referred to, shall be allowed to remain in the service for any longer period than the three years for which such certificate holds good.

4. The proviso that in no case will a medical officer under the rank of deputy-inspector general be permitted to remain on the effective list after he shall have attained the age of sixty years, was intended to apply to the cases of those medical officers only who, upon the introduction of the Royal Warrant, had already passed the limit of fifty-five years.—I have, &c.,

ARGYLL.

BANDS—INSPECTIONS.—On all occasions when troops march past in brigade, and it is found impracticable to mass the bands of the regiments composing it, one band will be selected (which, as a general rule, should be that of the leading regiment) to play the whole brigade past the saluting point.

PAY AND ALLOWANCES.—With reference to G.O. No. 92, dated May 4, 1867, it is notified that, under instructions from the Government of India, all claims of officers to command pay for services on passage and prior to arrival in India must be sent to the War-office for sanction before they can be charged for by regimental paymasters and officers commanding regiments and batteries of royal artillery.

TRAVELLING EXPENSES—HOUSE RENT.—The Government of India have decided that Presidency house-rent is exempted from calculation in determining the claim of an officer to travel at the public expense, as it is not pay or salary in the sense of G.O. No. 374 of 1868.

RETIREMENTS.—The retirement from the service, by the sale of his commission, of Major Bell, 3rd hussars, has been accepted by the Commander-in-Chief in India, subject to approval by her Majesty; dated March 27. The Commander-in-Chief in India has accepted the retirement from the service, by the sale of his commission, of Capt. Maxwell, 3rd hussars, subject to approval by her Majesty; dated March 29.

STAFF SALARY OF INTERPRETERS.—With the sanction of her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, the Rt. Hon. the Governor gen. in Council is pleased to fix the staff salary of the interpreters to H.E. the C. in C. in India and of the C. in C. at Madras and Bombay respectively at Rs. 450 and Rs. 250 per mensem, in addition to the staff corps pay of their rank, with effect from March 31, 1869.

SCHOOLS—WOMEN AND CHILDREN.—In continuation of G.O. No. 57 of 1869, an instance having occurred in which a soldier embarked for England with his regiment, leaving his son in the Roman Catholic Orphanage, Mussoorie, the Commander-in-Chief directs that officers commanding corps about to quit India shall satisfy themselves that children of the men in those institutions are withdrawn in sufficient time to admit of their embarkation with their parents, as subsistence allowance will not be continued after departure of the parents from India.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

HARNESS AND SADDLE CONTRACTS.

Fort St. George, April 13.—No. 132.—The following extract from a communication from the Government of India, dated March 5, No. 287, is published:—

14. There only remains the question of the position of the harness and saddle contract to be dealt with. The operation of this contract, which has, comparatively, only lately come into force in the Madras presidency, does not, H.E. in Council thinks, appear to be fully understood by battery officers serving there.

Horse Artillery Batteries.

Per harness per month	...	...	...	Rs.2	0	0
Per saddle	...	...	...	1	0	0

Light Field Batteries.

Per harness per month	...	...	...	1	8	0
Per saddle	...	...	...	1	0	0

15. The conditions on which the saddle and harness contract allowance was granted are set forth in the Bengal Pay and Audit Regulations of 1849, section II., page 7, viz. :—

Sets of saddles and harness, as issued from the Government stores, are to be maintained complete in all respects from the contract allowance; renewals on account of condemnation or loss of component parts of such sets are not admissible.

Troop officers are bound to renew such saddles whenever it may be required, and to keep the saddles in a perfectly efficient state in every other respect, save and except to supply new saddle trees.

16. Though these regulations might seem capable of being interpreted to mean that the saddlery and harness were to be renewed out of the contract allowance, such was never done, nor is now done, the contract allowance being only granted for maintenance and repairs during the stipulated periods of duration—that is, for the interval between one renewal and another—which, as laid down in G.G.O. No. 261, of Oct. 14, 1812, is five years for saddles and four years for harness, provided they are then declared by a committee to be unserviceable.

17. This, however, would appear, from the remarks of Brig. gen. Brice, c.b., royal art., forwarded with your letter, No. 3,198, dated Sept. 19, 1865, not to have been understood, as he refers to the probable unprofitable nature of the contract, on account of officers being obliged to renew saddlery and harness, which have been in use the prescribed period and condemned by a committee, out of the allowance granted for the repairs of the same.

18. Undoubtedly, were this the case, there would be much justice in Brig. gen. Brice's remarks; but, on this misapprehension being removed, the Government of India have no doubt the rates for the saddlery and harness contracts will be accepted as sufficient in Madras as they are in the Bengal and Bombay presidencies.

TOUR OF INSPECTION.—The C. in C. being about to proceed on a tour of inspection, head-quarters will be established at Coonoor on May 4. Further movements will be notified hereafter. The following officers will accompany the C. in C. :—the C. in C.'s personal staff, the adjt. general, the quartermaster-general, the judge advocate-general, the officiating deputy adjutant-general, the assistant adjutant-general, R.A., and the assistant quartermaster-general.

RETURNED TO DUTY.—The undermentioned officers have returned to duty, by permission of the Home Government, without prejudice to their rank :—Captain Court, assistant superintendent of police, North Arcot; Capt. Howes, attached to 35th L.I.; Lieut. Campbell, attached to 22nd N.I.; Lieut. Wilkinson, attached to 11th N.I. The above gentlemen arrived at Madras on April 8. Lieut. Wilkinson, attached to 11th regt. N.I., and Surgeon Shaw; both arrived at Madras on March 27.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

THE NEW MILITARY FURLOUGH RULES.

Bombay Castle, April 15.—No. 314.—In continuation of G.G.O. No. 568 of 1868, the following correspondence between the Government of India and the Commander-in-Chief in India is published:—

Letter from the Secretary to the Government of India, Military Dept., No. 1,469, of Jan. 30, 1869, to the Adjt. gen.

In requesting you to move H.E. the Commander-in-Chief to cause the decision of H.R.H. the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, submitted with your No. 73c, dated 4th inst., in regard to the application of the term "temporary leave of absence" (in para. 2 of the Secretary of State's No. 254 [G.G.O. No. 797, of Aug. 19 last], dated July 16 last), to be published in H.E.'s general orders, I am desired to suggest that, in order to prevent any misapprehension, it should be at the same time pointed out that the "furlough to Europe" reckons as service for the rank of colonel under the five years' rule only when the major and brevet lieutenant holds a qualifying staff appointment, and not when he is in command of a regiment.

Letter from the Military Secretary, Horse Guards, dated Nov. 17 last, to the Commander-in-Chief in India.

Having submitted to the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief your letter of Sept. 26 last, I am directed to intimate to your Excellency that H.R.H. considers that the term "temporary leave of absence," used in the Secretary of State's despatch quoted by you, should be held to include "furlough to Europe," in calculating the service for colonel of a major and brevet lieutenant holding a qualifying staff appointment.

EAST INDIA COMPANY.—Colonel Sykes, M.P., has been unanimously re-elected chairman for the year ensuing.

CONSULAR APPOINTMENT.—(FOREIGN OFFICE, May 10.)—The Queen has been pleased to approve of Mr. Leon Hernandez as Consul at Rangoon for his Majesty the King of the Belgians.

WILL OF GENERAL MORGAN.—The will of General John Morgan, C.B., H.E.I.C.S., who died at St. Helen's, Swansea, aged 84, was proved in London under £3,000. He entered the army in 1800, and from that time to 1819 he was actively engaged in many parts of India.

INSTITUTION OF CIVIL ENGINEERS.—At the closing ballot for the Session 1868-69, on May 11, Mr. Charles Hutton Gregory, President, in the chair, eleven candidates were balloted for as associates, and declared to be duly elected, among whom was Mr. Edward Brotherton Carroll, locomotive superintendent, Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway.

MAJOR JAMES LETT, V.C., died on Thursday morning, aged 42. The gallant deceased served with the 14th Hussars in the Persian Expedition of 1857, and while serving with the Central India Field Force, under Sir Hugh Rose, was awarded the Victoria Cross "for conspicuous bravery at Betwa, on the 1st April, 1858, in having charged alone and rescued Captain Nedd, of his regiment, when surrounded by a large number of rebel infantry."

LAND MORTGAGE BANK OF INDIA.—The report of the Land Mortgage Bank of India (Limited), to be presented on the 21st May, states that, although on this occasion the profit and loss account shows a balance of only £1,108, the position of the bank has materially improved, and that its progress towards a more sound condition, although gradual, has been decided and substantial. It states also that no call will be necessary during the present or ensuing year.

DEATH OF MAJOR-GENERAL CHRISTIE.—We have to record the death of Major-general John Christie, C.B., of the Bengal Establishment, which took place on the 7th inst. in Italy. He was formerly in the Staff Corps, and served at the siege and capture of Bhurtpore in 1826; he commanded the 1st Regiment of Cavalry in Shah Shoojah's force, during the campaign in Afghanistan of 1839-40-42, and was engaged in different operations leading to the re-occupation of Cabul. He also served with the army of the Sutlej, and was present at the actions of Moodkee, Ferozeshah, and Sobraon, and throughout the Punjab campaign. He obtained the rank of major-general on the 21st of February, 1861, and for his distinguished military services was in March, 1867, nominated a Companion of the Order of the Bath.

ORIENTAL LITERATURE.—The Oriental Translation Committee is busy on the third and fourth volumes of Ibn Khallikan's Biographical Dictionary, by Baron de Slane; the third volume is actually at press; and the MS. of the fourth volume is very nearly completed. The Oriental Translation Fund, it may be of interest to learn, was established just forty years ago; it has enjoyed the patronage of George IV., of William IV., and of her present Majesty, and its successive presidents have been the Earl of Munster, Sir Gore Ouseley, the Earl of Clare, the Earl of Ellesmere, Professor Wilson, and Mr. Beriah Botfield. The published works of the society are more than seventy in all. The Sanscrit translations include those of the Sankhya Karika, Rig Veda, and Vishnu Purana. Amongst those from the Arabic are found the travels of Ibn Batuta, and of the Patriarch Meccarius, Al-Makkari's "History of the Muhammadan Dynasties in Spain," and the extensive Lexicon of Hajji Khalifa. There are also on the list translations from the Persian, Syriac, Ethiopic, Armenian, Chinese, and Japanese languages.

SOLDIERS' ESTATES.—For the information of the next of kin of soldiers who have died intestate, leaving sums of money or other effects, the authorities of the War-office have latterly issued, periodically, a list of the names of deceased soldiers, with the sums of money they have left set opposite each name. Such lists have hitherto appeared in the Times and one or two other papers; but we observe by an advertisement in the Times of the 13th inst., that the usual list required to be published by the "Regimental Debts' Act, 1863," is omitted; claimants being referred to the London Gazette and the Army List, or "to the quarters of the several staff officers for the recruiting and pension service throughout the United Kingdom," for the names of soldiers who have died intestate. We cannot recognise the efficacy or sufficiency of this mode of advising relatives of "soldiers' balances unclaimed;" and we doubt even the legality of omitting to advertise the lists in the public journals. Whether, however, the lists are consulted or not in the Gazette, or at recruiting quarters, by next of kin, claimants, being aware of the death of a relative in the army, should send all the particulars concerning the deceased soldier to the War-office by letter, being particular to give the date and place of the soldier's birth, enlistment, and death, and the name of his regiment. Applications are required to be addressed by letter, "To the Under Secretary of State, War-office, London, S.W."—marked outside "Soldiers' Effects."—Broad Arrow.

MADRAS RAILWAY COMPANY.—The report of the Madras Railway Company, which has been issued, states that the net receipts of the half-year ending 31st December last have been £165,433, against £130,217 in the corresponding half of the previous year. The mileage worked showed an increase of 3½ per cent. in the same period, and the further extension of the line to Goote may be looked for by the end of next month. The works beyond Goote, both those of the Bellary branch and the main line to Raichore, the point of junction with the railway coming from Bombay, are being urged forward. The traffic receipts on the north-west line have increased very rapidly, and there seems every reason to expect that as the line advances into the cotton districts the traffic will continue advancing also.

THE NEW LIFE BUOY.—A correspondent of the Broad Arrow gives the following description of Welsh and Bouchier's new and improved life buoy:—This buoy was fitted to H.M. Indian troop ship Crocodile, and was tried at sea at Malta and at Alexandria with perfect success. On one occasion it supported one man standing up inside and four outside with great ease, whilst the ordinary buoy now in use in the Navy, which was tried against it, sank with two men on it. After the trial at Alexandria the Viceroy's yacht started with the model of it for the inspection of his Highness and the Prince of Wales. Captain Campbell, of the Ariadne, and Captain Watson, of the Crocodile, besides a number of Egyptian and other officers, were present at this trial. The general opinion seemed to be that it was infinitely superior to anything of the kind known at present, and that a man standing up inside such an apparatus as that, with the vital organs out of the water, and protected from sharks, exhaustion, or starvation, was perfectly safe. One great fault in the ordinary buoy is that it cannot be perceived except at a short distance, whereas this apparatus has two telescopic masts, with flags some seven feet above the level of the sea, to attract, not only his own attention when overboard, but the attention also of passing ships in case the man overboard cannot regain his ship by reason of bad weather. The models can be seen showing different modifications of this life-preserving apparatus, either as buoys or rafts, at 35, King William-street, London Bridge, E.C.

THE MAILS FOR INDIA.—(SOUTHAMPTON, May 15.)—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's screw steamship Pera, Captain T. Jamieson, sailed to-day for Gibraltar, Malta, and Alexandria, with the India, China, Japan, and Australian mails, a general cargo, and 147 boxes of specie, jewellery, &c., value £57,393. 0s. 7d., consigned as under:—For Galle—Sovereigns, £10,000. For Bombay—Bar gold, £10,000; watches and jewellery, £105. For Madras—Gold and silver coin, £1,784. 12s.; gold thread and watches, £1,546. For Calcutta—Plate, watches, and jewellery, £2,055. 12s. For Singapore—Jewellery, plate, and watches, £304. For Hong Kong—Dollars, £24,861. 19s. 7d.; gold and silver thread, watches, &c., £505. For Shanghai—Gold and silver watches, £197. 4s. For Yokohama—Watches, £794. For Hobson's Bay—Jewellery and plate, £2,761. 13s. For King George's Sound—Jewellery, &c., £400. For Melbourne—Watches, £100. For Sydney—Jewellery, &c., £1,778. The Pera takes out thirty-nine first and forty second class passengers, and thirty-four proceed by the corresponding steamer from Marseilles, making a total of 113, among whom are General and Mrs. Penny, Captain Chichester, Captain G. H. Chapman, Sir Hercules and Lady Robinson, two Misses Robinson, and two children for Ceylon; Major G. D. Eales, Staff-surgeon A. Temple, and Captain and Mrs. Henchy for Bombay; Colonel Rowlandson for Madras; Colonel and Miss Maxwell, Lieutenant-colonel and Mrs. Morgan, Dr. and Mrs. Loch, and Captain and Mrs. Weston for Calcutta; Dr. Orto and Signor Velini for Yokohama; Captain Lyons for Sydney, &c.

DEATH OF SIR E. WETHERALL.—Sir E. Wetherall, Under-Secretary for Ireland, died at The Lodge, in the Phoenix-park, between seven and eight o'clock on Tuesday evening, May 12. He had attended to the duties of his office as usual during the day, and taken horse exercise in the afternoon. He complained that the horse had pulled strongly and somewhat wearied him, but he was in full dress, about to proceed to a dinner party at Sir Joseph Napier's, when he died almost without a moment's warning. He had for some time been affected with disease of the heart, and was attended by Dr. Barker and Dr. Hudson, who had warned him against over-exertion or excitement. Sir Edward Wetherall was son of the late General Sir George Augustus Wetherall, G.C.B., Governor of the Royal Military College, Sandhurst. He served in Canada during the rebellion of 1837 and 1838. During the Crimean war he was Assistant Quartermaster-general, and was present at the battles of Alma, Balaklava, and Inkerman, and at the siege and fall of Sebastopol. He acted also as Deputy Quartermaster-general of the Turkish Contingent at Kerch, and was subsequently Director-general of Land Transport in the Crimea. In China he served also as Deputy Quartermaster-general, and was appointed chief of the staff of the Central India Field Force in the Indian mutiny. In the campaign of 1858 he commanded the South Oude Field Force, and from 1865 to 1868 he was Deputy Quartermaster-general at headquarters. He was a Knight of the Legion of Honour, of the third class of the Medjidie, a C.B., and Aide-de-Camp to the Queen. His administrative ability and extraordinary working powers recommended him to the late Government as one admirably qualified to fill the office of Under-Secretary for Ireland. A reward of £100 a-year for good service is vacant by the death of Major-general Sir E. Wetherall.

GREAT SOUTHERN OF INDIA RAILWAY COMPANY.—The report of the directors states that the junction of the company's line with the Madras Railway at Erode was effected on the 1st of January, 1868, from which date the entire length of 168 miles had been in operation. The average length of line worked over during the preceding twelve months was 135½ miles. The average gross receipts per railway mile (exclusive of railway materials) was, in 1867, £360 per mile, and, in 1868, £429 per mile. The average net receipt per railway mile in 1867 was £225, and, in 1868, £237. The net revenue for the year 1868 was £39,779, being equal to nearly 3 per cent. on £1,350,000, being the total amount of capital raised. The number of passengers carried in 1868 was 765,666, against 432,296 in the previous year, being an increase of 77 per cent.; the receipts from this source were respectively £42,224 and £29,074, showing an increase of £13,150, or 46 per cent. The quantity of merchandise carried was, in 1867, 47,696 tons, while in 1868 it was 57,226 tons, the receipts being £15,145, and £25,363 respectively, showing an increase of £10,218. The expenditure amounted to £27,682, or 47·57 per cent. in 1867, and to £33,601, or 45·79 per cent. in 1868, showing an increase of £5,918. The net revenue for the year 1867 amounted to £30,508, and for the year 1868 to £39,779, showing an increase of £9,271. The sum set aside out of revenue towards the formation of a fire insurance fund had, with the sanction of the Government, been increased from 5,000 to 10,000 rupees per annum, dating from the 1st of July last. The balance at the credit of that fund on the 31st of December last was £2,541. The Government of Madras, on receiving, in August last, the surveys for the Southern Extension from Caroor to Tinnevely and Tuticorin, recommended to the Supreme Government the construction of the line by this company; and the directors had reason to expect that the subject would receive the early consideration of the Secretary of State for India. The capital account showed that £1,231,481 had been expended, leaving a balance of £118,519.

ACTION FOR DAMAGES.—Major Taylor, late of the 35th Madras Native Infantry, brought an action in the Court of Queen's Bench on Monday week against the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, for injuries he sustained through falling into the bullock hold of the company's ship Pera, the covering of which in the saloon floor had been left open. On examination by two medical men, his right shoulder was found to be dislocated, they treated him accordingly, and the plaintiff sailed for India in the steamer. He suffered great pain throughout the voyage, and on arrival in India, being unable to perform his professional duties, was obliged to decline an offer of a staff appointment at Nagpore, and to accept half-pay. He returned to England at the beginning of this year, and has since been under the care of Dr. Erichsen. His arm has become permanently shortened and useless. He said that his injuries were very severe, and he was utterly unable to draw his sword, or to hold a pen, or even to dress himself. His pay and allowances in India amounted to £950 a-year, and his half-pay as major to £292 a-year. The company, in their defence, contended that there was plenty of light in the saloon, that Major Taylor had no business there, and that he fell into the hold through his own carelessness, not looking where he was going. The Lord Chief Justice, in summing up to the jury, said that it was admitted that Major Taylor had sustained very serious injury, but the question for their consideration was whether the defendants ought to be held liable for that injury. Two points were involved in that consideration—first, whether there was negligence on the part of the company's servants; next, whether the plaintiff contributed by his own negligence to the disaster he met with. If the jury should think that the plaintiff had business on board, and that it was usual and consistent with the course of passengers' practice for him to be there on that day, the defendants were certainly bound to keep that part of the ship in a reasonable state of safety, or to give notice of any risk which he might run of an unusual or unnecessary danger. It was also for them to decide whether the plaintiff exercised the prudent caution which was expected of every one, in order, to use a common expression, to take care that he does not come to grief. The jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff, damages £3,750.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, WEDNESDAY, May 12.—INDIAN RAILWAYS.—Mr. KINNAIRD asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether he had any objection to lay upon the table of the House copy of the despatch recently received from the Government of India regarding the construction of new lines of railway in the three Presidencies.—Mr. GRANT DUFF: The despatch to which my hon. friend refers is still under consideration. There will not, I believe, be any difficulty about laying it on the table when a decision has been arrived at with regard to the matter of which it treats.

THE PUNJAB TENANCY ACT.—Sir C. WINGFIELD asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether a petition had been received from the chiefs and landowners of the Punjab complaining of an Act passed in October last, called the Punjab Tenancy Act, as an infringement of the customs of that province; and, if not, whether he had heard that such a petition had been submitted to the Governor-general for transmission to the Secretary of State; and whether the Secretary of State for India had sent any instructions to the Governor-general on the subject of the above law.—Mr. GRANT DUFF: Vague rumours about this petition have reached me, as they appear to have reached my honourable friend, but no official information has been received about it, and no instructions whatever have been sent.

HOUSE OF LORDS, THURSDAY, May 13.—GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT AMENDMENT BILL.—On this Bill being reported as amended in committee, the Earl of ELLENBOROUGH criticised the provision for shortening the tenure of membership in the Council of India.—Some discussion arose on a proposition by the Marquis of SALISBURY, resisted by the Duke of ARGYLL and Lords LYVEDEN and HALIFAX, to vest in the Crown the sole power of appointing to vacancies in the council. Lord LAWRENCE believed it would be better for the council and better for India that the members of the council should all be nominated by the Crown. Whatever might be the sense of responsibility of a council, that of the Secretary of State must be still greater, and being mainly responsible to Parliament and the country for the working of the Government of India, he would always consult the different members of the council as to the best man he could select, while the fact of the nomination being in his hands would give the best security for the best man being nominated. There was a tendency, moreover, in cases of selection by the council for gentlemen to go about and canvass them. It was not desirable to place councillors in a false position and encourage that tendency. The nominations by the council and by the Secretary of State had hitherto been equally good, but in the long run there would be a greater security for obtaining able men if the latter had the entire selection. As to the qualification, he thought the field of selection would be unwisely limited if confined to men who had not returned from India more than five years. It was true matters were in a transition state, but that transition was by no means so great as was generally supposed. Certain changes were coming over India, but the feelings, sympathies, and aspirations of the people were very much what they were formerly. Were they themselves consulted he believed they would prefer the selection as councillors of men of long standing in the service, rather than of younger men.—Lord CAIRNS was of opinion that the Secretary of State, who was responsible for the Government of India, might properly be made responsible also for the choice of members of the Council.—Earl GREY maintained that the authority of the Council depended much on the opinion in India of its independence, and that this opinion would be weakened by depriving the members of the Council of their power of electing part of their colleagues.—The Duke of ARGYLL stated that the Government were opposed to having this additional patronage forced upon them, but would, though defeated, nevertheless proceed with the Bill.—On a division, Lord Salisbury's amendment was carried by 89 to 53.—The Marquis of SALISBURY moved an amendment for the purpose of removing ambiguities on the question already two or three times mooted in this House, whether the Secretary of State is liable to be overruled by his Council in regard to grants or appropriations of Indian revenue.—The Duke of ARGYLL, in reply, supported his former view, that the Secretary of State is not subjected by the present Act to any general financial control by the Council; and he explained that the doubt had originated in discussions at the Council while the Marquis of Salisbury was himself Secretary of State. He showed that the proposed amendment would produce infinitely greater ambiguities and difficulties than any construction of the existing provision was liable to. The amendment would, moreover, confer a dangerous discretion on the Secretary of State in financial matters.—The Marquis of SALISBURY repudiated some opinions as to telegraphic and railway communication, which he understood to have been attributed to him by the Duke of Argyll; but as he was satisfied that he had in fact practically converted the duke to his view of the existing law, he was willing to withdraw the amendment, which, after some observations by Lord CAIRNS and the Duke of ARGYLL, he accordingly did.

DYSENTERY, CHOLERA, FEVER, AGUE, COLDS, &c.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S (Ex. Army Med. Staff)

CHLORODYNE

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE. The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Remedial Uses and Action.

THIS INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of Opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Colics, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

Those exhaustive diseases—Fever, Ague—so common in tropical climates, are rapidly arrested, and the cold stage in a few moments checked by a timely dose, when warmth and a general glow of the system is established, and comfort secured.

As a Sedative, Neurotic, and Antispasmodic, it is unequalled by any other known Medicine, and not to be surpassed in its specific effects.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1861.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec., 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered, the patient recovered.

Mrs. Forbes, wife of the Chaplain at Paris.—"I cannot speak too highly of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne; I have not in any single instance been disappointed with the result, even in aggravated cases of Indian Cholera."

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not supply a want and fill a place."

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

CHLORODYNE, the Great Remedy for CHOLERA.—See Report in the Times, Sept. 6, from the Malta Correspondent, who states, August 24th, that "108 cases and eighty-one deaths occurred at Messina; 50,000 people fled from the town, which is in a most deplorable condition; that Chlorodyne has been found most efficacious as a remedy, and a number of persons are reported to have been saved by its use."

Now as there are various imitations sold under the name of Chlorodyne, containing Indian Hemp, Morphia, &c., ingredients highly adverse to the cure of Cholera, the public are cautioned against the use of any compound under the name of Chlorodyne, unless it bears the name of Dr. J. Collis Browne, who coined the word Chlorodyne to designate his wonderful discovery, which he fully tested for many years in her Majesty's Service before introducing it to the public, the wonderful success of which has given rise to various imitations totally different to genuine Chlorodyne. See the decision of Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood, reported in the Times, July 13th, 1861.

The extraordinary medical reports on the efficacy of Chlorodyne renders it a subject of most vital importance that the public should obtain the genuine, which is now sold under the protection of the Government of Great Britain, authorising a stamp, bearing the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne," without which none is genuine. Sold in bottles, 1s. 1/4, 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d., by all Chemists. Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London.

PUBLISHERS' NOTICE.

The writer of these volumes—an accomplished member of a family whose name is conspicuous in Indian story—being now resident in India, they have not had the benefit of her final corrections. It is hoped, however, that this inevitable drawback will detract but little from the pleasure to be afforded by the perusal of the tales, which are, indeed, what they profess to be, stories of English Homes in India, represented as such homes are in different parts of the country and under various social and professional aspects. They endeavour fairly and without exaggeration to illustrate Anglo-Indian life as it is, in its many varying phases, and to bring upon the scene, in their everyday costume, many kinds of Anglo-Indian workmen, from the Resident at a Native Court, to the subaltern officer and the railway employé; and it is believed that all who have visited the countries described will recognise the truth of the portraiture.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, May 1; Agra and Calcutta, April 27; Madras, April 26.

THE great Tayler case finally came off on the 24th of April in the Calcutta High Court. Mr. Tayler on the 20th had tendered an apology which really apologised for nothing, so the trial was resumed on the 24th. Sir Barnes Peacock went carefully over the whole question, showing how amply Mr. Tayler had laid himself open to Mr. Justice Mitter's unkind criticisms on his dealings with the Ranee of Tikari, and exposing the deceptive character of Mr. Tayler's counter-statements in the Englishman. "When a critic wilfully concealed from the public the real facts of his own case simply for the purpose of serving his own end, could that be said to be fair and honest criticism?" Sir Barnes appealed from the hasty comments of the Calcutta Press to the well-considered verdict of the Calcutta Bar, which would have been given against him had he acted wrongly in this matter. The process by attachment he defended on the plea of Mr. Tayler's intention to leave Calcutta, and the trial itself was instituted "not merely to vindicate the honour and dignity of the Bench, but also to vindicate the character of the gentleman whom Mr. Tayler had maligned." He owned himself "an unflinching advocate of the freedom of the Press," and approved of "the strictest scrutiny" into the acts of public men. But he insisted on the duty of fair criticism without concealment of facts on either side, and, therefore, at the risk of making himself unpopular, he must find Mr. Tayler guilty of contempt of Court.

MR. TAYLER was sentenced to a month's imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 500. The imprisonment however was to be remitted if a full apology were made to Mr. Justice Mitter before the 3rd of May. As Mr. Tayler has since "found" that his charges against Mr. Mitter were wholly groundless, he will not, we presume, be sent to jail. If so, he may fairly be considered to have got no more than he deserved, in spite of the cry of tyranny raised by several of the Calcutta journals. Against one of these, the Englishman, an action was pending for contempt of Court in the making of unfair reflections on the Court's procedure against Mr. Tayler while the case was still going on. Sir Barnes Peacock may have legal warrant for this also, but how about the other count of the charge against the Englishman? Because that journal opened a subscription to pay Mr. Tayler's fine, is it therefore punishable for contempt of Court? That is a new doctrine in the eyes of most people, a doctrine worthier of Russian absolutism than of English equity. If such subscriptions be a legal offence, a great many of our countrymen must have been guilty of it in the course of their lives. We cannot for a moment suppose that any personal grudge has lent an air of undue harshness to Sir Barnes Peacock's proceedings; but it is not unlikely that his eagerness to uphold the character of a native colleague has led him further than he would have gone had an English judge been criticised in the same way.

FOLLOWING in the wake of the Bombay Gazette, the Times of India caps the statements quoted by us last week from the former journal, with regard to the questions discussed between Shere Ali and Lord Mayo, with further assurances to the effect that Lord Mayo did not acknowledge Yakoo Khan as the Ameer's heir, that the Ameer expressed no wish on the subject, that no agreement was made with him touching "a reasonable subsidy in money," and that he never even alluded to a Persian or Russian invasion. The statement that the Ameer was formally recognised as sovereign of all his father's territories is likewise declared to have been "far too emphatic." According to the Times' Calcutta correspondent Lord Mayo is not at one with the Home Government on the question of our Afghan policy; an assertion to which no credence should be given in the face of so many opposing facts and indications.

THE ceremonies of the Mohammedan Mohurram have aroused the usual outcry on the part of the Hindu journals in Bombay. One of them, the Mitrodaya, denounces the spectacle as a shocking specimen of the way in which "the fanatic Mohammedans, infatuated by the inspirations of the Devil, give full latitude to their low appetites and passions." It is honest enough however to allow that the Holi of the Hindoos is equally "debasing to humanity." Both the Mitrodaya and the Dandeyo deplore the proneness of the Mahratta populace to take part in the "fooleries" and "obscenities" of the festival of the Taboots. It is certainly curious to note how a season of religious mourning has developed into a festival of wild mirth, more Hindu in character than the Holi itself. Men and boys with their naked bodies painted to look like tigers, others disguised as elephants and bears, women dressed up as men, crowds of followers tricked out in tinsel, making night hideous with yells and tomtomming, seem to have very little in common with the faith and teachings of Mahomet. One sensitive journalist points out "the insult offered to the whole Maratha nation" by the figures of gaily-dressed Maratha ladies that seem to carry the "taboots" or skeleton frames which are supposed to commemorate the death of Hossain.

Two of the High Court judges were to leave Bombay for England on the 1st of this month. Sir Joseph Arnould, the last remaining judge of the old Supreme Court, has during his ten years of office won golden opinions from all classes of the Bombay community, as one of the ablest and most upright Englishmen that ever sat on the Indian Bench. His rare courtesy has added its own charm to his moral and intellectual gifts. According to the Bombay Gazette, Sir Joseph was not "a man of society," preferring to find relief from hard work "in the sweet retirement of his study." His professional merits however seem to have been fully appreciated both by Englishmen and natives, by the Bombay Bar and the native Press. A large meeting of respectable natives was held in his honour a few days before his departure, Sir Jamsctjee Jeejeebhoy himself presiding. In his answering speech Sir Joseph humorously referred to his abstinence from the social questions of the day. "I have been proof even against the seductions of Miss Carpenter, and the allurements of social science; have never attempted to educate the native female, nor to remarry the Hindu widow." As "a mere hearer of causes and pronouncer of decisions" however, Sir Joseph deserved all the popularity to which the meeting and the speakers bore witness.

MR. JUSTICE NEWTON also leaves behind him a fair reputation and pleasant memoirs. A Bombay civilian of 1844, he became Registrar of the Sudder Adawlut in 1859, and a judge of the High Court in 1862. On all points concerning Hindu Law his knowledge and judgment were equally great. He too had his farewell entertainment from the Royal Asiatic Society, of which he was chairman. His modesty led him to decline the honour of a marble immortality, in the form of a bust which was to adorn the society's rooms; and the good sense of the members presented him instead with a copy of the society's transactions complete.

CHOLERA seems to be unpleasantly rife in the Central Provinces, especially in the city of Nagpore. Small-pox and cattle disease were also making their ravages. Grain had risen, owing to the destruction of the mango and mhowa crops. The relief works are still in full swing throughout the Central and North-West Provinces. From Orissa and Lower Bengal the accounts are generally favourable. There was a falling off in the number of persons employed on relief works. In Cuttack rain has fallen and ploughing begun. In Pooree the ryots are busy cultivating their lands.

CAPTAIN SLADEN has at length recovered from the ill effects of his journey to Momein, and his report of the expedition has been sent in to the Chief Commissioner. The oldest thing is that the King of Burmah has owned to the share he had in hindering Captain Sladen's progress, and only less strange is the cool assurance with which he offered to make over to our authorities for punishment the wretched officials who bettered his teaching by plotting against the lives of Captain Sladen and his companions. His Majesty promises to sin no more if Captain Sladen will only set out again for Yunan. We should think the latter has had enough by this time of Burman good-faith. It appears that an English agent is really to be sent to Bhamo, and that Captain Strover is named for the post.

ACCORDING to a Bombay telegram of May 22, Azim and Abdurrahman Khan have found shelter with the Persians at Meshed; Shere Ali is going to reform his administration; and the Madras Railway has been opened as far as Gooty.

IN justice to one of the ablest of old Bengal civilians, we must no longer delay to congratulate Sir J. P. Grant on the good work he has already done in Jamaica. When he was sent thither to replace Mr. Eyre, things in general were at their very worst. An overburdened exchequer, a yearly decreasing revenue, a people sinking deeper and deeper in poverty and ignorance under bad laws worse administered, an utterly inefficient police, an ill-chosen magistracy, a bitter antagonism between white men and black, made up a pretty formidable list of grievances to mend. But Sir John Grant had not governed Bengal in vain. His ability, experience, and uprightness combined, have in little more than two years brought about a marvellous change for the better. As an Indian civilian he knew how to render equal justice to native and European. The self-abolition of the old Assembly left his hands free for useful reforms. The disendowment of the State Church has removed a heavy load from off the people of the island, who are mostly Baptists. Sir John has had to stop some of the less necessary public works until better days. By means of a land-tax, a license-tax, and an increased duty on rum, he has brought the income and outlay of the island "to an equilibrium." A moderate house-tax serves for a poor-rate, to which the blacks themselves contribute their share "without a murmur." Sir John has thoroughly remodelled the police, who are now as efficient as they were before useless. His reforms in the educational system have been no less thorough. The money once wasted on vestry schools has been made over to a number of "model schools," and altogether 226 schools have been rescued from utter neglect. There has been a marked decrease in crime; trade is really reviving in all directions, coffee being the only export which has not increased; and, at the risk of offending the white population, Sir John avows his belief in the future well-being of the colony at large.

THE Indian Government has for some time been trying to make gunpowder in India equal to that manufactured at Waltham Abbey. It has now three factories at work in Bombay, Madras, and Ishapore on the Hooghly. The powder thus made is said to be quite as pure as the English powder; but of its durability there are doubts, owing to the absorbent nature of the Indian charcoal, which is made from the stalk of the Dhalrush or Cytisus Cagan. The Ishapore works will turn out a hundred barrels of coarse or fifty of fine-grained powder a-week, at a cost of £4. 10s. or £5 a barrel.

A CHEAP way of furnishing India with naval defences seems opened up by Sir W. Armstrong's plan of building a number of small wooden gunboats, formed for great speed and quick manœuvring, and armed with one heavy gun each. If the gun could be warranted to pierce any thickness of iron, a few of these boats might worry a large ironclad to good purpose; but how about an iron-clad Monitor? We fear that Sir W. Armstrong is too sanguine.

CAPTAIN TYLER holds sanguine views regarding the ultimate line of road from England to India. "The hope of the Indian traveller of the next generation must be nothing less," he declares, "than to pass dryshod from London to Bombay." When a tunnel undermines the English Channel, and a railway-bridge crosses the Bosphorus, and the iron monster pants along the Euphrates Valley, we shall have realised the business ideal of a journey to India. It will be rather a wearisome, not to say exhausting process, whenever the moment shall have come for trying it; and the first travellers by that road will almost deserve to rank with that stout heart of oak who first, in Horatian language, "committed his frail bark to the savage deep." Meanwhile, however, Captain Tyler's report to the Board of Trade shows what improvements on the present line by Marseilles are compassable in the immediate future. Having carefully gone over the ground himself, he decides in favour of the Italian as against the existing route. A line by Ostend, Cologne, Mentz, Munich, the Brenner Pass, and Verona to Brindisi, would lessen the time now spent on the journey to Alexandria by thirty hours, although the distance travelled by land would be 150 miles more. The journey from Ostend to Brindisi would take about sixty-one hours. The railway over the Brenner has been well made, with gradients never steeper than those of the Sömmerring Pass, and trains ought to be worked on this line "with a high degree of regularity." The rate of speed, however, on German railways falls far short as yet of our postal requirements. There would be no difference in point of time between the Brenner and the Mont Cenis route. Brindisi Harbour is being improved in order to hold vessels of the largest tonnage. A large hotel will be finished in about six months. Captain Tyler is no advocate of rash changes, but he thinks that, for the present, an extra mail might be despatched from London on a Saturday to overtake the regular Friday mail at Alexandria. Whether the Brenner route, as preferred by Captain Tyler, or the Mont Cenis route, already becoming popular with Anglo-Indians, be the better worth trying, we are inclined to think that one or the other must some day supersede the Marseilles line. Ostend is certainly seven hours from London, but the discomforts of the passage are possibly no greater than in the shorter voyage from Dover to Calais. If a saving of thirty hours between London and Alexandria can anyhow be ensured by one of the Italian lines, through Italy the mails will have to go, until the railway of the future joins Constantinople to Bussorah.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

INDIAN AND ROYAL COLONELS.

To judge by a Parliamentary paper published last week, a good many colonels in the Royal Army are just now smarting under the novel infliction of being passed in the race of promotion by officers of junior standing in the local Indian Army. It seems that of late the turn of luck has fallen to the latter, some of whom have risen to be major-generals, while colonels of longer standing in the rival service remain colonels still. Supersession, no doubt, is trying to an officer's feelings, and several of the sufferers, actual or prospective, have been pouring their tale of wrong, by letter, into the ears of the Horse Guards. Colonel Shute, for instance, has "the honour to state how much I feel the supersession by the colonels of the Indian Army over those on the English list," and implores the Commander-in-Chief "to have this grievous wrong remedied." In somewhat better English other officers lament to the same tune. Colonel Percy Hill declares that less than two years ago some of those who have superseded him were doing duty under his command. A Queen's colonel of 1855 has actually been passed over by an Indian colonel of 1863. Those Indian officers, in fact, not satisfied with gaining English rank, are now shooting ahead of their English rivals, partly through the inducements of a handsome retiring-pension, and partly through the fact of their numerical inferiority. This turning of the tables is felt to be intolerable. Time was when old Indian officers, subalterns of twenty and captains of thirty years' service, frequently found themselves commanded by Queen's officers of higher rank but far fewer years. It was unpleasant for those, but they did not grumble. Now that these are experiencing a like hardship, they take care to tell us how tightly the shoe pinches them. They demand that promotion shall be arrested on one side or quickened on the other; a very natural, if not quite reasonable request. The India Office has done its best to appease the complainants by offering local rank in India to officers who would otherwise be superseded. But the complainants seem to want more, with an eye to the period when such supersession "may become a very practical grievance," inasmuch as "all officers in her Majesty's service are now eligible for employment in all parts of the dominions of the Queen." We are indebted to Colonel Greathed for this remarkable piece of news. We had certainly imagined that a great many Indian officers were not eligible for employment out of India; but it is never too late to learn. One thing however might be worth considering in this connection. May not length of service in the army be pleaded by most of the Indian major-generals as some set-off to their recent luck? Are not Queen's officers, as a rule, younger by many years than their Indian brethren of a corresponding rank? Promotion since the Mutiny may have been somewhat quickened; but as late as 1862 the senior captains on the Bengal cadres averaged more than twenty years' service, while a considerable minority dated as far back as 1837, and some even from 1835. Regimental majors of 1861 and 1862 show an average of twenty-five years' service, and senior lieutenants in the latter year of about thirteen; many of them being cadets, of 1845-46. If the Queen's officer has been generally luckier in the rate of his passage upward, he need not greatly grumble at having occasionally to yield the post of honour to greyer hairs than his own, especially as the principle of seniority is continually set aside in his own service. If the system of promotion enforced of late years can be shown to work unfairly in the long run, by all means let it be amended. But there are grievances which cannot be remedied without developing worse hardships in their place.

ANGLO-INDIANS.

SOME of our readers may perhaps ask with surprise what we can find to say about that class of the community which is distinguished by the hybrid appellation which heads this article? It seems to us, on the contrary, more a matter for astonishment that the great section of our countrymen in question is so seldom alluded to in the English Press, and that in public life it fails to obtain that consideration and recognition which its importance demands. There can be nothing extraordinary, therefore, in our devoting a few words to a subject which we especially, for obvious reasons, feel much interest in.

To trace upwards from its humble beginning the growth of a profession to which, now-a-days, members from most of our upper-middle class families belong, it needs but to take into our hands the history of India, and to read how the commercial venture of a few merchants upon the shores of a distant and then little known continent sufficed to give birth to an Empire in the East, the possession of which renders England the envied of all nations. For, side by side with this Empire's origin and progress, we see how the Indian military and civil services were called into being, and how they gradually increased in numbers and importance until they attained their present dimensions—dimensions, we may add, which, owing to the gigantic strides which India is now making in civilisation, and England's more adequate appreciation of them, must steadily increase day by day. And, as it is curious to compare the state of the English settlements upon the Indian seaboard in the days preceding Clive, with that Eastern land which now bears Queen Victoria's mild sway, so it is no less interesting to cause "the adventurer" of the same bygone period to take his place for a few minutes, in our mental vision, with his descendant of our times.

"The Nabob"—as the former was often called by a generation that seems hardly to have known the meaning or derivation of the term—usually departed from these shores for the land of his adoption burdened with little or no education, and often at an age before any fixed principles of character and conduct could be formed. When he left England he bade adieu for an indefinite period to all the refinement and culture England could then produce, and plunged at once, as it were, into heathendom. His sole object was to make money—honestly, if he could, but at all events to make it; and as the salary he enjoyed from his masters in Leadenhall-street was wholly inadequate to effect this, he was of necessity driven to trading on his own account. We forbear to examine too closely the commercial morality of his transactions, but history leaves us in little doubt as to the laxity of his ideas upon the subject. After a quarter of a century or more spent mainly in pursuing wealth, and forgetting—in a life passed mostly à l'Indien—all that he ever knew in Europe, he probably returned to his native land, where he arrived more ignorant than when he left it, and many times more ill-tempered and bigoted; peculiar as to his dress and appearance, strange and uncouth as to his manners and habits; in fine, an Anglo-Indian of a century and a-half ago. Can we be surprised, then, at the estimation in which he was held by his stay-at-home countrymen, or wonder that he excited both ridicule and scorn? Naturally enough, the dramatists of the period were never weary of reproducing his figure in their works, clad in that ludicrous nankeen costume which has now become conventional on the stage. His oddities were, indeed, everywhere laughed at; and, had it not been for his wealth, he would have been everywhere despised. And, if this was the case with the individual, it became inferentially so with his class. It was consequently unpopular and disliked. Of course there were many bright exceptions in it to the portrait we have drawn, but they were, unfortunately, not sufficiently numerous to affect the character of the type itself. From such a body, therefore, it is not likely that men would be often found calculated to become useful and active citizens.

Let us now change the scene, and pass the long vista of years that intervene, regard the descendants of the Nabobs of old—the Indians of to-day.

Yet, if we attempt to describe these contemporaries of our own, we must perforce employ negatives to do so. We find them, then, not more ignorant or less educated than their brethren of the Home services, or to be distinguished from them in manners, habits, or dress; and this is only what one would have expected. A residence in India is no longer calculated to have any peculiarly demoralising effect. The country is comparatively a civilised and enlightened country. The life led in it is a useful and an active one; besides, the period of exile is short, and intermediate visits to Europe are not now, as formally, few and far between. Nor should certain influences for good in a sojourn in the India of to-day be left out of consideration. Enjoying comparative freedom from the petty cares engendered by scanty means, such as too often stifle the efforts of a struggler in the home professions, the Englishman whose career now lies in it, often, nay usually, attains to offices of trust and dignity which it were vain to look for here, offices, the very act of fulfilling the duties of which must tend to open the mind to a considerable degree. And if the average individual member of his class has attained the standard for which we are contending, the class itself has grown numerically in an extraordinary manner. We have no statistics to which we could refer to ascertain the probable number of Anglo-Indians now residing among us, but individual experience sufficiently teaches us that their name is legion, and that each portion of this kingdom, and each county and each town in it is pervaded by a strong Indian element—an element which, to revert to the complaint with which we opened this article, remains comparatively unrepresented in our House of Commons or in the subordinate offices of Government, so that it appears, as a rule, Anglo-Indians are either constrained or contented on their retirement to lead a life of inaction, and to take no part in public affairs, whether of State or of local importance only. Though some people may imagine that the explanation of this anomaly lies on the surface, and may whisper something about an enervating climate and a diseased liver, we cannot ourselves accept such reasoning as either satisfactory or conclusive. As a matter of fact we believe that retired Indians are as healthy and as energetic as other people of their age and position; nor is it likely that after a life, the heyday of which has been spent in pursuits of an active and a stirring character, the change to a passive and monotonous one can be otherwise than trying. Hence we are driven to accept the alternative, and to believe that their exclusion from participation in the world of English official life proceeds from their inability to obtain an entrance to it, and that the fact of their absence from their native country for a certain number of years practically disables them on their return from sharing in the struggles and the pursuits of their contemporaries. Is it not possible, also, that a small, perhaps an infinitesimal, amount of prejudice in their disfavour (inherited perhaps from, and allied to the feeling with which the Nabobs of the past were received in England) still lingers unconsciously in the English mind?

In the foregoing remarks we have directed our attention towards members of the Indian services, but we do not for a moment forget the claims of the large classes which we have only left unmentioned, because those composing them, the great merchants of whom India may well be proud, the civil engineers, and others who flock to her shores to pursue different callings, have still on their return to England their own professions to fall back upon. It would be very well, no doubt, if our Representative House were more largely recruited from the wealthy and successful among them, but there is at all events no necessity for absolute and unmitigated idleness on their parts.

We are not unaware that, with regard to one portion of our remarks, it may be said that there is no bar to the admission of Anglo-Indians to Parliament. In theory, no; but in practice they labour under considerable disability in this respect. Dissociated by their previous course of life from their countrymen of the humbler classes, they must encounter disadvantages in their search for constituencies which are not felt by the country squire or the London merchant; but as this branch of the subject leads us on inevitably to the consideration how far the colonies and primarily India ought to be themselves considered as constituencies and be represented in the British Parliament, we take leave of the matter for the present, merely expressing our belief that the Government of the latter great country will at no distant date be brought by the force of circumstances into closer association with the Home Executive, and that the gigantic interests bound up in it will, by their force of gravity alone, compel their representation in the Parliament of England.

THE CAWNPORE MEMORIAL.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—In your last issue I see there is an inquiry as to what is the inscription on the Well at Cawnpore. I have much pleasure in sending it to you:—

"Sacred to the perpetual memory of a great company of Christian people, chiefly women and children, who near this spot were cruelly massacred by the followers of the rebel Nana Dhoondu Punt, of Bithoor, and cast, the dying with the dead, into the well below on the 16th day of July, 1857."

These are the words by Lord Canning, it is supposed. A very succinct account and description is given in the number of the "Sunday at Home" for 31st December, 1864.—I remain, Sir, yours truly,

A CONSTANT READER.

WIDOWS' PENSIONS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—In your issue of the 10th of March last a letter appeared, signed "An Officer," pointing out the injustice to which officers' widows are subjected by the continued reduction of their pensions. He argued that the "military funds of the three Presidencies having been taken over by Government, the widows' pensions should be raised to the scale payable prior to the 1st of January, 1856;" and that, "with regard to the Bengal Military Fund, when the pensions were reduced and officers' subscriptions raised, it was distinctly stated that such should only last during the temporary embarrassed state of the finances. Owing to the amalgamation, and the consequent cessation of new members joining, it is quite impossible for the fund to recover itself. This being the action of Government, and no fault of the subscribers, common justice demands that officers' widows should no longer suffer."

As the widow of a Bengal officer who subscribed to the fund upwards of thirty years, I have to express my gratitude to the gentleman who so kindly advocated our cause; for, owing to the increased price of all the necessaries of life, the reduction of a small income is a very serious hardship; and it is to be hoped that Government will give the subject that serious and favourable consideration which, as "the cause of the widow," it may be deemed deserving of.—Yours obediently

LOOK ON THIS PICTURE AND ON THAT.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

DEAR SIR,—I enclose "extracts," to which, if you will give insertion in your columns in juxtaposition, you may possibly cause some justice to be meted out to those to whom, Lord Cranbourne says, much is due, to establish a principle, because their lives have been risked in our defence. The diversity of treatment of the two services under parallel circumstances is instructive. Further comment is unnecessary.—Yours faithfully,

N. G.

Extract from the Army and Navy Gazette of May 22, 1869.

This is but simple justice. Each of these officers holds a commission of the value of a company—£8,200 and £8,500 respectively; and it would be simply robbery were they not to be compensated to the full extent upon the abolition of the posts they occupy.

It is a matter for satisfaction of the officers of the army generally that this step has been taken, for it lays down, and for the first time, we believe, in the history of the Service, the principle of dealing equitably with men as regards their extra investments in commissions in accordance with regimental custom, however custom may be opposed to the strict letter of the law. It is a matter of congratulation to be told, as we virtually are by the authorities when they consent to this arrangement, that in any measures that may be taken for limiting the area of the purchase system, all fair consideration shall be shown on the score of payments above the regulation price. It is also a matter for satisfaction that the authorities themselves have put an end to that reign of grim hypocrisy by which they were expected to affect ignorance officially of a custom in which they had participated as regimental officers, and in which many of them were still habitually indulging as regards their sons and younger relatives in the army.

Extra prices are now officially and properly recognised, and thus some four or five millions of investments are clothed with a stronger security than before. Henceforth those who have paid for their commissions after the rates sanctioned by regimental custom may rest assured that, should their posts be abolished or made non-purchase, their rights will be respected according to those sound and just principles by which the State is guided in its relations with other branches of its service in which changes may be needed for the public interests.

Extract from Lient.-col. J. C. Phillips' pamphlet on the "Abolition of the Bonus System in the Indian Army."

Consequent upon the resolution of the House of Commons, Lord Cranbourne, in his speech to the House, August 6, 1866, used the following language:—

"But, putting the guarantee aside, I think that it is clear that if your servants have been largely damaged by any sudden or unexpected act of yours, the principle that ought to be observed in every branch of the public service is, that we ought to do something to compensate them; and, assuredly, if there is any branch to which we should desire to apply this principle, it is to those who risk their lives in our defence. Viewing the matter in that light, and not in the least questioning or attempting to reverse the decision of former Governments, we still thought it our duty to attempt in some way to meet the complaints of officers on this head. Now, the House will observe that the subscription of a bonus had for its immediate object to get a step of rank; therefore the object of that subscription was, to a certain extent, obtained. The officer got his advance in rank, and, therefore, increased pay earlier through the subscription than otherwise."

We understand it is stated by several officers that they have not received full compensation in that way—that they paid a very much larger sum than they had any immediate chance of receiving, in the hope that when they came to retire they would receive compensation from the subscriptions of their junior officers. Our proposal is, that in each Presidency a committee shall be appointed, which as soon as an officer retires shall inquire into his case, in order to ascertain how much money he is really out of pocket in payments to officers who have retired, and the loss, whatever it may be, the Government propose to make good to him.

CENTRAL ASIAN AFFAIRS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—In your issue of the 19th inst. you have unjustly designated me an "Obstinate Russophobist." I happen to be, and ever have been, the very reverse; although, for other reasons, I have advocated an "onward movement" in Central Asia. I insert a quotation from a pamphlet of mine recently published, as follows:—

It is not really the advance of Russia in Central Asia that we have to dread so much as the weakness of our position for all purposes on the North-West Frontier, and the general insufficiency of our military institutions throughout the country, of course felt and understood most when we are threatened with, or labouring under, foreign or domestic troubles.

You have a perfect right to express your opinion on the "Central Asian Question," and so have I, founded, as my opinion is, on local and matured experience. You are quite at liberty, too, if you choose, to treat with contempt those who differ with you in opinion; and I have an equal right to assure you (as you have alluded to me personally) that I have no respect whatever for your opinion on Central Asian affairs, nor yet for the opinion of those who coincide with you.

I have never recommended, as you state, the occupation of Herat with British troops. In justice to me I hope you will insert this in your next issue.—Yours obediently, SYDNEY COTTON, Lieutenant General.

[We insert this letter at the writer's request, lest he might be led to tax us with want of fair play. But a calmer reference to our "note" of last week ought to convince him that it is not we who have been the more unjust. The "personal" allusion naturally resulted from the reading of a pamphlet bearing his name. No unbiassed reader, we think, would convert our expressions of regretful surprise at Sir S. Cotton's proposals into proofs of a desire to treat him with contempt. Of course he is welcome even to proclaim in our faces his perfect scorn for our opinion, if he likes to perpetrate the rudeness. He disowns the charge of Russophobia. So be it. But he cannot deny that he advocates a move forward on Kabul and Kandahar. Our offence, we imagine, consists in preferring the opinion of Sir Vincent Eyre to that of his virtual opponent, touching the wisdom of an advance into Afghanistan.—Ed. A. I. M.]

EAST INDIA LIBRARY.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—The public in general, and the students of Oriental languages in particular, must feel greatly indebted to his Grace the Duke of Argyll for having, as Secretary of State for India, accepted the resignation of the late librarian of the East India Library. Such being the case, I would, Sir, beg to suggest with all due deference, that no person should be appointed to the post thus vacated without having previously undergone the ordeal of a strict competitive examination as to his literary qualifications, both classical and Oriental, and unless he be able, moreover, to produce the most satisfactory testimonials as to his possessing that courtesy of manners, and those other social bienstances which should ever be the fruits and the indications of a liberal and accomplished education.—I am, &c.,

MR. TAYLER'S CASE.

The Friend of India, defending Mr. Justice Mitter's previous statement of the case against Mr. Tayler, regards his decision as both sound law and plain common sense. Mr. Tayler comes before the Court and says, "There have been fraud and rascality in this case, I admit, and I now ask you, the judges, to exculpate me and to lay upon my agent the entire blame." A more monstrous request was never preferred to a Court of Justice. The agent was not before the Court, and had no opportunity of defending himself, and it would have been a gross perversion of justice if the judge had condemned him unheard, and had pronounced him guilty on the unsupported assertions of his accuser. In rejecting Mr. Tayler's application, therefore, the judges did their duty and nothing more, and Mr. Tayler was utterly unwarranted in assailing in the newspapers the character and conduct of the Native judge. Whether the letters constituted a contempt of Court is a question upon which it is unnecessary to offer any opinion, but there can be no doubt that they were written in the worst taste and were disfigured by gross misrepresentations. Such being the facts of the case, Mr. Tayler, we think, acted wisely in not taking his stand upon the liberties of the press. After all the documents had been read, and the Chief Justice had asked him what he had to say in his defence, Mr. Tayler, who conducted his own case, stated that he had been advised by the friends and learned counsel whom he had consulted, to place himself entirely in his lordship's hands. He had no intention whatever, he said, to traduce the character of Mr. Justice Mitter. His sole object in writing the letters was to vindicate his own character, and he wished unreservedly to apologise to the Court if he had used in these letters any expressions which the Chief Justice considered contemptuous, unbecoming, or improper. Upon this the Chief Justice remarked that he would adjourn the case till Saturday, to give Mr. Tayler an opportunity of giving the same publicity to the retraction of the charges against Mr. Justice Mitter as he had before given to the charges themselves. We rejoice at this termination of the case. The impropriety of Mr. Tayler's conduct was so obvious, that we had no desire to see his cause made a party question out of Court. Should we ever have to fight for the freedom of the press, and we feel sure that Sir Barnes Peacock is not the man to endanger that freedom, we can only hope that we may have a good and honest cause to fight in.

The Indian Daily News points out that when Mr. Tayler admitted that his letters were a contempt of Court, and threw himself upon the mercy of the judges, it was necessary that he should not only apologise for the false imputations he had made, but that he should also withdraw the misrepresentations on which these imputations rested. As he did not do all this, he cannot complain that the Court refused to accept his apology. At the same time we think that the sentence passed upon Mr. Tayler is unnecessarily severe. The Chief Justice said that, if Mr. Tayler had been indicted before a jury at home, he would have been sentenced to at least a year's imprisonment; but there is a manifest distinction between an indictment and a trial for contempt of Court. In the former case the judge passes sentence with reference to the wrong committed against another; in the latter case he awards punishment for a personal offence against himself. In the former case the judge cannot gratify his own private feelings of clemency; in the latter case he can. We do not for a moment say that Mr. Tayler did not deserve the sentence passed upon him; but we think that the case was one which could not but appeal to the pity and clemency of the Court. The honour and dignity of the Court had been thoroughly vindicated by the Chief Justice's decision. Mr. Tayler's conduct had been unsparingly criticised and exposed; he had been subjected to the indignity of a trial, and had expressed the utmost contrition, and his abject appearance before the Court could not but excite in the minds of the spectators that sympathy which we all naturally feel for a man that is down. There is another fact in connection with Mr. Tayler's case, which was not brought to the notice of the Court. He is at the present time, we are told, labouring under a severe illness, and it is feared that confinement will greatly increase the malady. If this is the case we hope that a proper representation will be made to the Chief Justice, for we feel sure that all classes of the community would rejoice to hear of Mr. Tayler's release. It would be an act of clemency on the part of the Chief Justice which would be appreciated by all. Throughout this affair we have never seen that the liberty of the press has been in the slightest degree imperilled. We have endeavoured to support the integrity and dignity of the High Court; and while we would not presume to interfere with the Court in the exercise of its high functions, we are sure the Chief Justice will not mistake our meaning if we remind him, in the language of our matchless bard, that—

"Earthly power doth then show likest God's,
When Mercy seasons Justice."

THE LOAFER.

The Bombay Gazette admits that there are circumstances under which deportation might be advisable, might be perhaps the best thing to do; and therefore we take no objection to the power reserved in the Bill to provide against vagrancy now before the Supreme Legislative Council for local governments to deport, "if after the lapse of a reasonable time no suitable employment is obtainable." But in the vast majority of instances deportation to a more agreeable climate than this, subsistence during the conveyance there, and "a sum of money sufficient for the vagrant's subsistence for one month" after the voyage is at an end, would act as so many premiums on idleness, improvidence, and vice, in the face of which we do not know how many reasonable decent men, nay brave men, bravely struggling against an adverse fate, would be tempted to give way. No, deportation as a wholesale resource will not do. Then, looking to the necessary continuance of this class of persons amongst us,—"The poor ye shall always have with you,"—what are we to do with them? They are objects at once of sympathy and of distrust; and the most and best that can be done for them is to help them to help themselves. We may not let them starve, but they must learn by experience, however painful, that "whoso shall not work neither shall he eat bread." For this purpose we must have in the Presidency towns, and in some at least of the larger Mofussil stations, places of retreat in their nature akin to the English workhouse. Mere vagrancy is a statutable offence in England, but it is seldom punished as such unless when accompanied by some other wickedness not so readily punishable by itself. And in this country, where the European vagabond has necessarily wandered so much before we have to deal with him on the spot there must be still more reluctance to make vagrancy of itself a severely punishable offence. It must be taken off the road however somehow. It is a public offence, a social evil, an unnecessary degradation of the European character before subject races, and in that way an appreciable source of danger to the prestige of our empire, which ought not be allowed to last. The vagrant must not find the workhouse a pleasant place in any way. It must be the nearest thing to a prison possible, and any infringement of its rules must be made as summarily punishable as the infringement of regular prison rules is. It is a place, not for making the vagrant comfortable, but for enabling him to have food in, to subsist in, till he can better himself elsewhere; and for such food and subsistence he must at least pay something. If he can do nothing else he must break stones. Nothing without labour must be the motto of these institutions, and vagrancy so-called must be literally swept off the roads at whatever cost in money or to the feelings of those concerned. By the Bill now before the Legislative Council of the Governor-General it is proposed to provide that "where any person of European extraction is brought out to India under an engagement to serve any other person, or any company, association, or body of persons in any capacity, and becomes chargeable to the State as a vagrant within one year after his arrival in India, then the person or company, association, or body to serve whom he was so brought out to India, shall be liable to pay to the Government the cost of his deportation and all other charges incurred by the State in consequence of his becoming a vagrant." If the importers of the persons so soon becoming vagrants do not object to this, we do not see that it concerns the public to do so. If the period for enforcing liability had been extended beyond a year it would have been more objectionable. As it is, we are content that the whole Bill as it stands should pass into a law, and we wish to see it passed accordingly.

The Times of India holds that the real difficulty in the matter, the one great work which, so far as we are aware, has not yet been faced seriously, is the question—What are these workhouses to be, and how are they to be managed? It is easy to imprison, or to set chain-gangs at work on hill roads; and, in spite of what the authorities say at home, there will always be some method by which we can resort to the shuffling and selfish expedient of deportation. Few magistrates, and not many employers, can by any process of "summary inquiry" determine correctly whether a vagrant is honestly seeking employment or is furtively clinging to his depraved habit of vagabond life. The first and indispensable step to the working of the proposed statute, or in any thorough effort to deal with this growing and pestilent evil, is to get devised some scheme or institution which, by providing shelter, remunerative but obligatory work, and discipline, shall afford a self-acting, unmistakable test of the moral qualities and inclination of the vagrant class. It is idle to legislate if we are such bunglers as not to be able to contrive and work some satisfactory method of discriminating between hopelessly worthless vagabonds and les misérables—unfortunate artisans or the victims of casual dissipation. The Bill is abundantly provided with hooks that will drag the worst class of vagrants into the felon's ranks, where they can be freely dealt with as the security of society requires or the law directs; but, except in the barren restoration and formal use of the term "workhouses," Mr. Maine's Bill offers nothing—affords no hope for the discriminating and reformatory treatment of the large proportion of "loafers," who try to make out with more or less success that they are more sinned against than sinning.

CIVIL.—Sir Donald MacLeod, Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab, left Lahore on the 26th of April for Simla, at the invitation of the Viceroy. Several measures affecting the Punjab, among them the Tenancy Bill, will come before the Council, and Sir Donald's advice is desired. He will probably stay till June, when he will proceed to Murree.—The Pioneer has the following regarding the rumoured redistribution of departments among the members of the Viceroy's Council:—"We believe that if Sir Richard Temple should go to England (which is doubtful) Mr. Strachey will take charge of the Financial Department. Mr. Ellis has already taken over the greater part of the Home Office work; while Sir Henry Durand presides over the current business of the Public Works Department. His Excellency the Viceroy retains the Foreign Office in his immediate direction as heretofore."

THE LATE MR. CHAMIER, MADRAS CIVIL SERVICE.—Mr. Charles Frederic Chamier, Civil and Sessions Judge of Salem, died on the morning of the 21st of April, at Yercand, Shevaroy Hills, of heart disease, after a short illness. We take the following brief notice of his career and character from the Madras Mail:—"His grandfather, John Chamier, was Secretary to Government during the time of Lords Macartney and Clive; and his father, Henry Chamier, was for many years Chief Secretary, and at length was appointed member of Council by the Marquis of Tweeddale, the then Governor and Commander-in-Chief of Madras. After a long and very creditable career, Henry Chamier resigned the service, and settled at Windsor, where two years since he died at an advanced age. Charles Frederic Chamier, whose demise we now have regretfully to announce, entered the Madras Civil Service in July, 1843. . . . In every appointment that he filled he was distinguished by rare conscientiousness in the punctual and thorough discharge of its duties. He was in all things a most accurate and painstaking man, and he succeeded by dint of industry and patience in living in advance of his work. Arrears were to him utterly hateful, embarrassing to present action, and the fruitful cause of public inconvenience; and having brought up his Court at Salem to the enviable position of having no arrears, he succeeded in keeping it there, to the great benefit of the whole district. He was a well read, thoughtful, reflective man, of a somewhat retiring disposition, and his work was ever done unobtrusively. He was singularly firm in maintaining his opinions, and though duly deferential to the High Court, he reserved to himself the right to differ in private from their conclusions when they clashed with his own ideas. He was very earnest in whatsoever he did, and the same will that made him so efficient and so respected a judge enabled him to carry off the awards for horticultural efforts in this city. He had but indifferent health during the whole of his career, and he died from heart disease, most unexpectedly, after a very brief illness, with his father-in-law, Colonel Worster, and his family around him."

MR. TAYLER'S CASE.

SIR BARNES PEACOCK'S JUDGMENT.

(Before the Hon. Sir Barnes Peacock, C.J., and the Hon. Mr. Justice Dwarkanauth Mitter.)

Their Lordships having taken their seats, on the 24th of April, the Chief Justice said: Mr. Tayler, I understood you to say, on the last occasion, that you wished to put in some additional proceedings in the intervention suit. If you have the papers, you can put them in now.

Mr. Tayler said that he had not brought the papers with him. The document he referred to was a positive order to the Nazir to attach the property a second time. He was not aware that his lordship wished to see the document. He had a copy of it.

The Chief Justice: I don't ask to see it. I thought you wanted to put it in, and that was the reason why I referred to it.

Mr. Tayler: All that I wanted to prove was that there was an order for a second attachment.

The Chief Justice: You stated on the last occasion, that the Court had decided that you were guilty of a contempt of Court, from the fact of your having been brought up under attachment. The Court did not adjudge you guilty of a contempt of Court, but you were brought up on the attachment to answer the charge of contempt, and that you should be allowed every opportunity to enter into your defence. I want you to understand that the Court had not adjudged you guilty of contempt, and could not have done so until it had heard your defence. I have read your apology.

Mr. Tayler was here understood to say that he wanted to explain exactly what he intended to convey by the apology.

His Lordship then proceeded to deliver judgment, which was a written one. No doubt the course which Mr. Tayler had taken was to vindicate his own honour and character; and however much his feelings might have been wounded by the remarks of the Judge, still the latter could not shrink from the discharge of his duties. If he failed in his duty, he was not fit to be entrusted with it. To his lordship the duty was all the more painful, because the gentleman whose conduct was called into question had held social and friendly intercourse with him. He was desirous that the public should be put in possession of the real facts of this case, which, he was inclined to believe, had entirely been misunderstood. His lordship then went into a history from the time Mr. Tayler resigned his appointment as Commissioner of Patna, and accepted the office of Mooktear to the Ranees of Ticcarea, and the proceedings taken by the latter against Mr. Tayler in the High Court for the recovery of some Rs. 12,000. Mr. Tayler received a salary of Rs. 500 a month from the Ranees, and a bonus for every suit that he won for her.

Mr. Tayler said that his salary was Rs. 800, and not 500 a month.

His Lordship said he would make the correction. The Ranees having obtained a judgment against Mr. Tayler for the Rs. 12,000, she took out execution, and attached certain landed property belonging to him in the district of Gya. Mr. Tayler then applied to the High Court to stay the sale, pending the result of his appeal to the Privy Council. Execution was stayed, and the Ranees was called upon to give security. For some reason or other it appeared that she did not give security, and the case was struck off the board of appeal cases. Mr. Tayler did not appeal to the Privy Council. The Ranees subsequently applied and took out an attachment; but before the property was sold Mr. Tayler had disposed of it to Mussamut Nessa Begum for Rs. 55,000. When the property was advertised for sale the Begum applied to the Court, praying for the removal of the attachment, and on her application being refused she paid the amount of the Ranees' decree and filed a suit against Mr. Tayler for the recovery of that money. The defence raised by Mr. Tayler's agent, Mr. Kelly, and his (Mr. Tayler's) mooktear was that the plaintiff ought to have satisfied herself, before she purchased the property, that it was unencumbered, that the property was worth about Rs. 80,000, and that the rule caveat emptor applied in the case. It was decided in favour of Mr. Tayler by the Sudder Ameen; but on appeal that decision was set aside by the Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Dwarkanauth Mitter, who decreed the case with costs. Mr. Tayler applied for review of that judgment, but the Court saw no ground for a review, and rejected the application. The ground upon which Mr. Tayler based his application for a review was that his mooktear had acted contrary to his instructions, had embezzled his (Mr. Tayler's) money, and had, by doing so, served his own purpose; and that it was not his intention to dispute the Begum's claim. It was after the Court had declined to review the case that Mr. Tayler published the letters in the Englishman. His lordship characterised, in very strong terms, the conduct of Mr. Tayler in charging Mr. Justice Dwarkanauth Mitter with having imputed fraud to him, without a tittle of evidence to justify his finding. Though his lordship had not himself thought it necessary to go into the question of fraud, except hypothetically, that was no reason why his honourable colleague should not have expressed his own conviction. He had, upon the evidence before him, come to the conclusion that Mr. Tayler was guilty of fraud, inasmuch as it had been concealed from the plaintiff that the property had been attached. According to the Act, the owner of a property had no right either to sell or mortgage it when it was attached. It mattered little whether the property was worth eighty thousand rupees or two lakhs. If Mr. Tayler thought the plaintiff was bound to have paid the decree, he might have, with equal reason, demanded from her the difference between the 50,000 and Rs. 80,000. His lordship was certain that if Mr. Tayler had an offer of 80,000, he would not have sold the property for Rs. 50,000. What his lordship could not understand was that Mr. Tayler had observed that, had the Chief Justice characterised his character as fraudulent, he should have had no reason to complain of the remarks of Mr. Justice Dwarkanauth Mitter. Was it because his lordship did not think it necessary to go into the question of fraud, or no fraud, that led Mr. Tayler to suppose that there was not a tittle of evidence? If there was not a tittle of evidence, how would his lordship's remarks satisfy Mr. Tayler? And then, how was Mr. Justice Dwarkanauth Mitter to recall the remarks he had made? Was there any evidence before him to alter the state of things—to show that the evidence upon which he based his remarks was false? Was he to take Mr. Tayler's statement that his mooktear was in jail upon a charge of embezzlement, and recall his remarks? Mr. Tayler had reiterated the same thing in his review. He said that he considered the reflections on the judge were an intellectual criticism. Now, his lordship could scarcely bring himself to believe that they assumed that character. On the contrary, the letters were anything but fair or manly criticism. In the first place, Mr. Tayler had misstated the facts to the public, and had carefully concealed the truth. When a critic wilfully concealed from the public the real facts of his case simply for the purpose of serving his own end, could that be said to be fair and honest criticism? The duty of a critic was to put before the public a true statement of the facts, and to set down nothing in malice. One of Mr. Tayler's objects might have been to vindicate his own character. His lordship was inclined to think that his sole object was not to vindicate his character. An honest man must know that he was not to vindicate his character by casting aspersions on another, and by wilfully suppressing the truth. His lordship did not think there was a single editor of a newspaper who would, in criticising the conduct of a public officer, wilfully conceal the facts of the case, or the grounds upon which that officer had based his decision or judgment. Mr. Tayler had promised to furnish the papers with a copy of the report of the proceedings taken on the review of judgment, but did not do so; he took upon himself to state his own case, which was entirely wrong. That Mr. Tayler must have known that what he wrote was not true, his lordship hoped to prove from his own mouth.

Mr. Tayler had stated in one of his letters that, had Mr. Justice Dwarkanauth Mitter been a district judge he might have been suspended; implying thereby, that the judge had been guilty of conduct such as would justify the Government in suspending him from his duties. Now, that was a very serious matter, and calculated to do an infinite amount of mischief. Judges should possess the confidence of the public, and if their acts were to be criticised in this way, it was the duty of the Court to take cognisance of it. Mr. Tayler had his remedy. He might have appealed to the Privy Council. He was not in the position of a needy suitor, and if he succeeded he would have fully vindicated his character. His lordship then referred to several authorities to show that the Court had the power to punish for contempt not only an author, but the printer and publisher. If the law had been otherwise with reference to the latter, even if the name of the author was given up, the Court would be powerless if the author, after sending in the letters, were to remove his person from the jurisdiction of the Court. If Mr. Tayler had not admitted that he was the writer of the letters his lordship would have been obliged to issue a notice against the printer and publisher. This opinion had been challenged, and his lordship proposed to prove that it was well founded. No doubt the responsibility of the publisher ceased when he gave up the author's name, but that again depended on certain circumstances. The responsibility was as great in the one case as in the other. That the printer or publisher was just as much responsible was obvious enough. If the editor, when he received those letters, had put them into his waste basket, no injury would have been caused to any one; but by their publication the aspersions that had been cast on a judge of the High Court had spread all over the country. The injury was increased by the circulation. No doubt neither the editor nor the publisher had any interest or feeling in the matter, but they must be taken to be the chief instruments through which the libel was circulated. Under the circumstances the Court had the power to punish both or either of them. In this case however his lordship did not see any necessity to punish both.

After some further remarks in vindication of Mr. Justice Mitter, and in reprobation of the charges rashly made against his Court by several of the Bengal papers, his lordship avowed himself an unflinching advocate for the freedom of the press. Since he had been in the country he had all along asserted that the freedom of the press was one of the bulwarks of their liberty. He was of opinion that the acts of public men should be subjected to the strictest scrutiny.

All that he claimed was that there should be no wilful, improper, or unfair concealment of facts on the part of the critic. Those who considered the judges to be infallible claimed infallibility to themselves. He considered the press of this country to be a fair and independent press, and not scurrilous. There had not been for some time a single criminal prosecution or any suit on the civil side of the Court. The papers in this country were read by an intelligent portion of the community, by those who were capable of appreciating a journal which was conducted fairly and temperately, and which was not scurrilous. The Courts here were, therefore, free from all complaints, either civil or criminal. He was a servant of her Majesty's Government, and if the Government believed that he had exercised powers which were either arbitrary, tyrannical, or unconstitutional, let the Government tell him so. He was not going to accept the expressions or opinions of newspapers. It must be understood that the judges are not to be intimidated by criticisms; nothing of that kind would disturb his equanimity or affect in the slightest degree the views he entertained, or the conclusions he arrived at. An honest and conscientious discharge of his duties had been the ruling aim of his life. His lordship was not to be shaken by any storms raised by the press. He wished for popularity; but it was that popularity which never failed. He would not do that which his conscience told him was wrong. After some further observations, his lordship said that he considered Mr. Tayler was guilty of a contempt of Court.

Mr. Justice Dwarkanauth Mitter said that he fully concurred in the opinions expressed by the Chief Justice. He considered Mr. Tayler was guilty of a contempt of Court.

The Chief Justice said that the Court would now adjourn to consider the order they would pass in the case.

After an absence of an hour and a half, their lordships returned to Court, and the Chief Justice, after some remarks upon the conduct of Mr. Tayler, said that the sentence of the Court was that he be imprisoned for one month in the Presidency jail, and pay a fine of Rs. 500; in case he did not pay the fine, that he be kept in prison till such fine was paid. If, however, Mr. Tayler would retract all the charges he had made against Mr. Justice Dwarkanauth, and admit that they were false and unfounded, for which purpose the Court would allow him time till the 3rd of May, the Court would cancel the order of imprisonment.

Mr. Justice Mitter said that after the very able and elaborate judgment delivered by the Chief Justice, it would be a waste of time for him to say anything further.

Mr. Tayler then addressed the Court, stating, as he did on the last occasion, that his intention in writing the letters was simply to vindicate his character. He considered himself very much wronged when Mr. Justice Dwarkanauth Mitter declined to withdraw his remarks, though the fact of his (Mr. Tayler's) mooktear having deceived him was prominently brought to notice. He was quite willing now to offer the most unqualified and unreserved apology for the letters he had written.

The Chief Justice asked Mr. Tayler whether he would admit that the charges he had made against Mr. Justice Mitter were false and unfounded?

Mr. Tayler: I will do that, my lord, with one reservation.

The Chief Justice said he did not wish to compel Mr. Tayler to do anything. He was quite at liberty to follow any course he thought fit.

Mr. Tayler said he was quite willing to sign any apology which the Court might think fit to draw up.—Abridged from the Indian Daily News.

In the Englishman of April 27 we find the following letter from Mr. W. Tayler:—

"SIR,—In addition to the apology published by me in the Englishman newspaper of the 22nd day of April instant, respecting the matters of contempt of Court charged against me, I regret to state that, upon reflection, I find that the charges made by me against Mr. Justice Dwarkanauth Mitter were unwarranted and wholly without foundation; and I declare that I had no intention to cast any reflection upon the High Court or upon any of the judges of that Court.—W. TAYLER."

STATION TALK.

MHOW, April 21.—Now that the hot weather is again with us, the thought has struck me why the sanitarium, discovered some few years back by Major Probyn, of the Khandaish Bheel Corps, on the Toorunmull-hill, 104 miles from the station, has never been tried by sending troops from this. If I remember rightly, Sir Bartle Frere, at the time Governor of Bombay, sanctioned a sum of Rs. 2,000 being expended in making a road and erecting a few buildings for the use of convalescents to be sent from this likely to benefit by the change, but I am not aware what the reason was of the hill not being so taken up. The Toorunmull-hill is eight marches from Mhow, and can by cart be reached easily in four days. The halting stations are said to be healthy, and tents might be pitched or temporary buildings erected at a trifling cost. The road is safe for Europeans after the 15th of December. No cholera or other epidemic is known on the hill, which consists of an irregular plateau of from eight to ten miles long, and of varied breadth. On the western side, that which Major Probyn recommends should be made the station, is a beautiful lake of excellent water of about two miles in circumference. Between the lake and the western face is a flat ridge of hard gravelly soil, elevated about sixty or eighty feet above the lake, and admirably suited for pitching tents. Major Probyn in his report says:—"Toorunmull has, I think an advantage over Mahableshwar in the following points:—There is little or no jungle on the hill, so that there is from all parts, and from the above mentioned ridge in particular, an uninterrupted view of magnificent hill scenery, such as is not surpassed by any place in the Bombay Presidency, and the appearance of the bright blue lake, fringed by handsome willow trees, gives a wonderfully cheerful look to the place; this alone is a great recommendation where sick men are concerned. The westerly wind, which is the prevailing one at all seasons at Toorunmull, is singularly cool and bracing. To the east and south of the lake lie several hills of four to five hundred feet high, which shelter the environs of the lake from any occasional easterly wind. I take it that amusement and employment are essential to a sick soldier; and here he can have any amount of roaming about the hill without having any temptation, and those so inclined may have gardens near the lake, indeed gardens of some kind would be necessary to furnish vegetables." Lord Napier of Magdala may possibly not know of such a sanitarium being so close to Mhow, or otherwise it seems strange why an attempt has not been made to garrison Toorunmull by convalescents sent from hence. Our popular General, Major-General Frank Adams, met with what might have been a serious accident on the morning of the 17th inst. He was driving into Indore with his A.D.C., Captain Angelo, when just out of the station one of the horses happened to stumble, in pulling him up the rein broke and they started off at a gallop. Captain Angelo and the native horsekeepers managed to jump out of the dog cart, but the major-general, at his age, not being so active, fell off the cart heavily on his side, breaking his collar bone. It is feared that such an accident at his time of life will compel General Adams to proceed home.

JHELUM, April 21.—The Deputy Commissioner, Lieutenant Colonel Bristow, marched hence for Cashmere on the morning of the 15th instant, making over charge of the district to Major Paske. The selection of Colonel Bristow for the Cashmere appointment is somewhat questionable. After ten years of solitude at Jhelum, quite apart from the world, in an atmosphere of mental stagnation, local rust and local cobwebs must have accumulated; and it is to be regretted that the air of Cashmere should have been selected by the Punjab Government to blow and brush the accumulation away. A cordial social character, embracing some knowledge of men, and possessing ability to deal with them with tact and judgment, is the kind of authority needed for the Cashmere civil charge. Overwhelming egotism stuck upon stilts is likely to be irritating to the mixed body of two or three hundred European visitors who are likely to visit the lovely Cashmere valley this coming season. However, mixing with our fellow-creatures often rounds off ugly angles, and it is to be hoped that all ugly angles will be rounded off in that charming valley in the next six months, and that the example of concord and urbanity which so stamped the good tact and amiable qualities of Lieutenant-Colonel Crafcoft during his tenure of office in Cashmere these two past years, will be the guiding-star to the officer selected for the present season. A little while ago it was currently reported that Lieut.-Colonel Bristow was to be appointed to the extra Commissionership of Rawul Pindee; but there seems some hitch in the matter. Some five or six of these new appointments are to be created, it is said, in the Punjab. But what upon earth are the peculiar functions of these extra commissioners to be? They are to be, as it were, the donkey-engines of the Punjab, and to receive a salary of 400 rupees a month, plus the salary of a first-class deputy commissioner; they are, in fact, to assist the commissioners. In other words, it may be stated that the appointments are to be created for deputy commissioners who have been superseded, and who never will be promoted to the grade of commissioner. But military officers in the army department are sometimes passed over, and medical officers in the Medical Department are sometimes passed over,—why not then create for them some extra appointment upon an increased salary, as well as evolve such a creation for officers in the Civil Department? If empty-headedness is to be paid for, then let it be paid for universally and not merely locally. If to pay for incompetency is justice, then let that justice be rendered to all alike throughout the whole of the military and Civil Service. About ten days ago the order for building new native lines was issued in this garrison, and already the lines are fast springing up. It is possible that by the end of May the native officers will be housed; and before the rains set in, it is to be hoped that all the sepoys will be under cover. The order to build the lines was a long time coming, but what of that; the troops are black troops, and the Quartermaster-General's Department is not so highly civilised yet as to comprehend the necessity of extending its humane consideration to the native soldiery. But the native soldiery has no House of Commons to protect it.

CHUKRATA, April 22.—His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, accompanied by Colonel Lumsden, Quartermaster General, and Major Gordon, A.D.C., arrived here about six P.M. on the 19th, and put up in the Sapper's lines, being the guest of Major Maunsell,

R.E., Commandant Sappers and Miners, and his officers. The chief looks hale and hearty, and does an immense deal of work. He and his staff rode all the way from Dehra to Chukrata, a distance of not less than fifty-four miles, at one stretch, with a rise at the end of some 6,000 feet! It is believed that he approves of the site of the new station, the only objection being that it is very narrow and straggling, and the water being so far from the barracks; however, this latter defect is to be made good by a canal from the village of Mohona right into the station. Mohona is on the south-east of the Deobund mountain, distant some seven miles. There is a company of Sappers employed upon this work, which is considered very important. The first detachment of the 55th Regiment, under the command of Captain J. F. Morton, arrived on Sunday. Since then several companies have been pushed up as fast as coolies and other carriage could be procured. All will be up in the course of a few days more. The ex-commissariat officer, Capt. J. V. Hunt, is indefatigable in his exertions, and has done wonders. Col. Bacon, cautionment magistrate, has arrived, but without any establishment or treasury. His duties, I should imagine, will be very light for some time to come, as crime is utterly unknown among hill men. The Sudder Bazaar is, however, increasing daily, and its residents are the scum of all the other stations, and require ruling with a rod of iron. There was a heavy hailstorm on the night of the 19th; since then the weather has been clear but warm. H.E. left for Simla yesterday morning via Deobund.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

EARTHQUAKE.—A slight shock of earthquake was felt in the Peshawur Valley at 3 A.M. on the 16th current.—Indian Public Opinion, April 20.

A FRONTIER RAID.—Punjab letters speak of a rumour that the Kabul Kheyl Waziris have made a raid near Thull, and carried off several hundred head of cattle.

ACCORDING to Burnah papers, an agent is at last to be appointed to Blamo. The local journals assert that Captain Strover has been nominated to the post.

LOSS OF THE SHIP "BOLINGBROKE."—CALCUTTA, April 29, 7.5 A.M.—The ship Bolingbroke, bound for London with a valuable miscellaneous cargo, was totally wrecked in the river yesterday off Hooghly point.

THE CASE OF MR. TAYLER.—The following telegram was received at Bombay on April 29:—"The Chief Justice ordered the issue of a rule nisi against the Englishman, yesterday, for contempt of Court, in having published comments on Mr. W. Tayler's case, and for having opened a subscription to pay the fine of Rs. 500."

TURKISTAN.—The news now being received from Turkistan is cheering. All the sirdars, including the Meer of Badakshan, are disposed to yield allegiance to Ameer Shere Ali Khan. Azim Khan's son has fled across the Oxus. This is believed, says the Pioneer, to be the first good result of the Umballa Conference.

RAJPOOTANA.—The Rajahs of Chota Oodeypoor and Soanah, and the Thakoor of Kuddana, have suspended the levy of transit duties on grain passing through their States, and the first two chiefs have removed all restrictions on the export of grain during the present season of scarcity.

THE AMEER OF KABUL.—On April 14 the Ameer had an interview at Peshawur with the Chiefs of the Khyber, and made arrangements with them for the safety of the Pass. It is said that he was to give them a subsidy of Rs. 25,000, and that they agreed to establish seven police stations for the protection of merchants.

THE RAID AGAINST THE BEZOTEES.—We observe that the thanks of the Government of India have been communicated to Colonel Keys, Captain Cavagnari, and the officers and men concerned, for their excellent services in the late brilliant and successful little expedition against the Bezotees.

AN AGED BEGUM.—We learn from Calcutta that the widow Begum of Nawab Kurreem Shaw, a brother of Tippoo Sultan, died on Saturday night, the 17th April. She had arrived at the ripe age of 114, and possessed to the last the full exercise of her faculties. She was married in the life-time of Hyder Ali. Though so closely connected with a regal family, the late Begum experienced but little of the cares of State. She has lived rather in comfortable retirement.

BOKHARA.—It is rumoured that the Ameer of Bokhara has been killed by his eldest son, the same who was lately so signally defeated by the Russians in concert with the Ameer. But there may be no truth in the rumour. Traders who have recently arrived in Cabul from Bokhara report that the Russian authorities have determined altogether to prohibit the importation of Indian goods into those portions of the Khanate over which they have any control. It is said that shopkeepers have been ordered to dispose of their stocks of such goods within four months, and to replace them with articles of Russian manufacture or import, patterns of which are officially supplied. Indian merchandise is not prohibited by name, but it is virtually by the enormity of the duty. Thus the import duty on Indian muslin (mul-mul) is 64 per cent. on value.

ECCELESIASTICAL.—The civil chaplaincy of Agra has been abolished, on account of the transfer of so many public offices. House rent at Agra has become almost nominal, and several fine bungalows have been pulled down for their materials.

LAHORE AND PESHAWUR RAILWAY.—Mr. H. Lee Smith, Chief Engineer of the Lahore and Peshawur Railway, had been summoned by the Viceroy to Simla, so as to render possible quicker and fuller consultation with Colonel Strachey than could be held by letter.

SERIOUS RAILWAY ACCIDENT.—The Nagpore paper gives some particulars regarding the melancholy accident that occurred on the Nagpore line on Friday evening, April 23. It appears that Mr. Wrottesley, Assistant Commissioner, Wurdah, left the Wurdah station for Sindee on Friday evening on a lorry, with the permanent-way inspector, Mr. Barnes. On the way between the two stations they were run into by an engine which left Nagpore at 4.45 P.M. It must have been about 7.30 or 8 o'clock P.M. when the sad occurrence happened. Mr. Wrottesley was killed, and the inspector had his left arm and leg so seriously injured as to render amputation necessary.

MILITARY.—It seems we are likely to hear more of the fracas between Major Morland, Brigade Major of Delhi, and Dr. Peskett, of the 17th Bengal Native Infantry. The Court of Inquiry submitted their report to Sir William Mansfield about a month ago, and now we hear that a general court-martial will be ordered to take up the subject.—Government has called on the Commissioner of Orissa to report whether twenty men have yet enrolled themselves as members of the Orissa mounted troop. The proposal to form such a troop at Cuttack dates back more than a year. The formation was delayed by the Keonjhar war, but at the end of December last meetings were called, at which it was shown that eighteen members had placed their names on the list. At these meetings Mr. D. Poole, Bengal Police, and Mr. G. Potheccary, D.P.W., were elected lieut. and cornet of the troop, respectively. Should the troop be formed, the uniform will be a white frogged riding coat, black boots, white breeches, and Elwood's helmet. The Commissioner, who will hold the post of Commandant, will hold himself responsible for the arms and accoutrements that may be supplied to the troop.—Englishman, April 23.—We regret to learn that cholera of a very virulent type has made its appearance at Fyzabad. A few cases had occurred in H.M.'s 1-11th Regiment, and the regimental authorities, we are glad to hear, are making every arrangement possible to check the spreading of the disease.—Lucknow Times, April 21.

THE VILLAGE WATCH.—The committee on the much vexed and long delayed question of the Village Watch of Bengal have, we believe, drawn up their report. The committee's proposals and draught Bill, avoiding the revolutionary and impracticable scheme of Mr. McNeil, contemplate the improvement of existing village institutions, not their destruction. The chowkeedar is to be a servant of the village, not of the zemindar, to be appointed by a punchayet of villagers, and to be paid Rs. 4 a month in cash by a member of the punchayet, who will receive 5 per cent. for collecting the rate, and will be treated as a public accountant liable to the law for his collections and payments. The chowkeedar will be subject to the district superintendent of police departmentally, and to the magistrate so far as dismissal and fine are concerned. In the case of the service lands of the Western districts and Midnapore, the chowkeedars, whether known as chakeran, ghatwal, tabidar, simanidar or paik, will be similarly treated, their lands reverting to the zemindar, who will pay a proportionate rate to the punchayet and so far relieve the village community. At present the law of Asia prevails—the poor pay and the rich escape. We trust the committee's system of assessment will be such that this state of things will be reversed. If the Lieutenant-governor and the local Council adopt proposals which at first sight seem to be recommended by their equity, their simplicity, and adaptation to the people, we shall see the revival of village communities in Bengal, not in the form favoured by Mr. Thomason, under which the community is like the joint-family—a body corrupting within and combining to resist all progress, but as self-acting municipalities, uniting to withstand the oppression of the zemindar and to put down crime, while leaving to each family its own rights of individual property and independent action.—Friend of India.

THE PRESIDENCY COLLEGE.

The anniversary meeting of the Presidency College was held on Monday evening, in the hall of the College; his Excellency the Governor presided, and there was a large assemblage of gentlemen. Among those present we noticed his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, his Highness the Maharajah of Vizianagram, and the Honourable Messrs. Gajapathi Row and Ramaiengar.

Mr. Powell, the Director of Public Instruction, opened the proceedings with an address to the following effect. The Principal's report showed that the working of the institution had been decidedly satisfactory. One very great feature in the history of the University during the past year was the great increase that had taken place in the number of B.A.'s. A large number had passed out of the Presidency College and other schools. A large number of the new B.A.'s had been private students. The truth was that these had belonged to the several schools in the Presidency, and mainly to the Presidency College, but having left school early had become employed, and had then continued their studies and passed. This was not a place to review the work of the Combaconum College; but he could not but say that Mr. Porter had conducted that institution admirably. In addition to the eleven graduates who had proceeded from the Combaconum College Mr. Porter had turned out a fair number of successful candidates in the F. A. Examination. There was, however, something peculiarly striking in the success that had attended the candidates who presented themselves from the Combaconum College for the Matriculation Examination. The number of successful candidates from that provincial college was larger than that of all the other schools put together. The Presidency College students had done well at the F. A. Examination. Half of those who had presented themselves succeeded. A marked feature in the late Matriculation Examination was that a very large number of the students who gave in their names were not prepared. There was a great wastage of time and money by this evil, there being no check to keep unprepared students from the examination. The only thing that the University could do would be to resort to the system practised in Calcutta, which was to require each candidate presenting himself to furnish a certificate of qualification from the institution in which he might be studying. He found from the Bengal reports that this system was attended with success. The evil alluded to appeared to be greatest at the Presidency town, where there was a number of institutions. Young men here were in the habit of plying about from one institution to another, and after obtaining a smattering knowledge of the subjects, to present themselves for examination. Another striking feature in the history of the University was the production of an M.A. It did not seem to him to be in good taste to compare Universities. But this had been done by others. As it had often been stated, to the reproach of the Madras University, that no M.A. had proceeded out of it, he thought it necessary to draw attention to the very high standard as compared with the standard in other Universities which a candidate was required to attain before he could get even a second class M.A. The standard, it had been admitted by many, was very high. Now, though it might be said the Madras University had but one M.A., it could always be said that one was a good one. He next came to a point that was not altogether so pleasant as the subjects he had already dwelt upon. It was the unsatisfactory state of the Law class. The number of students was very small. He regretted to say that the Elphinstone Essay prize was withdrawn this year. This prize was intended solely for Hindoos. It had been founded some years ago in honour of Lord Elphinstone, and was reserved for natives. On the present occasion no Hindoo had come up to the standard required for obtaining it. The University rules had a tyrannous influence on education. Students could not be got to take an interest in any subject which was not set down for the University examinations. This had been the case with English composition. But now as English composition had been made one of the subjects for the B.A. Examination, he had no doubt that the students would take an interest in it. In conclusion he had to thank the principal and professors of the College for having endeavoured their utmost to get the students on in their studies.

The Principal then read his report, from which it appeared that the institution had done creditably at the B. A. Examination. In the F. A. Examination the students had not been very successful. For the matriculation twenty-nine pupils passed out of sixty who presented themselves. The annual examination was held in December last, and the results were very satisfactory. A good beginning had been made in Sanscrit. The Law class was not doing well, a falling off having taken place in the number of students.

Two English Essays and a Tamil Essay were next read.

His Excellency then distributed the prizes and certificates, and after some further comments, the meeting broke up.—Madras Times, April 26.

Miscellaneous.

DIVORCE COURT.—We understand that a second petition has been filed in this Court, and a third is looming in the distance. The High Court, apparently, is likely to be a good deal occupied in matrimonial causes for some time to come.—Madras Athenæum.

CIVIL.—The Secretary of State has intimated to the Madras Government that he has appointed Captain R. A. Roberts, of the Royal (Madras) Engineers, to superintend the improvements to be effected in the Victoria Hospital at Suez.

ECCLÉSIASTICAL.—We regret to learn of the death, at Calicut, on the 17th April, of Mr. Gibson, who was fourth on the list of chaplains of the Madras establishment. He was admitted on the establishment on the 3rd March, 1849, a little more than twenty years ago, and since September, 1863, had been officiating at Calicut.

LOSS OF THE SHIP "SARAH SANDS."—Telegrams from Cochin, received in Bombay, report the total loss of the iron ship Sarah Sands, 1,150 tons, from Liverpool, December 7, with a cargo of coals bound to Bombay. According to the telegram the vessel struck on Kulpeny Reef, Laccadive Islands, and became a total loss. The crew were saved, and had arrived at Calicut.

MR. J. D. SIM.—The steamer which left Madras last night temporarily deprived Madras of the services of one of the ablest and most conscientious servants which this Government has ever had the good fortune to secure. Mr. Sim has gone home with good wishes both official and private. The Government will be glad when returning good health enables him to resume his official career, and society will wait impatiently until the void occasioned by his absence is again filled up.—Madras Athenæum, April 21.

TROOPS FOR PORT BLAIR.—The E Company Madras Sappers and Miners, consisting of one European and one native officer, one hundred and nineteen native non-commissioned rank and file, ten public and nine private followers, which left Bangalore on the 23rd April, was to embark at Madras for Port Blair on the morning of April 24, on the steamer Punjab.

OFFICIAL THRIFT.—The Superintending Engineer of the 3rd Division in the Madras Presidency would be esteemed a treasure at home in the departments where economy in the use of quills is so rigidly enjoined. It appears from a Madras paper that he has lately reminded range officers of the time during which some articles of "stationery" must be kept in use. It seems that a single-blade pen-knife ought to last four years, a strap eight, and a hone eight years, while the endurance of a ruler and of a wooden ink-stand is estimated at ten years!

THE FLOATING DOCK.—The Bombay correspondent of the Madras Mail says of the floating dock—"This dock is being constructed in England, and sent out in pieces. These pieces are now coming to hand, and being conveyed over to the Hog Island, where they will be put together by an engineer from England—the contractor I believe, and not anybody from H. M.'s dockyard. Said engineer flatters himself he can erect the dock in an unconscionably short space of time, whereat the old hands who know how difficult it is to carry on a big job in Bombay from what it is in England say nothing, but wink knowingly. The dock at Hog Island will require the establishment of quite a little colony there. Barracks will have to be built for workmen, a bazaar established, &c., as it would be sheer waste of time, and an unnecessary expense to convey several hundred hands from, say, Mazagon in the morning, and back again at night."

PROPOSED EXHIBITION.—A Military Workshop Exhibition will be held at Madras in December next, under the patronage of his Excellency the Governor and his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief. All corps, native as well as European, serving in the Madras Presidency, will be permitted to compete, and prizes will be given for the best productions in every branch of industry. The Exhibition will not be confined to contributions from workshops, but will be open to all men, women, and children of corps. Soldiers are specially invited to contribute articles of mechanism and invention, which, if showing skill and superior workmanship, will be rewarded with higher prizes than those for ordinary contributions, and may perhaps be purchased by museums and other institutions. Special prizes will be awarded to the best exhibitors among soldiers' wives, and for the best specimens of children's industry.

MILITARY.—The services of Lieut. col. W. S. Simpson and Capt. W. Anderson, of the Staff Corps, have been placed at the disposal of the Chief Commissioner of Mysore, for appointment, respectively, as commandant and adjutant of the Volunteer Rifle Corps at Bangalore.—The Hyderabad correspondent of the Englishman mentions a report that an officer commanding a cavalry regiment is said to have tendered his resignation in consequence of some censure passed upon him. The Resident gave him an opportunity of reconsidering his decision. Captain Bell is spoken of as likely to succeed Capt. Fitzgerald, lately deceased.—We regret to announce the death on Thursday evening, at the Presidency, of dysentery, of Lieut. col. J. C. Day, officiating commandant 17th Regiment N.I. His remains were interred yesterday evening with military honours in St. Mary's Cemetery.—Two companies and the head-quarters of the 8th Regiment N.I. arrived on Friday, April 23, by the steamer Nubia. The men disembarked in the evening, and marched to the Monument Esplanade, where they will remain in camp until they leave for Mercara.—Madras Times, April 24.

CALL ON THE ALLIANCE FINANCIAL SHAREHOLDERS.—On Thursday, in the High Court, Mr. Justice Westropp, on the application of Mr. McCulloch, on behalf of the official liquidators, made an order for a call of 50 rupees on the first list of contributories of the Alliance Financial Association, payable on or before the 20th May.

DEATH OF VETERINARY SURGEON PHILLIPS.—We regret to have to announce the death of Veterinary Surgeon Phillips, 3rd K. O. Hussars, on the 21st instant, from "coup de soleil," whilst out shooting at Beylappoor, about thirty-six miles from Ahmednuggur. His remains were brought into Ahmednuggur on the morning of the 22nd, and were interred that evening with all military honours. The deceased had been about five years in the service, and was very popular among his brother officers, by whom his loss will be much felt.—Bombay Gazette.

THE RIVER INDUS.—We stated some time ago that the River Indus had again been causing trouble and loss, having changed its course near the mouth; consequently, Sir William Merewether and the Chief Engineer proceeded to the delta to see what steps could be taken to remedy the evil. We are told that, for the present at least, a bund is to be thrown across the mouth of the Ochta, one of the branches of the Indus, by which means, it is believed, the main stream of the river will resume its original course. Other works in connection with the change in the course of the Indus are in contemplation, and it is expected that they will be taken in hand and completed before the height of the inundation.—Times of India.

SHIKAR.—The big game bag made by Captain St. J. Daubeney's party which started about three weeks since to Shikar, in the Rajghur and Mahableshwar jungles, has, after a great deal of hard work, and not the best of outset luck, amounted to one tiger and six bears killed, and two bears and a sambar all badly hit, but subsequently lost in the thick jungles. In Khandeish, Mr. Pedder, C.S., and Lieut. Birdwood have commenced well by killing two tigers in two days; and in Central India, and in the Asseerghur Jungles, where two parties are at work, we learn that particularly good bags have been made, but are not in possession of details. The Karli and Easapore Ghat ranges will also be beaten during the course of this month.—Poona Observer, April 27.

SIR JOSEPH ARNOULD.—Sir Joseph Arnould will bid farewell to India on the 1st proximo. He leaves the country with the sympathies and regret of the people. During the ten years of his judicial career in India on the bench of the highest judicial tribunal in this presidency, he has not given so much as a single occasion for serious censure or disapprobation on the part of the native community. His love of honest work, his cool patience, his conscientious dispensation of justice without regard to colour or creed, his deep learning, and his merciful disposition, will long be remembered by the people of Bombay after he has retired from the scene of his labour. Several of his judgments, such as the one in the great Maharaja libel case, will be ever quoted as models of eloquence and judicial learning. The address from the native community to such a gentleman is the genuine expression of heartfelt sympathy.—Indu Prakash.

BITTEN BY A SNAKE.—On the evening of the 4th instant a man named Meetha Perbhoram, a resident in the Commissariat lines, whilst returning from a wash at a well, situate not far off from his house, was bitten by a snake, which lay coiled up in the way, and on which the man trampled. An alarm was raised, and the reptile, which still lay coiled up on the spot where it bit the man, was killed. Perbhoram was soon conveyed to the Civil Hospital, where he received the greatest possible attention from Dr. Hopkins and his assistants. Sleep was prevented by Dr. Hopkins for two days running. We should have stated that one of the toes of the man's right foot was bitten, and this caused his leg to be considerably swollen. The patient received close and careful treatment for six days, and was sufficiently well to be discharged from the hospital on the seventh.—Sindian, April 21.

PERSIA.—The Friend of India says "the belief in the East is that, for some reason or other, Mr. Alison is not a fit representative of English, not to mention Anglo-Indian, interests in Persia. Now that we are about to resume our old relations with Persia, while we may be called on to resist her aggressions on our Afghan ally and on the chief whom we protect at Kheilat, we trust Mr. Eastwick and Sir C. Wingfield will raise the question in the House of Commons, whether a skilled Anglo-Indian officer should not again be appointed to Teheran, and be placed under the India Office in concert with the Governor-General. There is reason to fear that, at this critical time, Persia is using Mr. Alison to influence the present Cabinet in such a way as to checkmate the Government of India in its determination to support its ally, the Ameer Shere Ali, in restoring the integrity of the territory left to him by his father. Persia's occupation of Seistan is as real a violation of treaty as would be the seizure of Herat. It is, to say the least, unseemly that the old scandal of the days of Sir John Malcolm and Sir Harford Jones should be repeated—that Mr. Alison in Teheran should become, from ignorance of course, the instrument of a policy contrary to that which treaties, English honour, humanity and self-interest have combined in leading the Government of India to adopt at last."

UTILISATION OF SEWAGE.—A hopeful experiment is about to be made in the utilisation of sewage. Twenty-three acres of submerged land in D'Mellow's-road has been applied for by Colonel Denison for reclamation and sewage irrigation. The contents of the Eroongoom and Pursewalkum main drains, which now empty in the swamp, and pool and stagnate to the detriment of health, are to be conducted into properly constructed reservoirs, and then treated scientifically for irrigating this farm. The sanitary commissioner has, we learn, after minute inquiry and personal inspection of the spot, in company with his secretary, given his sanction for the experiment, and the works will be put in hand immediately the Government order for the acquisition of the land is received. There can be no doubt as to the injury which results from the practice of conducting sewage in rivers or into tanks from whence the people derive their water supply ; and yet we have been credibly informed that not only is the Coom thus defiled for its entire length within Municipal limits, but that there are numerous instances in Triplicane of tanks being similarly treated. It is imperatively necessary that such a practice should be discontinued, and we therefore hail the adoption of a system which may convert sewage from a nuisance into a permanent and increasing source of agricultural fertility. If this experiment succeeds the ratepayers will experience a pecuniary benefit in addition to a sanitary gain.

No officer in the public service should be allowed to receive fees except under the special previous sanction of your Excellency's Govt. . . . It was very desirable that the views of the Supreme Govt. should be made known as a guide to local administrations in dealing with claims of this nature in future. 3. I fully concur in the view that has been taken by your Govt. of the three particular cases that have come under their notice, and am of opinion that the practice of allowing officers to receive fees and commissions, except under very exceptional circumstances, would be detrimental to the public service.

THE SUBORDINATE MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.

The following is a letter addressed by Mr. Ellis to the Government of India:—

With reference to your letter dated Sept. 30, 1868, No. 4,639; proceedings, Feb. 17, 1869, Nos. 39-43; letter from Director of Public Instruction, dated March 11, 1869, No. 608; I am directed to transmit, for submission to H.E. the Viceroy and Governor general, the accompanying correspondence regarding the supply of medical subordinates to British Burmah.

2. It will be seen that three plans for obtaining a supply were proposed by the Inspector general Indian Medical Department.

He suggested—

1st. That an extra batch of pupils might be entertained specially for service in Burmah; or,
2nd. That service in Burmah might form part of the duties of the hospital assistant department as a whole; or,
3rd. That volunteers for service in Burmah might be called for annually, when the annual batch passes its final examination.

Of these three plans Dr. Mackenzie considered the first on every account preferable; the second, as he remarked, would be merely an extension of the system pursued in the military department, under which constant reliefs are necessary, and men almost always go unwillingly; while the third would be too uncertain in its operation to insure the wants of the province being at all times regularly supplied. The Madras Government, I am to state, concur with the Inspector general Indian medical department, in considering it essential that the subordinate medical establishment for service in British Burmah should be a separate one, and that special inducements should be held out to men to enter it.

3. The inducements Dr. Mackenzie proposed to offer are—

(a.) Present pay of grade with 50 per cent. extra allowance, and free rations.
(b.) Increase of pay on passing a colloquial examination in the Burmese language.
(c.) Further increase after five years' service.
(d.) Special allowances for independent charges.
(e.) Permission to return to India after a fixed period of time, and on sick certificate when necessary, with retention of a portion of pay.
(f.) Free passage to and from Burmah for themselves and their families.

It appears to this Government that these terms, although liberal, do not exceed what may in justice be expected. The attention of the Government of India is solicited to the Inspector general's remarks on this point in paragraphs 10 and 11 of his letter.

4. The education of the hospital assistants required for British Burmah would necessitate an addition of 48 pupils to the Medical College, at the following cost:—

Total expenditure on account of 48 pupils for the first year	Rs. 4224
Do. for the second year 58 pupils	5488
Do. for the third year, 68 pupils	7024
Do. for the fourth year, 78 pupils	1680
Do. for the fifth year, and for future years, 40 pupils	4120

In these sums the principal of the Medical College states that three items of expense have not been included, because no approximate estimate of their amount can be given, viz., first the value of clothing due to these lads in accordance with the order of Government, No. 550, June 5, 1868, paragraph 37; secondly, putting money paid a second time to such lads as join college from out-stations; and thirdly, travelling allowance to such lads as join college from the Mofussil.

5. An addition to the teaching power of the Medical College will also be required, and will necessitate an expenditure which will vary according to the grade of assistants employed, but the average of which will probably not exceed Rs. 431 monthly. This subject has been fully discussed in the 5th and 6th paragraphs of the letter from the principal of the Medical College, and I am to state that this Government concur in Dr. Smith's views.

Home.

THE BRITISH INDIAN CABLE.—The Great Eastern leaves for Bombay with the British Indian Cable, together with Sir Samuel Canning and his staff, early in November next.

BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY.—A general meeting of the British India Steam Navigation Company is for May 26 (this day), when a dividend is to be declared.

LONDON AND BOMBAY BANK.—In the matter of the London and Bombay Bank, now in liquidation, a call of £2 per share was, on the application of the official liquidators, ordered by the Chief Clerk to Vice-Chancellor Stuart. The amount is payable in London on the 1st July, and in India on the 1st September.

THE MESSAGERIES IMPERIALES STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY.—It is announced that the directors of the Messageries Impériales intend to propose, at the approaching annual meeting, a dividend for 1868 of 50 francs, of which 20 francs have already been paid on account.

EXPORT OF BULLION.—The exports of bullion by the P. and O. steamer of May 8 and 15 from Southampton, were as follows:—To Bombay, gold £27,600. From Marseilles (May 9).—To Bombay, gold £89,000. From Southampton to Madras, gold £1,785; from Marseilles to Calcutta, gold £30,000. To Penang, gold £20,000.

BOMBAY, BARODA, AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY COMPANY.—The half-yearly meeting of the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway Company will be held on June 18, when "a resolution will be submitted to the meeting for the consolidation into capital stock of the company of all shares which may have been fully paid up."

BILLS ON INDIA.—The biddings for £350,000 in bills on India took place on Wednesday, the 19th inst., at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £329,000; and to Madras, £21,000. The minimum price was fixed at 1s. 10½d. Tenders on both presidencies at 1s. 10½d. will receive about 89 per cent., those above that price in full. No tenders were invited on Bombay.

NEW BRONZE GUN FOR INDIA.—Further trials of the new bronze field gun for India have been made at Shoeburyness, with a continuation of very satisfactory results. The light iron carriages are perfect in their endurance. Case shot was also fired from the light Abyssinian steel gun at 200 yards, the effects of the bullets being severe upon the targets.

WILL OF SIR ARTHUR BULLER.—The will of Sir Arthur William Buller, Knight, M.P., formerly Judge of the Supreme Court at Calcutta, was proved in London, on the 12th inst., by the joint acting executors, Edmond Robert Wodehouse, Esq., and Admiral Sir Robert Spencer Robinson, C.B., Controller of the Navy. The personality in England was sworn under £35,000. The testator has bequeathed to his daughter, Annie Kate Buller, for her own use absolutely, 80,000 rupees of the currency of India; and leaves the residue of his property to his executors, for their own use, equally between them.

SUPERSESSION OF OFFICERS.—Copies of several letters from officers in the Queen's army which have been addressed to the War-office, complaining of their supersession by junior officers in the Indian army, are published in a Parliamentary paper. It is asserted that, by the operation of the War-office circular of the 15th June, 1864, the promotion of the colonels on the Indian list to the rank of major-general, as compared with that of the colonels on the British list, is so excessive, that whereas colonels of the year 1855 are still unpromoted in the Queen's army, colonels of 1863 are now being promoted in the Indian service. It is contended, therefore, that a strong claim exists for the readjustment of rank.

A SHIP CANAL THROUGH FRANCE.—Another ship canal is talked of. The project, which is said to be under the consideration of the Municipal Council of Bordeaux, is to cut a communication from the Bay of Biscay to the Mediterranean. The proposer, M. Staal de Magnonecourt, estimates the cost of the work at 442,000,000 francs, less than £18,000,000, and the time necessary for its completion at six years. It would form a direct line of communication with India by the Isthmus of Suez, and save the whole circuit of the Portuguese and Spanish coasts in the case of ships from England or any of the northern ports of Europe. An English journal, the Engineer, says that as regards the practicability and comparative economy of the project there cannot be a doubt.

CHARTERED BANK OF INDIA.—The annual meeting of the shareholders of this bank has been held at the offices, Old Broad-street, Mr. G. Wick in the chair. From the report it appeared that the net profits for the year, after deducting all charges and making provision for bad and doubtful debts, amounted to £123,376. 18s. 11d., or equal to a dividend of 16½ per cent. per annum on paid-up capital. Two dividends amounting to 6 per cent. per annum have been declared, and the remainder of the profits have been appropriated to the extinction of the loss sustained during the crisis of 1866. The reserve fund now stands at £150,000. On the motion of the Chairman seconded by Mr. Lamack, the report was unanimously agreed to. The directors and other officers were re-elected, and the proceedings then terminated.

COMMERCIAL BANK CORPORATION.—A petition for the sanctioning of an arrangement between the shareholders and creditors of the Commercial Bank Corporation of India and the East is to be heard before the Master of the Rolls on May 29.

BRITISH INDIAN SUBMARINE TELEGRAPH COMPANY.—The report of the British Indian Submarine Telegraph Company (Limited), to be submitted on the 28th inst., states that the whole of the capital required from the public—viz. £550,000—has been subscribed; that the order for the cable has been given to the Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company, and the first payment of £50,000 made to them, as provided by the contract; that 250 miles of core have been completed, while about 500 miles are in the various stages of manufacture, and that there is every reason to believe it will be completed within the contract time. With regard to the prospectus issued in March last of a proposed "Direct English, Indian, and Australian Submarine Telegraph Company," to lay light cables between England and the East, it is mentioned that "the scheme has been withdrawn and the deposits returned, so that the threatened opposition is at an end."

THE BRINDISI ROUTE.—Captain Tyler's report to the Board of Trade on the facilities afforded by the Brenner Pass and the Brindisi route for communication with the East was issued on Friday last as a Parliamentary paper. Captain Tyler sees nothing to prevent an express service being organised on the Brenner line. The time occupied in travelling by it from London to Alexandria would be 150 hours; by Mont Cenis 150½ hours, or 147½ when the tunnel is finished. There would be a saving of thirty hours over the Marseilles route. Captain Tyler says, however, that these routes will only be provisional, pending the advance of railway communication through the south-east of Europe and the west of Asia. "The hope of the Indian traveller of the next generation," he adds, "chimerical as it may appear to many at present, must be nothing less than to pass dryshod from London to Bombay—through a submarine tunnel from Dover to Calais—through Europe by railway—over the Bosphorus by a bridge, and forward by railway down the Euphrates Valley, and round the Persian Gulf to Bombay."

TROOPS FROM INDIA.—The Essex, East Indiaman, 1,255 tons, Captain Charles Hodder, belonging to Messrs. George Marshall and Son, of Philpot-lane, London, arrived off Spithead at 10 p.m. on May 17 from Calcutta, whence she sailed on the 2nd of February, with 190 military invalids, twenty soldiers' wives, and forty children, under the command of Captain Salway, 26th Cameronians, and in medical charge of Dr. Beattie, 79th Highlanders. The troops were disembarked on Wednesday, and sent by special train to the Royal Victoria Hospital, Netley. The passenger list of the Essex comprises Captain and Mrs. Wroughton, Bengal Army, and two children; Captain M'Causland and Lieutenant Methuen, 79th Highlanders; Lieutenant and Mrs. Pennington, Bengal Cavalry, and three children (one child died on the voyage); the Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Patterson and five children; Miss Parkerson, Mrs. Cooper, and five children. One hundred and eighty-eight invalid and time-expired soldiers of various regiments serving in India, arrived at Portsmouth last week from Calcutta in the transport Shannon, and were sent by special train direct to the Royal Victoria Hospital, Netley, on the 13th inst. This transmission of invalids by railway has only recently been sanctioned by the authorities.

DEATH OF THE REV. ALEXANDER DYCE.—The death is announced of the Rev. Alexander Dyce. He was the son of a general officer in the East India Company's service, and was born in 1798. He was ordained in 1819 to the curacy of Llantiglos, Cornwall, and was afterwards curate of Nayland, near Colchester. This appointment he resigned in 1827, and settling himself in London, devoted himself to literature. His earliest publications were "Select Translation from Quintus Smyrnaeus," an edition of the poet Collins, and "Specimens of British Poetesses." He subsequently edited, with notes and biographies, the dramatic works of Peele, Greene, Webster, Middleton, Beaumont and Fletcher, Marlowe and Shirley. He also published the critical and theological works of Bentley, the poetical works of Skelton, while he contributed the lives of Shakespeare, Pope, Akenside, and Beattie to "Pickering's Aldine Poets." Mr. Dyce, however, is best known by his valuable editions of Shakespeare. For the Camden Society he undertook the publication of Kemp's "Nine Days' Wonder," and for the Shakespeare Society, of the old tragedies of "Timon" and "Sir Thomas More." He was also one of the founders of the Perry Society, several volumes of whose series were edited by him. He was the author of "Recollections of the Table Talk of Samuel Rogers."

MADRAS RAILWAY.—The seventeenth annual meeting was held on Thursday last at the London Tavern. Mr. J. Walker, who presided, in moving the adoption of the directors' report (which has been published), expressed pleasure at the steady progress which it indicated. During the half-year there had been an increase of 52,374 passengers, and 26,000 tons of merchandise carried, as compared with the corresponding half of the previous year. In the gross receipts the increase had been £51,133, which was equal to 22½ per cent., and in the net receipts the excess had been £35,216, or equal to 27 per cent., the increased mileage being only 3½ per cent. They had suffered loss from the bursting of tanks, some of which belonged to the Government, and others to the Zemindars. With regard to the former, the Government had made arrangements for a more perfect supervision of their embankments; and as to the latter, proceedings at law had been instituted to recover compensation from the Zemindars, failing which it was believed the Government would assist in passing an Act specifically defining the liability. The traffic had been carried on satisfactorily, free from accident, and he was happy to say that from the commencement they had carried fifteen millions of people on their railway without hurting anybody. He entered into explanatory detail of the report in regard to the receipts, working charges, and works on the two sections of the undertaking—the south-west and Bangalore and the north-west line, pointing out the satisfactory progress in all respects, the advantages arising from the substitution of iron for wood sleepers, and the gratifying results of increased income with comparatively small addition to the cost of working. Mr. Arbuthnot seconded the motion. The Chairman, in reply to questions, stated that there had been nothing like a permanent interruption of the traffic by the bursting of the tanks, but there had been a loss of traffic and an addition to the expenses in consequence, for which they were claiming compensation. The survey which had been undertaken did not lead to the opinion that it would be remunerative. The Government, he believed, contemplated making a line to Dewar, up to the cotton country, but the directors might be relied upon for not embarking in any undertaking that would in any way prejudice the interests of the shareholders. The resolution was carried unanimously. The directors retiring by rotation and the auditors were re-elected, and a resolution altering the date of the annual meetings from March or April to May or June, in order to afford more time for making up the accounts, having passed, a vote of thanks to the chairman and his colleagues wound up the proceedings.

EDUCATED NATIVES.

The Standard thinks that every one who knows India will acknowledge the wisdom of the advice given by the Madras Advocate General to the natives, not to be content with looking to Government service as the end of their academic career. The temptation to do so is the bane of the whole system of European education in India. The great object of the native youth is to pass a successful examination, with a view to reaching a Government appointment. The majority of them, together with their parents and friends, even, seem to look for places under Government as a necessary result of their education; and they are disposed to regard it as a kind of breach of contract when Ramoo Samee, a Lutchee Doss, having been crammed with all the learning of the West, is not immediately furnished with a Civil Service appointment. It could not but be of benefit to students of this kind to be told by Mr. Norton that "instruction directed to this sole end and sought for this sole end may sharpen the intellect, but most unquestionably it narrows while it sharpens. All the real objects of general education—the creation of independence of mind, the installation of a love of truth for its own sake, the strengthening of the powers of reflection, the training up the faculty of forming correct judgment, and the like—are forgotten in the one great struggle to get into and to pass out of the university. This is one of the evils incidental perhaps to all systems of State education that may lead up to a regular profession of bureaucracy, and it is not alone the students of the Patcheappah Institution who need Mr. Norton's warning. The mischievous results of the cramming system are, however, more to be dreaded in India than perhaps any other country. It is not only that there is being created a new class, every year increasing in a geometrical ratio, who are in spirit and by nature of the inferior race, and yet by education and acquired civilisation of the superior; but that there is an almost irresistible tendency on the part of the great inexperienced British public to consider the educated youth of India fit for Government because of their education. Now, nothing can be more fatal to the prosperity of our empire in India—more injurious, as we believe, to the people of India, than any general acceptance of the principle that every native youth who wins academic distinction in the local universities is fit to take his place as an equal of the European rulers. Judged by the examination test, we have no hesitation in saying that there could be found among the native scholars of the presidency universities a sufficient number to beat all the English civilians in acquired learning. But it would be absurd to suppose that this implies that the native is more fit than the European for the business of government. Mr. Norton, who is well known to be one of the warmest friends of the natives, rebukes the idea that merely by acquiring a proficiency in the academical text-books the native youth can hope successfully to compete with Europeans and rise to the higher offices of the State. The English "competition wallah" may not be altogether a happy invention, but an influx of native competition wallahs is one of the greatest dangers to be looked for in the future of India.

Exercise most wonderful power in promoting appetit improving digestion, regulating the bowels, and removing nervousness and debility. The weakest will take no harm from the use of this alternative and tonic medicine, but will gradually regain their health. The strongest will preserve themselves from many of the misdeeds into which their boasted strength and hardihood as results often betray them. Long-suffering invalids may look towards this rectifying and revivifying medicine with the certain hope of having their maladies mitigated if not removed by their means. In short, for all ages, circumstances, and conditions, Holloway points out the treatment which is competent to check the progress of disorders in, and expel its seeds from, the human frame.

PUBLISHERS' NOTICE.

The writer of these volumes—an accomplished member of a family whose name is conspicuous in Indian story—being now resident in India, they have not had the benefit of her final corrections. It is hoped, however, that this inevitable drawback will detract but little from the pleasure to be afforded by the perusal of the tales, which are, indeed, what they profess to be, stories of English Homes in India, represented as such homes are in different parts of the country and under various social and professional aspects. They endeavour fairly and without exaggeration to illustrate Anglo-Indian life as it is, in its many varying phases, and to bring upon the scene, in their everyday costume, many kinds of Anglo-Indian workmen, from the Resident at a Native Court, to the subaltern officer and the railway employé; and it is believed that all who have visited the countries described will recognise the truth of the portraiture.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, May 8; Agra and Calcutta, May 4; Madras, May 3.

Colonel Keyes and Lieutenant Cavnari have been out on another little foray among the hills near Kohat. In their late raid on the village of Thull, the Kabul and Tazi Khail Wazeeries managed to carry off a thousand head of cattle. The Deputy-Commissioner at once urged the Government to prompt measures of retaliation at a time when few of the marauding tribes remained in the vallies to guard their ripening crops. Colonel Keyes was accordingly commissioned to do the needful, while the Commissioner of Peshawar obtained orders from the Ameer of Kabul that his officers should give all aid to the British troops if they found it needful to enter the Koorun Valley in pursuit of the enemy, part of whose lands lie beyond the Valley. No blood however was shed on this occasion. Colonel Keyes started on the 24th April for the Meeranzai Valley; but he had not gone far when the Wazeeries came to terms, agreeing to pay a fine of Rs. 2,000 at once, to surrender as many head of cattle as they could get together, and to send in two hostages for the payment within a month of Rs. 6,000, as compensation for the unreturned cattle. The troops are said to have returned from Thull, "well pleased with their pleasant trip into the Meeranzai Valley."

THE squabble between the Calcutta High Court and the Englishman has been settled by a sort of compromise. Mr. Tayler having got off his month's imprisonment by the making of a full apology to all the judges, it was the Englishman's turn to show cause why its editor and printer should not be punished for contempt of Court in the instances we referred to last week. After a hearing which lasted three day, Sir Barnes Peacock seems to have yielded to the arguments used by Messrs. Kennedy and Paul, including a list of the subscribers to the fund for paying Mr. Tayler's fine; and the offending parties were let off on the editor's disowning all intention to act wrongly, and denying that the subscription list had been got up by himself, or was meant as an imputation on the judge's conduct. Sir Barnes admitted the right of newspapers to "call for subscriptions in a temperate manner," and declared he had only intended to vindicate the proceedings of the High Court. This lame conclusion to a stern beginning raises the question whether Sir Barnes himself always practises what he preaches. Either he was intemperate in his proceedings against the Englishman, or else he has yielded his own judgment to the pressure of that public opinion which the Englishman boasts of having on its own side. We cannot see the grounds of the Chief Justice's distinction between a subscription started by other people and a subscription started by a recognised mouth-piece of public opinion. Sir Barnes however had to save his professional dignity, if he could; while the editor of the Englishman had nothing to lose by an avowal which really takes nothing from his substantial victory over the Court.

MR. TAYLER'S case was different, and all things considered he can hardly complain of very harsh treatment. His friends have paid his fine for him, and his imprisonment was remitted in time to enable him to embark in the very steamer by which he had previously taken his passage home.

AMONG other things to which Lord Mayo has already turned his attention is the mismanagement that prevails on some of the Indian railways. He has through Colonel Strachey just been reading a sharp lecture to the managers of the East Indian Railway, touching the oft-repeated delays at Ghazeeabad, delays which "often cause the detention of mails and passengers at that station for twelve hours." Thrice already since his Lordship arrived at Simlah has he in this way missed the Calcutta mails. He considers it "quite impossible to allow the interests of the public to be disregarded by habitual unpunctuality on the main line of railway leading to the Upper Provinces," and he calls on the Governments of the Punjab and North-West Provinces to see that no time is lost in remedying the evil. Two days after the sending of a telegram to this effect, his Lordship returns to the charge in a public letter to the head of the Railway Department in Bengal. In this letter the Bengal and Punjab Governments are requested to take prompt measures for enforcing all needful reforms in the traffic arrangements of the Delhi and the East Indian Railways. "In behalf of the public" his Excellency in Council would like to see "a more active supervision" exercised over the railway agents in respect of the regular and punctual working of their trains. The Delhi Railway seems to be just as careless as the East Indian about studying the public convenience. If the latter is "habitually unpunctual," the former makes no "proper arrangements" for forwarding the goods brought up to Ghazeeabad. The Viceroy further demands some explanation of the "extraordinary delay" that took place before passengers and goods by the East Indian line were allowed to book through to stations on the Delhi Railway. All this is delightful to read. One good thing at any rate has come of the yearly retreat to Simlah. Sidney Smith's "burnt bishop" has found himself forestalled in India by a tantalised Viceroy, vainly waiting for the mail. What a pity however that the scene of this objurgation could not be laid in England! Oh, for one hour of Lord Mayo here also! Unluckily, Mr. Bright has neither the power, nor even the will to tread in the viceregal footsteps. He cannot be persuaded to use even his limited authority "on behalf of the public" against its tyrants, the railway companies.

REPORTS from Afghanistan and its neighbourhood are encouraging on the whole for Shere Ali. He reached Kabul on the 10th May, and had an interview there with his son, Yakoob Khan, in presence of all the troops. The Ameer of Badakshan is said to be collecting an army of four thousand men, with whom he hopes to subdue Afghan Turkistan without any help from Shere Ali. This news we get by telegraph. The Indian papers report some evident fable about Azim Khan's arrival at Gooryan with forty thousand Persian troops, on his way to Herat. After his retirement to Meshed, as announced by telegram more than a week ago, we may tell the other story to the Marines. Now that Ishak Khan is a captive in the hands of the loyal Meer of Shairabad, little seems left for Shere Ali to do in the way of putting down open rebellion. At Herat however there may still be work cut out for him, if it be true that some of the Herat Sirdars are in league against him with Shanawaz Khan, who is said to be countenanced by the Persian Court. But even this story may be no more true than that of the Russian advance on Kokand, which has just been formally contradicted in a Russian telegram from St. Petersburg. "No warlike preparations are being made in the Russian possessions of Central Asia," if the telegram speak true.

THE Bheels in the neighbourhood of Baroda seem to be causing some disturbance, of what nature we cannot yet say. But the Bombay papers declare that a native regiment has been ordered out along the line of the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway with a view to keep the lawless population in check. There is something wrong, we think, in our present way of dealing with these Bheels whom Outram found so manageable.

MR. MOROBA CANNABA, a judge of the Bombay Small Cause Court, whose "fantastic tricks" in court have lately brought him into something like contempt, has cut one more caper in the shape of an advertisement for a Hindu widow as his wife. Some of the answers evoked by his appeal will be found elsewhere, and very amusing they are, especially that of a widow who wants Mr. Cannoba to ensure her a third husband in the event of his own death.

THERE seems to be a fear that three out of the four native candidates successful at the last examination for the Indian Civil Service may yet be thrown out after all on account of their age. One of them indeed, Mr. Thakoor, has already been rejected on that score, but the question of a native's age is often so hard to settle that he may yet be reinstated on further inquiry. The fate of the other two has not yet been decided, to the best of our belief. It will be a sad misfortune if all three should be found disqualified, on account of a rule which admits of no exceptions.

WE are glad to see that something is already being done in this country towards the defence of our Indian harbours. Two ironclad turretships, mounting four large guns each, the Cerberus and the Maydala, are now being got ready for the work of guarding the port and city of Bombay. One of them is on the point of being taken round from the Tyne to Chatham to receive the finishing touches that will fit her for almost immediate service in the East. The other is still on the stocks, but will soon be following her sister on the same errand.

THE Indian papers seem to accept the rejection by the India-office of Sir J. Lawrence's scheme for buying off unemployed field officers as a death-blow to the hopes of all concerned. We should like to be able to assure them of their mistake. But beyond a vague hope that the Secretary of State may yet be induced to reconsider his opinions on this matter, we have no grounds for supposing that anything will be done to revive the drooping spirits of the disappointed. If the India-office has made up its mind to dismiss the subject, dismissed it will be, until something may happen to convince it of the necessity of facing at once a difficulty which must be dealt with sooner or later. Meanwhile, we observe in the Madras Times a very tolerable attempt to make the best of a misfortune which cannot be helped. If the India-office declines to pay the whole cost of a retiring scheme for Indian officers, will it, asks in effect that journal, be kind enough to share the cost with the Indian services? The old regimental bonus system having been knocked on the head by the transfer of India to the Crown, senior officers can no longer be bought out as of yore, unless the old system be restored in a new shape. Suppose, suggests the Times, that every officer in the Madras Staff Corps were to contribute at the rate of 2½ per cent. monthly on his bare pay, and to the lakh of rupees thus procurable the Government were to add a lakh and a half from its own treasury, ten bonuses of £2,500 each might yearly be divided among ten officers willing to retire on their pensions. Here at any rate is the rough draft of a scheme which the Home Government might well countenance, if its officers agreed to help in starting it, without seeming to stultify its late decisions or involving India in much additional expense. The whole cost to the Indian Government of fifty such bonuses in all for the three Presidencies would not be more than £75,000 a-year, and by-and-by, if need were, the yearly number of bonuses might be reduced as soon as the present excess of unemployed officers had been worked off.

AN "Ex-High Court Judge" has been urging in the columns of the Pall Mall Gazette the need of a reform in the language of the law-courts in the North-Western Provinces. For the last forty years Urdu has replaced Persian as the law language in that part of India. The change from a foreign to a comparatively homebred tongue ought however to have been accompanied by a change from the Persian character to the Nagari, which represents the Hindi or native element in the Urdu. Owing to the retention of the Persian character, with which few Hindoos are acquainted, the Urdu itself has come in the law-courts to be so overloaded with Persian and Arabic phrases, that "the mass of the people are totally ignorant of the language in which documents are written and their depositions are recorded," while the Mohammedans fill "nearly three-fourths of the offices assigned to natives." The natural remedy would be "to cause the character used in the courts to be that known to and used by the mass of the people—the national Nagari." The Hindoos would thus be freed from the thralldom of the legal practitioners and start fair in the race for official preferment. Urdu written in Nagari would gradually be purged of its foreign elements and become "a true exponent of the mixed language of Upper India," a result which would tend to our advantage by separating the Hindoos more widely from the Mohammedans. To our thinking a gain of this sort has also its drawbacks; but on the main question there can be no reasonable doubt. The mass of the people in the North-West being Hindoos, the Nagari character ought certainly to displace the Persian, unless we were to make English the State language for all India. Bengal and Orissa have for some time past enjoyed the full use of their own language, and there can be no good reason why the same boon should not be conceded to the North-West Provinces.

CHILD MURDER IN THE NORTH-WEST.

AFTER all our efforts to put down infanticide in India, it is rather startling to find how rankly it flourishes in a district which has been more than sixty years under British rule. The evil, which has been well nigh extinguished in most parts of the North-West and the Punjab, seems to be as rampant as ever in the Bustee district between Bengal and Oude. But for the information gathered by Mr. Hobart, a North-West civilian, who would have believed that in Bustee the houses are paved with skulls and the tanks choked with bones of female infants, murdered to save their parents the expense of marriage portions?

In Bustee, as in other parts of Upper India, it is the Rajpoot tribes among whom this unnatural practice prevails. Too proud to marry their daughters into low-caste families, and too poor to supply them with the dowers demanded by old custom, very many of these Bustee Rajpoots prefer to kill them in their infancy. In 85 Rajpoot villages visited by Mr. Hobart he found a proportion of 86 boys to only 14 girls—a fact which speaks for itself. In a number of other villages the proportion was 79 to 21, exactly the same as Mr. Moore had reported it twelve years before. In twenty-two villages he found only 12 girls to every 88 boys. Among the Chowans the average was 77 to 23. Another tribe, the Hanras, had had no marriage among them for the last ten years. An old man of eighty had never heard of a marriage in Oodeypore from his boyhood upwards. In eight of the Goutum villages not a girl was to be found, nor had one been married in fifteen of them for more than ten years. The proportion of low-caste boys to girls in these same villages was 58 to 42, a disparity of sexes rather greater than that in other places, though small enough to point the contrast with the case of Rajpoot dwellers in the same villages. Every one, of course, when put to the question, denied the dark impeachment, but many of the villagers had “heard” that the Soorajbansies of such a village “kill their girls.” These Soorajbansies, who are Rajpoots of very high caste, seem to be the chief offenders.

It is the wedding expenses that do all the mischief. Heavy dowers being the fashion, one might almost say the religion, of these Rajpoots, and death being deemed preferable to loss of caste, child-murder on a large scale becomes an institution, and the men buy low-castes wives for themselves from Bengal. One or two Rajahs have lately given some of their relatives in marriage without accepting a dower for them. But more is needed than a few good examples. It is to be hoped that Mr. Hobart's report will stir up the Government to take prompt measures for dealing with the Bustee Rajpoots as successfully as it has already dealt with those of the Punjab.

UNEMPLOYED FIELD OFFICERS.

ON looking through the correspondence recently published with regard to the Indian Government's retirement-scheme for Field Officers in the Staff Corps and the local service, we cannot help feeling that the entire rejection of it by the Home Authorities savours rather of undue haste to shirk a disagreeable question, than of statesmanlike dealing with undeniable facts. It seems clear for instance that India is just now over-burdened with old officers for whom no proper employment can be found. Colonel Norman estimates the total needed for both services under present conditions at 2,940, including officers on leave. But as the actual number in the army list amounts to 3,359, it follows that there is “an excess of 419 over the number actually wanted.” And this large surplus contains “a very undue proportion of old officers,” for whom, after all deductions on account of unfitness or other causes, no fitting employment can be found. The difficulty of finding employment for the existing number was increased by the Order of 1866, which “added 286 field officers to the Indian army at once,” thus raising the total of Indian field officers to 1,199, or 209 in excess of actual requirements, “besides ensuring a constant further increase to the higher ranks for a long time to come.”

In other high quarters the same tune is sung with slight variations. Sir W. Mansfield himself complains of the undue proportion of field-officers now in the Indian army. Sir R. Temple draws a gloomy contrast between the outlay on 4,500 officers before 1857, and the larger outlay on 3,360 officers in the present year. He also foresees a net increase of more than thirty lakhs by the year 1880 on the present cost of the three Indian staff corps, and suggests modes of checking the continued plethora of field-officers in terms that betray his hopelessness of otherwise reducing the yearly increasing drain on the finances. In spite of his contentment with the present rates of pension, which Colonel Norman proposes to increase, Sir W. Mansfield strongly urges the need of eliminating some 150 or 200 field-officers by the bribe of a bonus of £1,000 besides their pensions, while he would follow up the concession by enforcing the retirement on pension, or the placing on British pay, of all officers who shall be three years unemployed in India. Colonel Broome's views on this question are not less decisive as to the excess of unemployed and unemployable officers, whatever exceptions may fairly be taken to his calculations concerning the future. As Controller-general of Indian military expenditure, that officer may at least be supposed to have a pretty wide acquaintance both with the military and the financial aspects of his theme. The counter-estimates of General Hannington may possibly be founded on more trustworthy data, and some indeed of Colonel Broome's own colleagues seemed to have opened incredulous eyes over the picture he has drawn in figures of the host of field officers who will be draining the Indian exchequer in 1880. But the picture may be none the less truthful for being so darkly shaded. Colonel Broome can hardly have forgotten to allow for casualties between 1880 and 1892, when he had made large allowance for them in the twelve years preceding. Be that as it may however, Sir John Lawrence and the whole of his Council were agreed in lamenting the pressure of an acknowledged evil in the shape of a surfeit of field officers, and all alike signed their names to a despatch embodying a well-considered scheme for its removal. Whether the number of field officers in 1880 ought to fall some way short of the 1,700 predicted by Colonel Broome, and even if the 982 staff corps officers drawing colonel's allowance in 1892 could be reduced to six or seven hundred, or even fewer, there still remains confessed the fact, that the Indian services are just now greatly over-officered in the upper ranks, and that this is an evil which ought in some way or another to be diminished before it reaches an intolerable head. Sir John

Lawrence and his colleagues "feel bound to record" their opinion "that some remedial measures are indispensably necessary," both to meet the growing excess of field officers, and "generally to counteract the permanent tendency to an undue proportion of the higher grades, and to an extravagant number of recipients of the colonel's allowance." They "strongly advocate" Colonel Norman's scheme for lessening by three years the time of service for a lieutenant-colonel's pension, and for raising a colonel's pension to £500 a-year after thirty years' service. And they defend the proposal to compel the retirement of officers who may be five years unemployed, by referring to the well-known fact that "there are a number of field officers of no use to Government"—hard bargains, in short—"doing merely nominal duty, and waiting for the colonel's allowance, of whom some are not desirous of more active employment, and others not qualified for it."

In the face of facts thus unanimously attested, and of all the evidence that reaches us from India, we are disposed to fear that the India Office has jumped somewhat hastily to the resolution of letting things alone. It may be true that the evils in question will be partially abated by the working of the new furlough rules, by the suspension of existing rules that bar the admission of otherwise qualified officers into the Staff Corps, and by a resolute weeding out of officers demonstrably unfit for active service. The absence of a fair analogy between the Staff Corps and a British regiment may also be admitted to some extent, as a reason for employing officers of different nominal grades on duties of the same class. But after all done in this way, we question whether the surplus of field officers will have been materially reduced, and it is asking too much of men who have grown grey in the service, that they should stoop to discharge the duties of mere beginners. Is it or is it not true that many old officers whose rank and service would entitle them to command a regiment or a wing of one, have now no choice between doing mere subaltern's duty and doing nothing at all? Rank and seniority must count for something even in a department where the former chiefly indicates the increase of pay due after so many years of service; and the Staff Corps has its military as well as its civil side. It is impossible to employ more than a fraction of the old officers in the higher ranks of the native army; and what are you to do with the remainder, if the bulk of them are more or less unfit for civil duties? You cannot fairly abolish them for their want of versatility in the teeth of a Parliamentary guarantee. Let them be content to do subaltern's work? Very likely, but work done under compulsion is almost sure to be done grudgingly; and that is not what we want in India. The prevalent spirit of discontent would be embittered tenfold, and its evil effects would show themselves in a hundred ways, to the serious injury of the whole service.

It is hardly to the purpose to say in effect, with the Duke of Argyll, that one concession leads to another, that Sir C. Wood's despatch of 1861 was meant to bar the discussion of all further claims, and that any fresh concession to the local services would cause fresh discontent among the general service officers. The Indian services are going through a process of transformation which may last for few or many years, according as the Government wills it. Exceptional remedies are demanded for an exceptional state of things; so that anything conceded now would form no precedent for the future of a remodelled service. General service officers have grievances of their own to which we have more than once drawn attention; but even if they were to grumble at any new step taken in the public interests, that is no reason for deferring these interests to the possible outcry of one small class. It is admitted, too, that many officers who would else have retired, are holding on for the chance of better terms. Exactly so; and the upper ranks of the services are getting more and more clogged, while younger candidates are prevented from coming in. Would it not be wisest to grant the better terms at once, to the extent so urgently proposed by the Indian Government, which ought in this matter to be the best judge of its own interests, financial and political? There is really no ground for the fear expressed by the Home Authorities, that the bulk of those who would accept the proffered bonus would consist not of unemployed officers, but of more efficient men whose services could ill be spared. A few of these latter might possibly be tempted to forego the prospects of higher pay and further distinction for the doubtful advantages of a quiet life at home. But it is contrary to all experience that the number of these should be great, compared with that of those who would exchange a life of idleness in a climate where idleness is fatal, for the privilege of anticipating their retirement by a few years. It would be easy for the Indian Government to limit the offer of a bonus, in the first place at any rate, to the unemployed; and if some of these were slow to accept it, a little of the pressure explained in Sir John Lawrence's despatch would leave them very small inducement to wait for yet better terms. Will not the India-office reconsider its late verdict on the scheme submitted from Calcutta?

INDIAN STAFF CORPS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—As one of those who originally joined the Staff Corps, I should like to know why the removing of Staff Corps lieutenant-colonels from the general list of lieutenant-colonels is still kept up. At the time when nearly the whole of the Indian army was admitted to the Staff Corps, under Lord Cranborne's despatch, this practice might with advantage have been discontinued without injustice to anybody had it been notified when the despatch above-mentioned was published. The Government of India made a request to this effect to the Home Government, but they most unaccountably refused. The consequence is that we have instances of "local officers" running through the list of majors, and becoming lieutenant-colonels in little more than six months, and the sad spectacle to some Staff Corps majors of seeing that they too might have been lieutenant-colonels had they remained in the Local Service.

Truly those officers who joined the Staff Corps in 1861 on the understanding, "that all officers now holding, or who immediately before the commencement of their present unexpired furlough may have held such appointments, shall be eligible to enter such Staff Corps" (vide Royal Warrant of 1851), have seen a few changes, some of which I will enumerate:—

1st. Brevet rank given to Local officers to prevent their being superseded by the officers of the Staff Corps.

2nd. Local officers admitted to Staff employ equally with Staff Corps officers.

3rd. Staff Corps lieutenant-colonels removed from the general list of lieutenant-colonels.

4th. All Indian officers allowed to enter the Staff Corps under the despatch of 1866.

5th. All officers who entered the Service prior to 1858 to be employed on the staff whether passed or not (vide Duke of Argyll's despatch).

Truly, poor deluded mortals like myself, who entered the Staff Corps in 1861, under the impression that it was the only way to hold a staff appointment, have found themselves cruelly deceived.

It seems to me only fair that officers who joined the Staff Corps within six months of its formation should be allowed to revert to the Local Service, if they wish to do so, all army legislation since 1861 having been decidedly in favour of the "Locals."—Yours truly,
VICTIM.

COMPENSATION FOR REGIMENTAL BONUS— A GOOD SUGGESTION.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—The Secretary of State for India has lately had to consider a scheme proposed by the Indian Government for purchasing out the surplus field officers of the Indian army, which on the score of its costliness has not been sanctioned. The question of regimental bonus so summarily extinguished by the amalgamation, without the slightest compensation being given to sufferers, is now about to be reagitated in Parliament; would it not be a good plan, and to the mutual advantage of both parties, if the Government, in the spirit of conciliation and justice, now agreed to revive (for a time) the regimental purchase system, offering to all officers (including those retired) a sum equal to what each would have received from his Regimental Fund? For instance, the sum usually allotted to a substantive major in a Native Infantry regiment was £3,000; would it not be politic to offer say that sum to any officer who would retire within a given time, and thus not only relieve the Indian finances, but also do away with all further agitation of a real and standing grievance? The advantage that such a scheme would offer to Government is apparent; all officers of twenty-six and thirty years' service are now either lieutenant-colonels or colonels in the Staff Corps, drawing a salary of above £1,000 a-year; but many of these same officers are merely captains in their respective cadres, and if Government would only hold out to them the sums they would have received (in accordance with their present cadre standing) from their purchase funds, in addition to their comparatively small pensions (£300 to £400 a-year) to which they are entitled, many of them would no doubt be happy to leave the service, rather than continue a life of useless inactivity and remain a burden to the State.—Yours, &c.,

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—I fully indorse the letter of Mr. John Davenport, which appeared in your Mail of the 26th inst., and in reply to your very pertinent rider as to "who are to be the examiners?" I have the satisfaction of informing you that there will be no dearth of them, as there are at present residing in this metropolis several learned Orientalists, some, indeed, being of noble birth, all of whom have distinguished themselves in the various kinds of Eastern lore, and have acquired thereby a proud pre-eminence in the republic of letters. The award of examiners such as these, free as it necessarily will be from even the mere suspicion of partiality, cannot fail to command respect, even from the rejected themselves; and it is therefore to be hoped that some from among these literary celebrities may be induced to give the public the benefit of their valuable services.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

AN OLD READER AT THE EAST INDIA LIBRARY.

OUR AFGHAN POLICY.

The Times of India thinks our Afghan policy is in fact so exceedingly simple that men cannot understand its simplicity, and seek for recondite motives and double dealing where all is above board and straightforward. But we cannot feel surprise at observing this tone in Russia, when we look at the inferences which have been drawn from the Umballa meeting by our own writers. The "Io triumphes" of the Friend of India and the Saturday Review, the sneering cry of the former "So much for masterly inactivity, slain by its own parent, and buried by his successor," and the cool assumptions of the latter, that what is merely a resumption of our old terms of friendship with Dost Mahomed in the person of his son and successor, is the beginning of a radical change in our Central Asian policy, are enough to mislead those who do not know how little such periodicals express public opinion, or are aware of the real determination both of the Home and Indian Governments in this matter. The fact is that the presence of the Russians on the Oxus, which at present is little more than a figure of speech, forms but a small part of the consideration which induces us to strengthen the hands of Shere Ali. The sooner English writers get the idea of our making a move to counterpoise the effect of the Russian advance out of their heads, the better will it be both for their own happiness and the maintenance of pleasant relations with that power. As for the Russian organs, let them consider this little fact that, whatever we do in Afghanistan short of the conquest of the country or the formation of an offensive alliance with the Ameer can be no concern of theirs. Russia has no business in the country, and, except on the supposition that it entertains designs against Afghan independence, can have no interest in preventing our cultivating the friendship of its ruler. Our interchange of courtesies at Umballa therefore, though they assumed a somewhat substantial form on our part, cannot be justly said to wound Russian susceptibilities or indeed to concern her in any way. The real character of our present rule is too well known to allow of any one supposing for a moment that our actions are indicative of a desire to acquire territory beyond our own borders, neither can they be understood as an imputation on the honour of Russia. We by no means assume her covetousness, or desire to debar her from a contemplated aggression, for the simple reason that our statesmen do not credit her with the design which some few writers among us impute to her; and she may rest assured that Lord Mayo said nothing to his guest which she could construe as a menace, or an insult on her blameless motives. That the Government desire the neutralisation of Afghanistan we will not deny, but the desire is in no way increased by the recent progress of events. It has always been a maxim of our State policy any time these last sixty years; and if Russia had gone off at a tangent eastward, instead of advancing to Tashkend, it still would have been strictly in accordance with all our previous action that we should have proffered our friendship to the prince who has proved his right, in a thoroughly practical manner, to the throne of Cabul, and strengthened his hands for the preservation of the peace of his kingdom. We have done it at this particular moment, not because a few thousand Russians are holding certain precarious positions by tact rather than by force, somewhere in the neighbourhood of Bokhara, but because our recognition of the Ameer at this particular moment happens to be possible.

A LOCAL ARMY FOR INDIA.

The Times of India would place the military service of India upon a footing similar to that which obtains in the Imperial service, but so modified as to suit the peculiar exigencies of this country, and entirely independent of the latter as a source from which to obtain cadets. We have already more than once protested against the principle and practice of getting our recruits from line regiments. The British Army was never intended to be a school for Indian officers, and it can never supply our demand. At the present moment the number of those who secede from British regiments is comparatively small, and the worst of it is that, if there were a rush of subalterns to the extent that we require, the service which they abandoned would suffer. We hold that the local service of India is a career suitable only to men who enter it free from all those associations which fasten about a linesman, who are trained from the beginning to its peculiarities, and have not to unlearn as well as learn. We maintain also that our local service ought to have a source of its own for the supply of cadets, which shall never fail, as the existing one would in the event of a war, and which shall bring it into direct communication with the youth of England. Has it never struck our authorities what a roundabout process the present system of recruiting the Staff Corps necessitates? Before a young man can enter the local service he must pay for a commission in a line regiment in India. He must learn his duties with European troops, and very possibly imbibe a dislike to serve with sepoys. On being appointed to the Staff Corps, he receives back the value of his commission. This appears to us to be a needlessly troublesome business, and combined with other defects and drawbacks, quite enough to condemn the system. But, be it good or bad in theory, it is tolerably certain that it can never give us officers in the numbers we require. We have only to glance at the Army List to see that the rate at which subalterns are promoted is far more rapid than the rate at which they are supplied, and we come, therefore to this conclusion that, if the local service is to be remodelled, and subalterns appointed to regiments in adequate numbers, we must look to some fruitful and constant source of supply, totally distinct from the present uncertain market. By introducing a system of open admissions, and allowing any young man who could pass a proper test examination, and produce the usual certificates, to enter the service, we are confident that we should get as many subalterns as we could accommodate. The mere fact of offering Indian commissions to the nation, would bring hosts of young men to the examiners, only too glad to avail themselves of the opportunity of embracing a respectable career. There are hundreds of young fellows in England, of gentle birth and tolerable education, who would jump at the chance of obtaining a commission in the Indian service, particularly if it were reorganised, and if it held out to men of ability and ambition a prospect of distinguishing themselves professionally. Such a prospect, we believe, it would hold out, were our programme to be adopted, and our notions of a staff corps to be assented to. But the prizes would not be for every one, and the question is whether the nature of the local service would, under our system, be such as to recommend it to young men of ordinary calibre, who would be content to plod at regimental duties. We have no hesitation whatever in asserting our belief that, with a slightly increased scale of pay for the junior ranks, and with the certainty of a pension, and a liberal furlough code, a career as an Indian officer would be acceptable to vast numbers of young men of England. Far too many of them are a burden and anxiety to themselves and all connected with them, in consequence of the difficulty, almost amounting to an impossibility, of making a fair start in life, without either interest or money to give them a footing, and back them up.

WHAT IS A CONTEMPT OF COURT?

The Pioneer gathers from a comparison of the various rulings quoted by the Chief Justice (Sir B. Peacock), that a contempt of Court is not only any publication which tends to divert the course of justice, or paralyse the proceedings of the Court regarding matters still in some degree pending, but also any publication which, by its criticism of a judgment even in proceedings long past and done with, has a tendency to bring the Court in which those proceedings took place into contempt. It appears also that the Court which considers itself contemned has the power to commit for contempt, or to indict, at option. If this be the law, a judge can hardly be blamed for administering it; but we are profoundly convinced that it is an odious and immoral law. We suspect that it is falling somewhat into desuetude. Certainly not a month passes in which in London the papers do not severely criticise the decision of some judge or other, and we seldom, almost never, hear of the Judge impugned attempting to use his power of punishing for contempt. But this partial desuetude is not a sufficient satisfaction to morality. The law should be expressly harmonised with equity and common sense. It is repugnant to our instinctive feeling of justice that any man should be judge in his own case, permitted to appraise his own wrong, and award his own vengeance, if not damages. The case of riot or disturbance in actual Court is quite another matter. There it is not merely a judge who is offended, but justice which is hindered. Nor does the fact that judges are generally men who, by their ability, learning, and conscientiousness, exhibited during a long career before jealous competitors, have abundantly justified their elevation to the bench, make them at all safe exceptions to the general rule. Rather the contrary. The very universality of the deference they have long met with tends to make them lose all patience and self-command in the rare occasions when they think themselves insulted. A judge accustomed for years to homage is probably more unfit than most men to weigh disrespect against himself coolly and equitably. The remedy for this grave defect in the law would seem to be that committal for contempt of Court should always be awarded by some other Court than that offended—indeed, by one quite independent. The other cardinal sin in this state of the law is that if it were acted on it would really tend to corrupt the course of justice, and make it degenerate by clogging fair criticism, which alone keeps the administration of justice spotless and respected. Macaulay has pointed out that if English judges no longer take bribes, and are, for their learning, integrity, and independence, on the whole a glory to their country—it is purely because English society expects and chooses its judges to be incorrupt and independent, and announces its pleasure in society and by the Press. It is not that English lawyers have improved the English nation, but that the English nation has improved its lawyers. As the educated part of the nation is, so the press is; as the press is, so the Bench is. The three powers re-act on each other, and are and should be under some reciprocal control; but there should be no domination. Each should have its remedy against offence, but none should be both immediate and final judge in its own cause.

The Bombay Gazette holds that the spectacle presented to the world by the Calcutta High Court is not likely to maintain its dignity either in the eyes of Europeans or natives. The only conclusion to which we can come is that Sir Barnes Peacock possesses, and is resolved to prove as emphatically as possible that he possesses, certain powers over the pockets, persons, and liberties of others. In the Tayler case the offender, worsted in a civil action, and branded with the stamp of fraud, wrote and published letters marked by virulent abuse of Mr. Justice Mitter. Conscious of his own rectitude, and relying upon his proved character, the native judge had the manliness and good sense to disregard the abuse, and to let it pass by him as idle wind. Mr. Justice Mitter behaved with dignity and good sense. The explanation offered by Sir Barnes Peacock places the conduct of his junior in a really noble light. Unhappily the Chief Justice himself was not in this matter up to the level of his colleague. Instead of allowing the ravings of Mr. Tayler to pass unheeded, no sooner had he read them than he gave way to what with great regret we must characterise as an ebullition of temper. He summoned the injured Justice to his side, and told him he must take measures of reprisal against Mr. Tayler. Hence all this fussy drama. The letters would have been a nine days' wonder, and would then have been forgotten, had Sir Barnes not instigated the native judge to summon his assailant. We can only find a parallel in the old annals of duelling, where a peppery colonel makes one of his subalterns demand satisfaction. "By Jove, sir, you must call him out." Mr. Tayler has paid his fine and apologised and gone home. Although judicially he has been declared guilty of a fraud he has been styled a "gentleman" by the Chief Justice, who himself, it seems, had come to the conclusion that Mr. Tayler had perpetrated said fraud. And this is considered the proper mode of vindicating the majesty of the law, and the superlative majesty of the Chief Justice! Mr. Tayler, in the estimation of Sir Barnes Peacock, is a fraudulent gentleman, a zoological specimen it was reserved for Sir Barnes to discover. The only man who has been ill-used in the case is the native judge, whose name has been put forward to enable the Chief Justice to fight his own battle and satisfy the cravings of his imperious temper. And if we were to take a merciful view of his conduct and ascribe it to a generous impulse which made him promptly defend his subordinate judge, even then, although we could appreciate the motive, we must regard his action as indiscreet and undignified. The native nobility of Mr. Justice Mitter was shown by confidence in his own integrity, and contempt, if even that, for his assailant.

The Madras Times observes that great powers are necessarily entrusted to Courts of Justice to enable them to preserve their authority and dignity; but it was certainly never intended that those powers should be used to protect the Courts against public criticism. The right of free criticism through the press is more necessary in this country than in any other. It is the only protection the public have against oppression by Courts or Governments. We have no Parliament here in which questions can be asked and votes of censure passed, and if the right of free criticism be taken away the country will be absolutely at the mercy of a knot of officials. The right of free criticism has for many years been allowed, and however much individuals may fret under the restraint, it is universally admitted to be a good thing that public opinion should temper our despotic system of government. Governors and Viceroys submit to this restraint. The policy, the conduct, and even the motives of our rulers are discussed with a freedom that sometimes borders on license; but it would appear that the Judges of the High Court of Calcutta alone claim to be exempt from this check. As they are independent of the Local and Supreme Governments, so they appear to assert their right to be free from public comment. Governors and Viceroys may be criticised and maligned with impunity, but a criticism on a judgment of the High Court is a crime not to be forgiven. To construe the opening of a subscription to pay a fine inflicted by the High Court into a contempt of that Court's authority seems to be a very original proceeding. If the public sympathise with Mr. Tayler are they not to be allowed to show their sympathy with him by subscribing to a fund to pay his fine? We can recall to mind instances of persons being forbidden to do this in Russian Poland, but nowhere else. And if it be lawful for people to subscribe, how can it be unlawful for a newspaper to originate and advocate the subscription? We rather think Sir Barnes Peacock has put his foot in this matter. Contempt of Court is a very elastic phrase, and can be made to include almost anything, but the Judges must remember that absolute as they are in this country there are other interpreters in England. It is assuredly not the intention of the English Government or Parliament to invest the Judges of the Calcutta High Court with the power of suppressing all criticism of their acts, and with a censorship of the press.

THE STUDS.

The Englishman is sorry to hear that at the recent large sale of stud-breds at Meerut, the usual fault of too little bone and muscle was observable amongst the majority of the animals. In size and condition they were excellent, but in the necessary qualities for hard work they were found wanting. Now, these very horses had been, many of them, selected by the officers in charge of the studs as fit for Government work, but were rejected by the Stud Commission, at present sitting under the Presidency of Colonel Troup. This is so far satisfactory as tending to show that the committee is not satisfied with the present result of the breeding at the stud, and we trust soon to know what their recommendations may be for improving the class of stud-breds. For horse breeding, as in most other things, everyone has his own peculiar idea, but the crosses necessary for procuring bone, muscle, and speed, combined with endurance, are too well known in England to render any hesitation necessary as to the course to be adopted, slightly modified to suit the country mares and the climate. In the first place, a better class of sires must be imported; in the next, only selected mares must be bred from for some years, and their places gradually filled by the best fillies from the stock produced. In the meantime horses must be imported—a measure which will prove cheaper in the end than having recourse back to the Arab blood, and waiting till the cross is sufficiently improved to furnish breeding cattle, a system which has lately been much discussed for the improvement of racehorses in England. Lord Mayo himself has had some experience in horse-breeding in Ireland, and no doubt the suggestions of the Stud Committee will be fully scrutinised by him in the light of such experience.

STATE OF THE PUNJAB CROPS.—The need for assistance among the farmers in the Punjab has not yet passed over. "It is difficult, perhaps," says the Indian Public Opinion, "to realise in the midst of fine weather, fair crops, and decreasing prices, that there still exists in the Punjab very severe distress, which the exertions of Government, the gratuitous relief afforded, and the large relief works has much lessened, but which will continue to be grievously felt far into the year. The districts of Kurnal, Hissar, Sirsa, and Rohtuk are those in which the distress is the most intense. In the Kynal tehsel 45,000 cattle are reported to have died during the drought, and with an agricultural population this means inability to irrigate their fields, or to plough the land for a fresh crop. A grant from Government for the purchase of fresh cattle for these unfortunate people would be both generous and wise. They are reduced to the extreme of destitution; and all their savings have been exhausted in keeping body and soul together, while prices have been at famine rates. The subscriptions in the hands of the Central Relief Committee, given for the relief of the starving population, cannot be justly appropriated to a purpose [such as supplying the peasantry with cattle, but the Government might very appropriately assist them."

Bengal.

THE "ENGLISHMAN" IN COURT.

In the Calcutta High Court, on the 28th April, Sir Barnes Peacock and Mr. Justice Macpherson on the bench, the Chief Justice called upon Mr. Belchambers, the Registrar, to read from the Englishman an article of Friday, April 16; the report of the proceedings, April 21; an article of Monday, April 26; a letter of Tuesday, April 27; the notice in the same paper; the letter in the paper of April 28; the notice in the same paper.

The Chief Justice then said:—

"There is a limit beyond which the press is not allowed to go, not in fairly criticising, but in casting imputations and animadversions on the judges, calculated to bring those judges into contempt, with reference to the discharge of their duties in the administration of justice.

"The Court did not think it necessary to take action when it was first assailed. In an article on April 26th is an extract, for which the publisher of the Englishman is responsible, because, by giving it circulation in that paper, he has adopted it. The Chief Justice was charged with presumptuous tyranny. Not only was he thus charged, but he was threatened that if he proceeded too far in carrying out his dictum he would raise a storm not easy to quell. The Chief Justice proceeded in his duty notwithstanding; and in a letter published on April 27th he was charged with having been guilty of a ruse to obtain a public apology for Mr. Justice Mitter."

(His Lordship quoted the letter.)

"A report has been read of the 21st April not as part of the contempt, but as the report of the Englishman itself, as to what took place in regard to that point. Is it supposed that when a gentleman commits contempt of Court that as soon as he offers an apology he is to be exempt altogether from punishment? An apology may mitigate but not excuse the act, and cannot be a ground for exemption altogether from punishment. In the same letter the following passage occurs:—

"Has Sir Barnes Peacock reclined too under the open shade of the Bengal forests? Does he devote himself less to the advocacy of the freedom of his nature than to the assertion of his dignity? In that day, which may not be far distant, when the Chief Justice shall make his last summing up, will he be able to satisfy himself that the heavy blow thus dealt directly at Mr. Tayler, and indirectly at public opinion, and the liberty of the Press, has been struck solely in the interests of justice? At the time when this letter was published the Chief Justice had delivered the judgment of the Court, showing that Mr. Tayler's statements were not fair criticisms. And then, without publishing that, the Englishman charges the Chief Justice with dealing a heavy blow at the liberty of the Press. Is it the liberty of the Press to make false charges on false acts, for that is what Mr. Tayler was charged with? Again, to show the animus, I will refer to the letter of the same date."

(His Lordship read the passage referring to the delay in noticing the contempt.)

"Would any one believe that in the report of the same Englishman the Chief Justice said:—'I now propose to read, not as part of the contempt, the letter of February 12?'

"These letters were written after the Chief Justice had called public attention to the law, as it stood, against printers and publishers. (The Chief Justice read that portion of his judgment to which he referred.)

"In the article of April 26 it is said:—'We think the Chief Justice did wisely in not attaching our printer,' &c. I admit that the Judges are subject to fair criticism, but not to criticism on false facts. With their eyes open, then, and having the matter explained, they proceed to defy the Court. In the paper of this morning there is a charge which is not correct. The case there mentioned was not the case which Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter tried. This case had nothing to do with the case in which Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter pronounced sentence. But to show how inaccurately and carelessly those charges are made, I will read this letter. (His Lordship read the letter of April 28.)

"Now I come to what appears to me to be a most gross contempt of a Court of Justice.

"Now, after that threat as to raising a storm which the Chief Justice could not put down, can any one doubt whether these were intended as fair criticisms of his conduct? But I have not yet dealt with the heaviest part of this contempt. Yesterday there was an article—I don't know whether to call it an article or an advertisement. (The Chief Justice read the notice respecting the subscription for Mr. Tayler.) There was an appeal to the public in the form of an advertisement to come forward with a rupee subscription. (His Lordship read the latter part of the advertisement.) Is that fair criticism? Has the editor of a newspaper a right to appeal for a rupee subscription in support of his criticism? If these things are allowed to go on the Courts of Justice may as well be shut. For much less cause the Court granted a criminal information.

(His Lordship here cited a case of contempt against the Corporation of Yarmouth.)

"Now, let us see what was done in a case similar to this, but not going so far as this, not advertising for subscriptions. (The Chief Justice read the report of the vote by the Corporation of Yarmouth to one Watson, in recompense of his loss, by a fine by a jury; also the judgments of Mr. Justice Ashurst and Mr. Justice Buller.)

"Now, no one reading that could have any doubt upon his mind that it was not intended as a fair criticism, because no reasons are given, but it is calling upon the public to come forward with rupee subscriptions which are to amount to a universal shout of indignation. (The Chief Justice read Mr. Justice Grose's judgment in the case mentioned.)

"These are advertisements calling upon people to denounce the Chief Justice without explaining what they were called upon to denounce (the Chief Justice read to-day's notice), and this after the judgment I pronounced, showing that Mr. Tayler's was not fair criticism, but that it was based upon false statements of facts.

"It appears to me, as I said before, that if these kind of things are to be carried on, the Court had better be closed. Though I am told it would be better not to attach the printer, I do not think it necessary to regard that advice. It appears to me a rule nisi should be issued to show cause why the publisher and printer should not be committed, or otherwise dealt with according to law, for the various contempts in publishing the letters and advertisements to which I have referred; and that a subpoena be served upon Mr. J. Northam and Captain Fenwick; and that in the subpoenas there should be inserted a clause commanding them to produce any list or lists of accounts or any books relating to the subscriptions towards the fine imposed on Mr. Tayler, and also any letter or letters from any merchants of Calcutta or other gentlemen who have offered subscriptions of 100 rupees or any other subscriptions towards that fund—to be returnable on Monday next."

Mr. Justice Macpherson concurred.

STATION TALK.

MUSSOORIE, April 29.—The weather continues remarkably temperate for the date, though the sun has great power in the mornings up to noon. It were a waste of time to dwell upon the marvellous difference between the heat of the plains and the coolness of the regions within two or three hours' ride; but it may interest people to hear something of the progress of measures to render Mussoorie more accessible to the public below. I do not vouch for the absolute accuracy of what I shall state, but I make bold to say that I shall not deviate far from fact. Lord Mayo came up to the place in official charge, and of course he heard only the same sort of sentiments that he might more comfortably have learned at home. He expressed himself astonished at the abandonment of Landour, and bluntly said he did not know what reasons had led to the measure. There were those within earshot who could have enlightened his Lordship, but they durst not speak, and others kept their own counsel! When the reality of Chukrata comes to be felt, Lord Mayo can revive the question of forsaking the finest sanitarium in the world. At Roorkee, I hear, his Lordship had speech of the working men there. Angus Campbell's sensible practical scheme for a branch railway from Deobund, by Roorkee and Hurdwar to Dehra, was a topic, of course. Lord Mayo said he should like indeed to see a railway made in India for £2,000 a-mile; to which observation the prompt reply was given, "Your Lordship has only to give the orders and the money, and the line shall be made." My lord then inquired where the papers on the project were, and was answered by his secretary that they had reached his office, and would be submitted as soon as his lordship got to Simla. The decision has a bearing far extended beyond the petty sphere of the Dehra Doon Valley and the hills above it. If Lord Mayo will sanction the work, and success should follow the undertaking, as all practical men unfalteringly believe, then the very greatest stride yet made in Indian railway enterprise is taken. The most remote places may be connected thereafter, at an insignificant cost, with the trunk railways; and all peoples and their products—cotton, silk, indigo, china grass, tea, things for which England is hungering and famishing, may all unite in the common channel of transit to the seaboard, quickly, cheaply, and safely. Dalhousie was our Romulus in railways, Mayo would then be our second Romulus. It is startling to be told that this line of railway would cost only double the sum insanely wasted on the greatest of exposed follies, namely, the Mohun Pass road. People were obstinately determined to come through the pass in wheeled carriages, the other day, I am told, and they got through by pushing, pulling, twisting, and wriggling, in six or seven hours!!! In fact, the old antediluvian doolie is now resuscitated for travelling through the Pass (in two or three hours). Was ever such an affront put upon a department before? It must never be forgotten that executives sinned in the full light of knowledge. Thomason had, after consideration, utterly condemned the Mohun Pass, and had, moreover, by an almost divine intuition, indicated the true course along the line of the zigzag ridge of watershed from the Doon to the plains, to the boundless admiration of Colonel Baird Smith, and of others, scientific and practical, that examined the design. But the cry raised for the Thomason line, and against the red tape folly in Mohun, was met by falsehoods, insults, and unblushing assurance, which gained their end—the greatest of collapses ever seen. Is it too much to hope Sir W. Muir will take up the Thomason line, and consent to have it executed? The people of Mussoorie remain confident that this line could be made for a cost under a lakh, and they have had experience enough in road-making to warrant their estimating correctly. We want Sir W. Muir to do something—to leave his mark on us somewhere. One-fourth of his reign has gone, and left no more trace than the keel on the wave. The lower road is to be revived, I hear, but enough of these subjects for one spell.

LUCKNOW, April 29.—Our chaplain, the Rev. F. Ellis, has been posted to Chinsurah. He preached his farewell sermon last Sunday.

April 30.—I forgot to mention yesterday that it is reported Mr. Davies goes on three months' leave. Sir George Couper officiates as Chief Commissioner, Mr. C. Currie as Judicial Commissioner, Mr. Quinton as Commissioner, and Captain Newberry as Deputy Commissioner of Lucknow. I have just heard that cholera has broken out so virulently at Seetapore as to necessitate the despatch of native doctors from here for the relief of the sufferers in that district.

JUBBULPORE, April 28.—It was my intention to have written to you some days ago, but there is not much to be said about this place, and there is little local news to be gleaned after all that appears in the local paper. Jubbulpore is certainly making some strides, I shall not say gigantic, towards becoming a large and important station eventually. Not only from its geographical and central position is it likely to be so, but the new fact of its forming the junction between the E.I. Railway on one side and the G.I.P. Railway on the other will render it not only the nucleus of the up and down trade, but the "through-route" for passengers between Bombay and Calcutta proceeding on business, or other travellers seeking a change, or making a tour through these provinces in search of the picturesque. It is but a few years ago, perhaps four or five, since I was here last. It was then a quiet, dull place; nor is it far removed even from that now, notwithstanding that the puffing and snorting of the iron horse go to impart some degree of animation to the locality and bring in its train many visitors. The E.I. Railway runs of course, as all know, right into the station, and is in complete working order, but the G.I.P.R. line to Bombay is behind-hand, and not likely to be ready for perhaps another two years, more or less. To be sure the contractor's engine may be seen occasionally plying up and down the Nursingpore section, which is an indication that this portion at least is likely to come into operation earlier than the rest, but it is a matter of some fifty-six miles, which will go but a short way towards the intervening distance. Moreover, the railway station of even the East India line has yet to be built here. Meanwhile the coal-shed, a rather large and commodious building, is used for the purpose; and it does very well for the present, though in the absence of a proper "waiting-room" travellers are apt to be put to inconvenience, particularly ladies, if they anticipate even such little comforts as they realise in such rooms in other parts of India travelling by railway lines. In to-day's Jubbulpore Chronicle I see that the editor draws the attention of the Viceroy to the Kangra Valley, and recommends a flying visit at least on the part of his lordship to that locality. From a season's stay there I can well endorse his views. It is a spot which, if properly attended to and improved by additional houses being erected for the accommodation of the Governor-General's numerous retinue, would be found far superior to Simla in many respects. It is much healthier, and the water supply much more plentiful. It is more open, and commands a wider view of the country around, whereas at Simla the view is greatly shut out and confined. It is without question the prettiest and most picturesque locality I have seen. At Dhurrumsala there is a house with about eighteen rooms, built by Dr. Craddock, which with some alterations (if even these are absolutely essential) might suit Earl Mayo's domestic requirements. Then there is Sir Donald Macleod's dwelling, which is next in size, though probably better situated, according to taste, and about thirty or forty others of different dimensions. If a stimulus like this were given, the resources of Dhurrumsala would soon be developed, several domiciles would spring up in various directions (for there is room enough there for two places like Simla), and supplies of all sorts would pour in from the foot of the hills and other parts of the Punjab. They are comparatively scanty at present, owing to a paucity of residents and visitors. It is strange that Government does not send more European troops to such a healthy spot than the hundred or two hundred men who go annually to the convalescent depot at Bhagsoo, adjoining Dhurrumsala. If there is any one place in India more suited for a European colony than another, that place is certainly the Kangra Valley. —Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

DOVETON COLLEGE.—We observe that the Principal and two of the masters of the Doveton College, Calcutta, have been committed to the next Criminal Sessions of the High Court, on a charge of assault and illegal imprisonment.

CIVIL SERVICE COLLEGE.—Our Lahore contemporary understands that a sum of Rs. 1,050 has been paid, and one of Rs. 2,650 promised, to the Lahore Committee of the proposed Civil Service College. Further support to this excellent scheme is confidently anticipated.

PROFESSOR MAX MULLER.—The Lahore paper understands that Professor Max Müller will have finished in a few weeks the first volume of his translation of the Rig Veda. He has just finished his edition of the Pratisakhya, and is now printing a translation of some curious Buddhist documents.

TRIBUTE TO SIR HERBERT EDWARDES.—On the recommendation of the Punjab Government, the Governor-General in Council has ordered that the head-quarters and cantonment of the Bunnoo district should henceforth be designated "Edwardesabad," in memory of the late Sir H. B. Edwardes.

CIVIL.—Mr. T. D. Forsyth, Commissioner of Jullundhur, to whom trade in these remote regions owes so much, is about to leave India at once, on six or nine months' leave. It is understood that the object for which he has striven in India will, to some extent, influence his movements, and that Moscow will be one of the places which he proposes to visit.

THE HOOGHLY FEVER.—Mr. C. C. Adley, C.E., has been specially deputed to conduct an investigation into the causes connected with the epidemic fever in the Hooghly and Burdwan districts. The Commissioner has also been directed to give special attention to the matter, and to impress upon all the other civil officers the necessity of rendering all the assistance in their power.

THE LOSS OF THE "JOHN BELLAMY."—The following has been received from Rangoon, dated the 24th April:—"The British ship John Bellamy, Captain Donaldson, is a total loss on the coast. The vessel went on shore on a hard sand bank thirty-five miles north of Cape Negrais on the morning of the 18th at 1 A.M., and at 1 P.M. of the same date was abandoned by the crew, the vessel being then full of water, with the mainmast through her bottom."

A GREAT DISCOVERY.—The Umritu Bazaar Patrika publishes the following conclusion on the subject of epidemic fevers:—"English medicines are one of the chief causes of epidemic fever, for wherever these are to be procured the fever rages most. These fevers were not known in Jessore prior to the introduction of the European medical system. The jungle and the marshy state of the country are minor causes, to be found in a very few instances."

A STOLEN MARRIAGE.—A Calcutta contemporary records what it calls "an affair of the heart." "It took place a few days ago at Dum-Dum. A fair one, who had slighted many wooers, bestowed her affections on a sergeant of one of her Majesty's regiments stationed at the above named place. It is said that the young lady flew from the window of her bathroom while her guardians slept, and then became united with the man of her choice in the holy bond of matrimony."

CACHAR.—Mr. Leonard has stated before the Asiatic Society of Bengal that the reports regarding the severity of the earthquake in Cachar, and especially as to its action in rupturing the earth, were considerably exaggerated. Though he had travelled through the disturbed district for more than 150 miles, he had not seen a single case of disturbance or fracture of solid ground. The disturbances in every case which he had seen were caused by the slipping in of the banks of rivers or of old river-beds, or of partially filled-up jheels.

THE EX-AMEER OF KABUL.—It is said that a letter has been received by Sirdar Yakoob Ali Khan, from Herat, to the effect that Azim Khan had arrived at Ghooryan with about 40,000 Persian troops, and that it was expected that he would soon be before Herat. It was only the other day that we saw it stated that both Azim Khan and Abdool Rahman Khan were in Beloochistan, attended only by a few sowars, and that even these were with difficulty prevailed upon to stay. Both statements cannot be true; and we think the latter the more credible of the two.—Times of India.

EXCITEMENT AT MANDALAY.—Captain Sladen, preparatory to opening his Court at Mandalay, had circulars posted in the bazaars, announcing the establishment of the Court, and requiring all persons claiming to be British subjects at once to register their names at his office. This caused considerable excitement amongst the native population. The prevailing opinion appeared to be that the British were coming to take possession, and that the registration was a ruse to get as many people as possible to declare themselves in their favour. The circular was torn down in many places, the people declaring that the king was no more king; but no disturbance occurred.

CATTLE DISEASE IN THE SOONDERBUNS.—A disease called pachima is reported to be fast destroying the cattle of the Soonderbuns. It has appeared in an epidemic form, and its victims invariably fall off and die in the course of two or three days. This epidemic is said not to differ much from the epizootic, or cattle disease of 1864. It is called by the natives pachima, or puschima, probably because they suppose it to have come from the west. Mr. Rainey, in bringing the matter to the notice of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India at a recent meeting in Calcutta, suggested that the Government should cause a simple manual in Bengalee on the subject of cattle diseases to be prepared for distribution among the people. Such a work would be of the greatest utility.

RAJPOOTANA.—Unseasonable weather in Rajpootana, has destroyed the hopes that were entertained of a moderately good spring harvest in those parts. The Governor-General's agent reports that in Ajmere, which is the centre of Rajpootana, and where commerce is most free, the price of wheat fell to 8½ seers on the 13th February last, and the price of barley to 10 seers. On the 12th April the price of wheat was 7½ seers, and that of barley 10 seers. This is much dearer than was anticipated, and there is reason to apprehend considerable distress until the next crop begins to ripen in September. It is stated that at Jodhpore wheat is selling at only 5½ seers the rupee.

MARCH OF INTELLECT.—In Rajpootana, as in Bengal, a growing thirst for knowledge, among the agricultural and other classes of the community, is very marked. Four years ago it was hardly possible to get a Jat or Gujar to entertain the idea of attending either a day or evening school; while now the missionaries have flourishing evening classes, attended principally by young men who are engaged in the fields during the day. The traders whose children crowd the day-schools, eager to retain a monopoly of the knowledge which with them is power to oppress, try to frighten away the cultivators from the evening-schools. The Rev. Mr. Martin, of Nusseerabad, finds that these schools form an admirable mission field.

CIVIL SERVICE FUND MEMORIAL.—"We have heard," says the Englishman, "from one of the committee that the Civil Service Fund Memorial and a covering circular letter have already been drafted, and that a figured statement, which Mr. Batten proposed to put as an appendix to the memorial, showing the exact financial effect of the present fund rules is very nearly ready. Some delay must however occur before the memorial is circulated to the service generally, as half the committee is at Simla and half in Calcutta. Possibly some further discussion and correspondence will be necessary between Simla and Calcutta, but there is no reason for much delay. The question is now probably not one of years as hitherto, but of weeks and even days."

PUNJAB "GAZETTEER."—The Punjab Government Gazette states that Mr. Lepel Griffin, C.S., and Mr. Baden Powell, C.S., have been appointed to edit the "Gazetteer" of the Punjab, which will appear in numbers, the first being issued in June next. Each district will have a number to itself. The "Gazetteer," we are told, will contain all available information with regard to the several districts, their history, people, antiquities, productions, manufactures, with statistics, sanitary, fiscal, judicial, educational, &c. Photographs of the principal places of interest will also be given. The price of each number will be Rs. 2, without photographs, and Rs. 3, with photographs; and those who wish to receive the numbers as issued are invited to register their names. The price is moderate, and the "Gazetteer" will be a work of great interest and value.

DR. WILSON AT SIMLAH.—Dr. Wilson, one of the oldest missionaries of the Free Church at Bombay, arrived at Simla on the 23rd April. The learned doctor has travelled from Bombay to Nagpur, and then to Calcutta, whence he came via Allahabad to this station. On Sabbath last he held Divine service in a room which had been kindly placed at his disposal. Had there been time to have selected a more public place, which there was not, we doubt not a very large assemblage would have been obtained to hear him. As it was he had a good and attentive audience. His stay here will be very brief. We believe he will leave in a day or two on his return to Bombay; he is at present the guest of Earl Mayo. We regret to state that Dr. Wilson's health has suffered from his long and tedious journey; this is not to be wondered at when it is considered that he is the oldest missionary now in India, and at his time of life such a journey must be exceedingly trying.—Indian Volunteer Gazette.

MILITARY.—His Excellency Sir William Mansfield arrived at Simla on the 26th April. The Indian Volunteer Gazette understands that the new sanitary depots of Rancee Khet, near Almorah, and Chukrata, near Mussoorie, have been very carefully inspected by his Excellency, and every arrangement made for the erection of sufficient barrack accommodation for the troops which are to reside there.—Last week we (Bombay Gazette) quoted one or two items of news communicated to the Englishman by its Hyderabad correspondent. One statement—that "Captain Bell is spoken of as likely to succeed Captain Fitzgerald, lately deceased"—was unpleasantly sudden news to a great many of Captain Fitzgerald's friends, who had heard nothing at all of his fatal illness. But the "lately deceased" was a mistake. The officer referred to (second in command of the 3rd Cavalry Hyderabad Contingent, and well-known to many of our readers) goes home after thirteen years' service on sick certificate, in the hope of getting rid of a fever which he caught whilst on service, and which has ever since returned at certain seasons of the year. But we are glad to say there is no likelihood at all that we shall soon have to write "deceased" after his name.

A FRONTIER RAID.—On the 4th ult. the Kabil Khail and Tazi Khail branches of the Wazeree tribe made a raid on the village of Thull. The villagers were successful in repulsing the attack on the village, and the raiders had three men killed and a few wounded; but the cattle, while grazing some few miles from Thull, were simultaneously attacked, and about one thousand head of cattle and sheep were carried off. The Deputy-Commissioner of Kohat represented to Government the necessity for immediate action, and urged the expediency of sending a portion of the Kohat force to the Meranzai Valley, with the view to compelling the Wazeree offenders to restore the cattle and submit to a suitable fine for the insult, adding that the majority of the Wazeree tribes had left for their summer settlements, and only a few men remained to guard the crops, which would be nearly ripe by the time the troops would reach Thull. As these crops are very valuable, it was probable, if not certain, that the Wazerees would at once submit to the Government terms rather than see them destroyed. Sanction was given to these measures, and a selected force from the Kohat Garrison, under command of Colonel Keyes, C.B., with Lieutenant Cavnagari as Political Officer, marched on the 24th instant for Thull. A number of Miranzai and Khattak levies joined the force at Thull. As was expected, the Wazerees as usual swaggered till they found our troops really on the move and their valuable crops at our mercy, when they agreed to pay a fine of Rs. 2,000, and give two selected hostages to accompany the Deputy-Commissioner to Kohat in guarantee for the payment of upwards of Rs. 6,000 within a month, in compensation for that portion of the cattle not returned. The Tazi Khail Wazerees have been similarly dealt with as equally implicated. It appears that the Wazeree crops had been much underestimated. They were found to be worth nearly a lakh of rupees in the open plain, where they might have been leisurely cut or destroyed. The Commissioner of Peshawur, in communicating sanction for the advance of the troops towards Thull, applied for and obtained from Ameer written orders to the Governor of Khost and Koorum, and to Ursula Khan, Ghilzie, to afford every assistance to our troops if they found it necessary to cross the Koorum and destroy the Kabil Khail crops which lie beyond, i.e., west of Balund Khail. As no fighting was anticipated, no disappointment was felt at the amicable settlement, and the troops left Thull well pleased with their pleasant trip into the Miranzai Valley.—Pioneer.

Madras.

MOVEMENTS OF LORD NAPIER.—Lord Napier, Governor of Madras, will remain in Madras till nearly the end of June, when he will start on a tour in the Salem and North Arcot districts.

CIVIL.—It is said that Mr. C. G. Plumer is to be Civil and Sessions Judge at Salem in succession to the late Mr. Chamier. Mr. Plumer is at present Acting Judge at Calicut.

CINNAMON.—Cinnamon is henceforth to be exempt from export duty. This staple is grown in small quantities, and only on the western coast. None has been exported from Madras for the last five years. Hence this exemption.—Madras Paper.

MADRAS UNIVERSITY.—At the meeting of the Senate of the Madras University held the other day, a committee was appointed to re-consider the details of the University professorships' scheme. The Senate, we understand, expressed a decided opinion that a chair of physical science should form part of the scheme.

MILITARY.—We learn from the Pioneer that Major Eustace Hill, 2nd in command of the 4th Regiment Nizam's Cavalry, is seriously ill, and has been ordered at once to England.—With the sanction of the Madras Government, and pending final instructions from the Government of India, the Southern Division of the Madras Army ceased to be a divisional command from April 20, and has become a second class brigade, to be denominated "The Southern District," Head Quarters, Trichinopoly. The divisional staff remain undisturbed until opportunities arise for providing elsewhere for existing incumbents.

LORD MAYO A FREEMASON.—We observe that at the last communication of the District Grand Lodge for the Madras Presidency the District Grand Master stated that in an interview he had with H. E. Worshipful Brother the Earl Mayo, K.P., his lordship was pleased to intimate that it would afford him much gratification to accept the office of honorary member of the District Grand Lodge of Madras. From what fell from H. E., the District Grand Master had every reason to believe that his lordship would take an active interest in the craft in India; and doubtless, under such favourable auspices, the extension and prosperity of Freemasonry in India might confidently be expected. The Right Hon. the Earl Mayo, K.P., was accordingly proposed and duly elected an honorary member of the District Grand Lodge of Madras.

COLONEL SILVER.—There was a meeting of the Water Supply Committee on Friday, April 30, and the last resolution passed therein we have the pleasure to subjoin:—Proposed by Captain Edgecome, and seconded by Parthasarathy Naidu, that on the approaching departure to England of Colonel Silver, this committee desire to place on record their high appreciation of the very valuable services ever rendered by him as their chairman; and while regretting that they will be temporarily deprived of his presence at their meetings and of the benefit of his advice and judgment in their deliberations, this regret is happily tempered by the fact that both he and his colleague, Mr. Coleman, who is also about to leave Madras, have obligingly consented while in England to be the representatives, and to further the interests of the municipality in regard to the water supply project with which they have so long and so usefully been connected.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.—Mr. W. R. Arbuthnot has for the fourth time been appointed a member of the Legislative Council of Madras. The Mail says in connection with Mr. Arbuthnot's appointment—"The Indian Legislative Councils in general are not yet of that representative character that the country may fairly demand, but, such as they are, they are not without a certain value in educating the public mind for greater things. The mercantile community, however, whatever may be the position of the rest of the public, are almost always well represented in these councils, and Madras merchants especially have no cause to quarrel with the Councils Act of 1861. Mr. Arbuthnot, if for an Etonian somewhat constrained as a public speaker, makes ample amends for his undeveloped powers of eloquence by high literary capabilities, and his long connection in a foremost position with the commercial interests of this port marks him out as a most fitting representative in our Legislative Assembly of the community to which he belongs."

MILITARY.—It has for a long time been pretty generally understood that on Colonel Silver's departure on leave, on the 2nd May, Colonel W. G. Woods would again act for him as Army Clothing Agent at Madras. The appointment has not yet been gazetted however.—Lieut. G. H. Cherry, 8th Regiment Madras Native Infantry, is allowed furlough to Europe for twenty-four months on medical certificate, under the Furlough Regulations of 1868.—The policy of retrenchment adopted by Mr. Cardwell, Secretary of State for War, interferes unpleasantly with the Commander-in-Chief of Madras and Sir Rowland Smythe, general of the centre division. The Mail states that these officers "have received notice that no pay will be passed to them in England while holding a command in India. By this General McCleverty loses from £600 to £700 a-year, and Sir Rowland Smythe, being a Cavalry Colonel, some £900 a-year. It may be fair that these officers shall not draw pay from both Governments, but as hitherto the practice has been allowed, we think it hard to begin the reduction with present incumbents. It reduces the latter's pay to almost that of a Brigadier.

A MUSSULMAN FANATIC.—The followers of the Prophet still hanker after the honours of martyrdom. A Mahomedan named Mohideen Hassain left his house on the morning of Saturday in perfect health, and was not under the influence of bang or any intoxicating drink. A few hours after his departure from home his relatives were informed that he was being burnt to death. He had been found in a room, which he had taken the precaution to lock inside, with his clothes on fire. No assistance could be rendered to the man, as the flames had caused a great deal of injury. He however had sufficient life and consciousness in him to relate how the fire about his person had been caused. He said that he had daubed his clothes with oil, set fire to himself in honour of Hussain, a martyr whose death is commemorated during the Mohorum. He had intended to do what he had now accomplished on the tenth, or great day of the Mohorum festival, but he could not get a favourable opportunity. The coroner's jury returned a verdict that the "deceased had burnt himself by setting fire to his clothes, he being at the time in a state of temporary insanity."—Madras Times.

HALF A CENTURY OF SERVICE IN INDIA.—It was only the other day that we bid adieu to an old veteran of the local army, Major General Marshall, and now another who can look back upon forty-eight years of active service in this country is about to take leave of our shores and sever his connection with an army with which he has been associated for nearly half a century. . . . Major General Duke's early service began in the 1st Madras European Regiment, now her Majesty's 102nd Madras Fusiliers. In that distinguished corps he entered as an ensign in the latter part of 1821. In 1824 and 1825 he served with the expedition to Ava, and was present at the capture of Rangoon and several minor assaults and capture of stockades. He was also at the taking of Pegue. He served with the expedition to Malacca, and again in the second expedition to Burmah in 1852-53. He also commanded the Kinedy Field Force in 1856. In December 1852 he left his old regiment, the "Die-hards," to command the troops at Rangoon. After a brief period of leave to England he returned as Brigadier to Rangoon from December 1857 to August 1859, and in April 1864 was appointed to the Divisional Command of the troops in Burmah, from which command he was transferred to the Southern Division in May 1867. Major General Duke was also Provisional Commander-in-Chief of the Madras army from October to November 1867. As an officer his reputation has deservedly stood high, but in this Presidency there is so little scope for the exercise of the higher qualities of a soldier, that in most instances an estimate has to be formed of the capacity of an officer from the way in which he handles a few regiments on parade, his inspection reports, and the tact and temper he evinces as the head of a little military cantonment. General Duke, however, in his early years as we have noticed, saw a good deal of active service. He was trained in an excellent regiment, and had an opportunity been afforded him while in the exercise of a high command, we doubt not he would have justified the esteem and high opinion in which he has been justly held as a popular commander. In his late divisional command General Duke won golden opinions, and we venture to say that no officer has left the Southern Division or the Madras army of late years more universally respected.—Madras Mail.

A HINDOO JUDGE IN SEARCH OF A WIFE.

We append an advertisement which has been published for several days in the daily issue of the Bombay Gazette, and has been the talk of the town:—

Bombay, 3rd May, 1869.

I, Rao Bahadur Moroba Cannoba Ballajee, surnamed Vijayakar, Hindu inhabitant, of Bombay, by caste Pathare Kshatri, otherwise called Patane Prabhu, by profession a Judge of the Small Cause Court of Bombay, do hereby notify that I, who have been a widower for several years, am now prepared to enter into a matrimonial alliance, according to the Hindu law, with a widowed Prabhu female.

I shall therefore be glad to receive written applications from widowed females, or their parents, or other guardians, until the 10th day of June next, offering to marry me.

No female need apply whose age is under 20 or above 35 years, or who has children by her first husband.

The application should show the names of the applicant, of her deceased husband, her father, and her brothers if she has any, her present age, her place of residence, whether she knows how to read or write, when she became a widow, who has hitherto supported her, and whether she be ready and willing to perform the necessary religious ceremony before the close of the present marriage season.

The names of all rejected applicants shall not be disclosed by me, and if required I will return the original applications when I have selected one.

All applicants should be prepared to have one or more interviews with me in the presence of such friends as the applicants may name, but at a place and time to be fixed by me.

In order that my second wife may have a snug competence after my death, I shall secure for her a pension of Rupees (50) fifty a-month by becoming a subscriber to the Uncovenanted Service Widow Fund.

That Hindu widows can legally re-marry has been declared by eminent Hindu lawgivers and by the Legislative of the present day (vide Act No. 15 of 1856 of the Government of India).

That the practice of widowed females of my caste remarrying was observed until so late as the year A.D. 1743 has been conclusively established by the records of the late Peishwa's Government, of which authenticated extracts formed part of the proceedings of the Pathare Reform Association, published by me as their secretary in A.D. 1863, in a pamphlet, entitled, "Marriage of Hindu Widows."

We are getting, says the Bombay Gazette, more letters from persons professing to be widows or widows' guardians than we care to read. We are glad, however, for Mr. Moroba Cannoba's sake, that the only embarrassment he is likely to experience in finding a widow is the embarrassment du choix. At the same time some of the correspondents are as difficult to please, and as exacting in their conditions, as any lady's maid of the period could be. Who ever heard, for instance, of a lady making such a stipulation as the following? Only untold wealth could warrant the impertinence:—

I have sufficient property left to me by my father to live upon; but what I want is a husband. I therefore beg of Mr. Moroba to let me know whether, in addition to, or in lieu of, the promised pension, he would arrange to secure a husband for me before his death, as my object in entering into a second wedlock is simply to have a husband, and should he (Mr. Moroba) die, like my first husband, I shall again be left a widow. If he is, therefore, prepared to nominate a successor for him, I shall be happy to send him my application.

And this letter is signed "A Purbhoo Widow!" Verily old Mr. Weller was right.—Another correspondent actually wishes Mr. Moroba to meet her at a given time and place on the Esplanade. She wants him to come alone, and names as the place of rendezvous "the foot of the cross"—meaning, we presume, the cross near the Marine Lines. Such a proposal to a man of the venerable years of Mr. Moroba is simply disgraceful, and we must at once inform all such intriguing widows that we shall on no account allow them to make assignations with his Honour through the medium of these columns. Under Calcutta precedents Mr. Moroba would be quite justified in treating such conduct as contempt of Court, and subjecting the hardy and shameless widows to summary and severe punishment. The writer of the letter before us gives a description of herself, which some of our readers (if they believe it) may find curious. She writes in the third person, and says she is—

A young widow about six and twenty, can read and write Goozaratty and a little English, a competent hand at needlework (fancy and plain). Can "hum" a tune or two, and dose assure Rao Badoor that she possess all those sensible charms that would be requisit to comfort him in his old age. . . . Her last husband died hart broken.

A very comforting assurance, indeed, for her future husband! Besides letters from widows, others have been pouring in from male correspondents. One of them, evidently written by a Graduate, would interest our readers as a specimen of English, if on no other account. We quote a passage or two:—

Having a degree of sympathy for the advertiser, I have been able enough to procure a buxom widow to enter into matrimonial alliance with Judge Moroba. She is a woman of sovereign perfection, and an accomplished peace of creation. She is the most beautiful creature that we ever beheld on earth since the world has been a world. Mr. Editor, the bride I have procured for Judge Moroba is such that neither you nor I nor all mankind put together could find proper terms, words sufficiently expressive, or eloquence suited to convey the most distant idea of which she is in reality. Her hair is of a fine brown, of such a length that it reaches below her feet, and in such abundance that when she wears it in curls on her head it resembles a fine bunch of grapes of which the fruit is of an extraordinary size. Under her hair appears her forehead as smooth as the finest polished mirror. This model of beauty possesses all those extraordinary qualities which distinguish the would-be bridegroom. She is ready to offer her hand to the advertiser; but as she has plenty of wealth in command wishes to solemnize the marriage according to the usages and customs of the Hindu nation. That worthy Judge to be equipped in the most magnificent apparel, decorated with the most glittering ornaments of gold and the most brilliant jewels. Long wreaths of beautiful and elegant flowers should cover his head and shoulders, flowing down his feet. He is to be seated on a horse, the most sumptuously equipped—a cocoanut covered with tinfoil should be put into his hands, the trumpets sound forth their echo in the air, music to be set to work, the drums beat, a perfect concert flourish and a most splendid procession should follow. If this query is solved by the venerable pioneer of reform the lady will have no objection to marry him!

We fancy even Mr. Moroba must see that this correspondent is poking fun at him. It will be sufficient to allude to one other letter, just to show the sort of thing people have been writing. The gist of it is in the following sentences of model English:—

Although Mr. Moroba has given the necessary information in his advertisement for the guidance of his caste-men, still he omitted the most important point, viz., whether he wants a widow with hair or without hair, as he will find great difficulty in finding out a woman with hair and above twenty years of age, unless she wears a wig at the time of her remarrying. I therefore suggest Mr. Moroba that he must at present leave the intention of marrying this season till the next, when I doubt not he will find a woman if there be any with hair and to his liking.

Miscellaneous.

MILITARY.—Ensign P. C. Heath, of her Majesty's 45th Regiment has been confirmed in the appointment of Aide-de-Camp to Major General Sir C. Malcolm, K.C.B., commanding Sind division of the army.

THE BOMBAY STUD.—Government has, at the suggestion of Inspecting Veterinary Surgeon Collins, purchased the excellent Australian horse Budelight, from the stables of the Hon. Samuel Mansfield, for stud purposes in the districts of Kattiawar.—Sindian.

NATIVES BOUND FOR ENGLAND.—Amongst the passengers who left for England on May 1st were Mr. Sitaram Narayan Fundit and Mr. Crisnarao Gopal Desmook. The former intends to study in England for the Civil Service; and the latter to qualify himself for the bar. They are both young men.

BERAR.—The Englishman's Hyderabad correspondent writes—"Many changes have occurred in Berar. Captain Mackenzie is to act as Deputy Commissioner of Akola. The accounts of the Exhibition are yet unsettled, and Mr. Davies is ordered to Bombay to re-adjust them. The Deputy Accountant General from Hyderabad has visited Akolah, and examined the treasury and the accounts of the Currency Department. Great credit is due, according to that officer, to the Assistant Commissioner, Mr. C. Davies. The heat is terrific."

BOMBAY, BARODA, AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY.—Accounts respecting the progress of the railway works between Beerh and Jubulpore are very conflicting. We learn from a contemporary that some disagreements have arisen with the contractors, and that the period of completion will be deferred in consequence beyond June, 1870. Fully three-fourths of the disputes with contractors, we are convinced, arise in the first instance from imperfect specifications, and often in undue haste in letting work to the lowest tenderer. We have no reason to suppose that such is the case in this instance, but we shall be much surprised if it is not.

WRECK CHARTS.—We are glad to learn that the Government of India has sanctioned an allowance of Rs. 100 per mensem to the First Assistant Master Attendant for the preparation and annual publication of a wreck report and chart for India; and has also allowed him a moderate establishment to assist in the work. We trust that the work will have a retrospective effect, and that the first publication will show all wrecks which have occurred since the last authentic chart was printed.

BANK OF BOMBAY.—We understand that Mr. Henry Forman, of Sir Charles Forbes and Company, has been elected a director of the New Bank of Bombay, in the room of Mr. A. J. Macdonald, of the same firm, who, we believe, proceeds to England by an early mail. Mr. Macdonald has done good service for the Bank. He was a staunch supporter of Reconstruction versus Amalgamation when the minds of the Bombay community were somewhat perplexed, and we hope he will continue his labours of love in England until the intrusive Bengal Agency has beaten a retreat.

MR. GEORGE COWPER.—We regret to announce the death of Mr. George Cowper, Deputy Assistant Commissary, and Sub-Engineer Public Works Department, on Monday night last, at his residence in the new Ordnance Lines, from disease of the heart and brain. Since the time of Mr. Cowper joining the Executive Engineer's office, Poona district, our roads have been greatly improved, both in the civil and military lines. This meritorious servant of Government arrived in India twenty-three years ago, and after having served the State efficiently and zealously at Aden, Ahmedabad, Indore, and elsewhere, was, a few years ago, placed in charge of the Poona and Kirkee cantonment roads, and the admirable state of repair into which he brought these roads testifies to the loss the Service has sustained by his untimely death. Lately he had been in failing health, and, on the advice of the Civil Surgeon of Poona, was about to proceed to England to recruit his strength; but at the last moment his malady assumed a serious type, and he gradually sank to rest surrounded by his family and friends.—Poona Observer, May 6.

CHOLERA IN BARODA.—BARODA, May 3.—Cholera is severe in this city just now, and many people are carried off. On Friday last two men were taken out dead from the down local train at this station, and on Saturday two more from the local train. A committee was held to investigate the matter, composed of Major Gordon, Surgeon-major Remington, Mr. Foy, resident engineer, and Mr. Sargon, the contractor. Dr. Remington held a post-mortem examination, and on opening the stomach of one of the deceased, found in it nothing but melons (commonly termed marsh melons) in a state of putridity; no wonder the men died from cholera. Some of the passengers stated that at the distance of only two stations from Baroda the men appeared quite well; so that they were taken ill and died while travelling over only twenty miles. Major Gordon, the staff officer here, issued an order some time back that no such fruit as melons, kermeyes, &c., &c., should be brought within camp limits, and it is owing to this wise precaution, no doubt, that there is so little sickness in camp.—Times of India Correspondent.

LOSS OF THE "SARAH SANDS."—Further information has now been received as to the loss of the Sarah Sands, which we reported some days ago. She was coal laden, from Liverpool to Bombay, and met heavy weather for some weeks after sailing. No damage of any moment was sustained however, and all went well till the morning of the 15th April, when she struck on the eastern reef of Kalpeni, one of the Laccadives. The crew had all to leave by the 18th, and they made for the island, the ship breaking up ere anything could be got off her, except the clothes of the crew, some biscuits, and a few tins of preserved meats. Guided by the natives through openings in the reef, the sailors effected a landing, and remained on the island till the 20th; when the natives, perceiving the captain was about to start in the long-boat with four volunteers to seek for aid, produced a larger but unseaworthy craft, in which the captain and crew eventually embarked. Four canoes manned with natives accompanied them to the Malabar Coast, and they landed at Alleppey. The crew have since been sent here, and are now in Bombay. Government have appointed a court of inquiry, consisting of Mr. John Connon, Acting Chief Magistrate, and Lieutenant G. O'Brien Carew, late of the Indian Navy, to inquire into the circumstances connected with the loss of the Sarah Sands. The investigation will take place at the Fort Police Court.—Bombay Gazette.

THE 59TH REGIMENT.—This distinguished old corps was inspected by his Excellency Lord Napier of Magdala, Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay Army, on Monday morning. The regiment was formed in line, and received his Excellency with the usual salute, and after being inspected, formed open column right in front and marched past in quick time. The regiment was then put through various manoeuvres by Lieutenant-Colonel Bushe, and subsequently put through the manual and platoon exercise by Major DeMontmorency, and the bayonet exercise by the Adjutant Small. The regiment afterwards then formed quarter distance column in rear of the right centre company, and was addressed by his Excellency as follows:—"Colonel Bushe and 59th Regiment,—I am well pleased to see you so steady under arms. It has been reported to me by the Brigadier-General commanding the brigade that your conduct since your arrival here has been most exemplary. As a friend I would advise the whole of you, particularly young soldiers, to avoid the many temptations that soldiers in this country are subject to, and if you do this you are likely to live as long in this country as in any other in the world. As you have commenced well so I hope you will continue, and any encouragement that I can give the regiment I shall be most happy to give." The regiment was afterwards marched to quarters, and his Excellency visited the hospital, and expressed himself highly pleased with its arrangements. Yesterday morning his Excellency completed the inspection of the regiment by visiting the regimental cells, schoolroom, canteen, and sergeants' mess, and complimented Colonel Bushe on the cleanliness and order in which they were kept.—Deccan Herald, May 5.

THE ACCIDENT ON THE NAGPORE EXTENSION.—We have learned the following additional particulars of the disastrous accident on the G.I.P. Railway line, briefly alluded to in our issue of Saturday last. Mr. Wrottesley, Assistant Commissioner, Wurdah, on Friday evening, the 23rd ultimo, having made arrangements to avail himself of the three months' privilege leave granted to him, intended to come on to Nagpore by the afternoon down-train. Unfortunately he missed it, and, being anxious to reach Nagpore that evening if possible, he asked the Permanent Way Inspector between Wurdah and Sindee, Mr. Barnes, who happened to be at Wurdah, if he could accommodate him with a seat on his trolley. The latter consented, and the party, consisting of Mr. Wrottesley, Mr. Barnes, and one or two natives, started from that part of the line which is opposite Mr. Wrottesley's house, and some distance from the railway station, about 7 p.m. The Inspector, however, omitted to make inquiry at the station, previous to leaving, if the line was clear, thinking that, as the ordinary train had passed, there was no necessity for so doing. As the trolley neared the curve close to the bridge over the Pownar river, a native on the trolley said that the noise of a train coming towards them was plainly to be heard, and begged Mr. Wrottesley to desist from playing a cornet-a-piston which he had with him. Immediately after, lights were seen ahead; but the two Europeans insisted that they were the lights of a gate-lodge at a crossing. The natives knew better, and those who propelled the trolley left it, while those who were on it jumped off. They had scarcely done so, when an engine came round the curve at a very rapid pace; and the inspector had only time to hold his lantern aloft and jump sideways off the trolley when the collision took place. He did not clear the engine, however, his left arm and leg being caught by it, and both were broken. Mr. Wrottesley, on the other hand, must have quite lost his presence of mind, for he tried to jump to the front, on to the engine, and his body was literally smashed to pieces. The scattered and mutilated remains were collected together and buried in the Wurdah Cemetery on Saturday, together with those of Mr. Barnes, who, though he lived till the following day, succumbed to the operation of amputation, which was unavoidable in his case. All the railway people have been absolved from blame in this sad occurrence, save the unfortunate inspector, who has paid the forfeit of his carelessness with his life.—Central India Times, May 1.

The Bheels, we learn from a contemporary, in several instances, have frequently attempted to cause accidents on the line, and are otherwise very troublesome. The Resident Engineer is said to be of opinion that the blame is mainly attributable to the chiefs, who are the instigators, and should, therefore, be hunted out from their mountain recesses.—Bombay Builder.

Home.

MR. JAMES LOW, of 58, Old Broad-street, who has since 1842 been engaged in the negotiation of Indian Securities and Exchanges, retires on the 30th of June. Mr. G. de Quetteville, who has assisted him for the past fourteen years, will continue the business.

TROOPS FOR INDIA.—CHATHAM, May 27.—A draft of the 1st Battalion of the 14th Regiment, numbering 100 men of all ranks, was this morning placed under orders to embark for India, to join headquarters. Captain Lloyd and Ensign Morrison will embark with the troops.

SQUADRON DRILL.—The adoption of the squadron instead of the troop system for cavalry is under reconsideration. The commanding officers of regiments have, we believe, reported most unfavourably as to the practicability of the squadron drill, and it is thought that His Royal Highness the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief will give way to opinions so decidedly expressed.—Broad Arrow.

TURRET SHIPS FOR INDIA.—CHATHAM, May 25.—The Cerberus, 4, 250-horse power, iron armour-clad double-strew turret ship, built at Jarrow-upon-Tyne, is ordered to be removed to this port, about the 8th June, for the purpose of being docked and brought forward for service in the East Indies, it being intended that she shall be stationed at Bombay, for the defence of that port. The Magdala, a sister ship to the Cerberus, now building, is likewise intended to be stationed at Bombay.

ALLEGED UNDUE INFLUENCE.—Before Mr. Commissioner Holroyd, on May 24, Eliza Holland, the widow of Lieut.-colonel Holland, of the late East India Company's service, living in Tavistock-crescent, Notting-hill, applied for her discharge from debts of £970. She ascribed her failure to the "undue influence" which had been exercised over her by her medical man, with whom she had boarded and lodged at four guineas a week, and who had obtained possession of the whole of her pension of £220 a year, besides some £400 or £500, the proceeds of shares. No opposition was offered, and the lady received her order of discharge.

DISAPPEARANCE OF FIFE-HOUSE.—Fife-house, once the town residence of the Earls of Fife, situated in Whitehall-yard, is now razed to the ground to make room for the improvements of the Board of Works. It was last occupied by the India Museum, having become Crown property. Fife-house is mentioned in Thackeray's "Esmond" and "The Virginians." With Lord Malmesbury's house, in Whitehall-gardens (afterwards Lord Harrington's, and next the old Foreign-office), Fife-house was a centre for fashionable reunions and gaieties in Queen Anne's reign and the earlier days of the Georgian era.

EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY.—The twenty-second ordinary general meeting of this company was held on Friday, at the Guildhall Tavern; Mr. James Leith in the chair. Mr. Wood, the secretary, read the report, which stated that the general traffic returns showed an increase of £222,331 over the receipts of the corresponding half-year. The net receipts amount to £49,714, being equal to a profit at the rate of £3. 18s. 8d. per cent. upon the share and debenture capital of the company. The gross receipts for the current quarter show an increase of £3,680 over those of the corresponding period of 1868. The report was adopted.

"TAYLOR V. THE P. AND O. STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY."—In the Court of Queen's Bench, on May 26, this case came before the Lord Chief Justice and Justices Mellor, Lush, and Hayes. It was an action brought by Major Taylor, of the Madras army, to recover compensation in damages for severe bodily injuries sustained by him in consequence of falling through a hatch on board the steam vessel Pera, in which he had engaged a passage for India, while it was in dock at Southampton. The trial took place at Westminster before the Lord Chief Justice, when the jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff, damages £3,750. Sir J. Karlake, Q.C., now moved for a new trial, on the ground that the verdict was against evidence, and that the damages were excessive. The Lord Chief Justice said the case was eminently one for a jury, and he did not think that their verdict, which was given after long deliberation, should be disturbed. The other judges being of the same opinion, the rule was refused.

A WELCOME BOON.—In order to extend as much as possible the facilities of exchange to officers of the new Line regiments, the Secretary of State for War, in concurrence with the Secretary of State for India in Council, has decided that the privilege of retaining their claim to Indian pension shall be granted to all officers who, having been appointed to one of the new Line regiments from the Indian army, may have since joined, or may hereafter join by exchange, any other regiment of her Majesty's British service, whether purchase or non-purchase, or either of the Indian Staff Corps. Such officers will accordingly, on retirement from a purchase regiment, be entitled either to sell their commissions under the usual regulations of the service, or to avail themselves of the Indian pension rules. If, however, such officers shall retire from the service from a non-purchase regiment of the Line before they have acquired a claim to pension under the Indian rules, they will be entitled to receive the value of their commissions under the conditions laid down in General Order No. 48 of 1868.—Broad Arrow.

BRITISH INDIAN SUBMARINE TELEGRAPH COMPANY.—A meeting was held on Friday last of the British Indian Submarine Telegraph Company (Limited), when the directors' report, which has already been published, was unanimously adopted.

MADRAS IRRIGATION AND CANAL COMPANY.—The report of the directors of the Madras Irrigation and Canal Company stated that the whole of the works between Soonkasala and Cuddapah would be completed within the time specified in the contract with the Secretary of State in Council. The works were being carried on by twenty-three engineers on every portion of the 190 miles over which the canal extended. At 7.30 a.m. on the 19th of December last the water was permitted to flow over the Terragonpilly aqueduct in the sixty-fifth mile, and through the Mittacondal cut down to the seventy-fifth mile, where it passed into the Caulee river, through the company's head sluices there, having a depth at the sluices of 3 feet 6 inches. On the 31st of December last the Pennair river rose 10 inches at the Nellore anicut, about eighty miles from the junction, proving that the transference of the Toombudda water to the Pennair river, a distance of 190 miles from the head works at Soonkasala, had then become an accomplished fact, and that the addition of the water of the Toombudda had sensibly affected the volume of the Pennair at Nellore, a further distance of eighty miles. The capital account to the 31st of December last showed that £1,165,135 had been expended, leaving balances with the Secretary of State for India of £26,788; cash with engineers, £28,724; and cash in hand and in transitu, £22,018.

GREAT SOUTHERN OF INDIA RAILWAY.—The eleventh annual meeting of the shareholders of the Great Southern of India Railway Company was held on May 27. The chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, said he had an easy task to perform, as all East Indian railways were guaranteed 5 per cent. Nevertheless, it was for the directors to use their efforts to make the line pay a higher dividend. One point which had engaged their attention was the proposed Southern extension from Cutcoor to Tuticorin. The directors believed that that extension would be very remunerative, and they were justified in that opinion by the Government officials. At the instance of the Government very low fares had hitherto been charged, but he had reason to believe that the Government were disposed to allow the board more discretion in this matter than they had hitherto had, and he had no doubt that by a judicious increase in the fares they would very much increase their revenue. The meeting was afterwards made special for the purpose of considering the propriety of constructing the extension railway. The chairman stated that the length of the line would be 176 miles 63 chains, or, in case they took in the Tinnevely valley, it would be 210 miles long, and the cost was estimated at from £1,500,000 to £1,680,000. A resolution authorising the construction of the railway, and empowering the directors to take steps to raise the requisite capital, was unanimously carried.

THE MONCRIEFF SYSTEM.—At the last meeting of the Royal Institution, Captain Moncrieff explained his system of artillery to be based on the following principles:—"Instead," he said, "of trying to meet force by force, I make my gun bow to the inevitable conditions which science has imposed; and, instead of wasting energy, money, and skill in attempts to raise a buttress against the new artillery, I employ the hitherto destructive force of recoil to lower the guns below the natural surface of the ground, where they can be loaded and worked in security and comfort; and at the same time I have made that destructive force so much my servant that I compel it, at my pleasure, to raise the gun again into the fighting position whenever it is required. In 1855, while watching the interesting operations before Sebastopol, and endeavouring as well as I could to understand the conditions under which the siege artillery was used, I conceived the idea which is now realised. It was then that I saw the value of earth, and the importance of simple expedients. It was plain that the weak point of a battery was the embrasure, forming as it did a mark to fire at, an opening to admit the enemy's shot, and requiring constant repair, even from the effects of its own gun, which in firing injured the revetments with which the cheeks are formed. I also came to a conclusion in my own mind that a remedy for some of these defects could be devised. The real difficulty of the thing arose from the necessity of providing for the enormous strain of the recoil. At last I hit on a simple principle that would meet this difficulty to advantage, the interposition of a moving fulcrum between the gun and the platform—then I knew the problem could be solved." The points considered in Captain Moncrieff's plan are the mechanical principle of the gun carriage, the internal and the external forus of batteries, and the selection of the ground on which batteries should be placed.

AN INFAMOUS SWINDLE.—At the Westminster Police-court on May 24, James Walton was charged on a warrant with being concerned, with others not in custody, in defrauding Lieutenant Julian Lawrence, of her Majesty's Bombay Staff Corps, of £100. Mr. Lawrence said he had just come from India, and arrived on Monday, May 17. On Wednesday he went out of town, and in the evening came up from Canterbury with two men who had fastened themselves upon him, and they slept at the same coffee-house, the Victoria, Princes street, Westminster. On Thursday morning they went out in a cab and drove about London for two hours, alighting at a public-house called the Bell, in Dacre-street, Westminster, where the two men stated there was a rifle gallery. When they got inside the rifle gallery turned out to be a skittle alley, and the prisoner and an elderly man appeared on the scene. The elderly man picked up the skittle ball, threw it at the pins, and missed seven times, and then bet £10 that he would knock them down in seven. To this the two men and prisoner assented, and then Mr. Lawrence was induced to join. Of course the man lost; the bets were doubled up to £100, the prisoner holding the bets; and then the elderly gentlemen, knocking down all the pins with consummate skill, came up to prisoner, took the £100 out of his hand, in which was prosecutor's £100 in good notes, and leaving him only £5. The two Canterbury gentlemen had requested Lieutenant Lawrence to bring £100 with him, and therefore knew what he had got. Prisoner then went out with the prosecutor, for the purpose of getting his cash-box and winning the money back; but on the first opportunity he gave prosecutor the slip, and thus the latter lost his £100. Sergeant Langley, of the detective force, proved apprehending prisoner in the house where the prosecutor was victimised; he found on him a brass watch chain, eleven Hanoverian (imitation) sovereigns, and a £5 note on the Bank of Elegance. Prisoner said he could clear himself, and was remanded for a week.—Later in the day Wm. Peter Nicholson, a middle-aged man, was charged as an accomplice, and prosecutor positively swore to him; but, as the police stated he was known, and could be found at any time, his bail was taken to appear on Monday, May 31. On that day Mr. Selfe remanded the prisoners till Friday, in order that the defending attorneys might prove the strong alibi which each averred he could produce. Bail in £200 was taken for Nicholson. Mr. Selfe said he should require bail in £400 for the prisoner Walton. Walton was sent to the House of Detention in default of bail.

THE DRESS OF THE ENGLISH INFANTRY.—A correspondent of the Broad Arrow thus describes the dress of the infantry soldier:—"Absurd in its arrangement of colours, coarse and poor beyond belief in its texture and making-up, tightened and buttoned where it ought to be loose and free, hot and stifling in summer, cold and insufficient in winter, it gives to the wearer neither comfort nor protection; it covers his body and cramps his limbs, and that is all that can be said about it. Time after time has the uniform been snipped and snipped and lengthened and shortened, now appearing with tails and again with skirts, now showing a double breast garnished with useless buttons and then a single one, but always carefully preserving its complete ugliness and unsoldierlike qualities; always impressing upon outsiders the idea that the Horse Guards and Army tailors—a class intimately connected with the former venerable institution—were perpetually celebrating the 5th of November on a gigantic scale, the 'Guys' for the entertainment being supplied by the British Infantry, got up at different periods in different styles, but always carefully dressed for the parts they enact in the annual gunpowder festival. Dress, especially for a soldier, should be light and loose. He has to move quickly and at once; he has to carry a rifle, knapsack, accoutrements and ammunition; and to do all this he ought to have full play for his limbs and respiratory organs. Well, in his present style of 'get-up,' the Infantry soldier of Great Britain is as hampered in both as he can well be. A thick shoddy tunic grasps him round the chest and throat tightly, belts of an amazing character cross and recross him in all directions, a hard, uncompromising mass of unventilated hideousness called a shako presses upon his temples and almost gives him a fever, knapsack straps are passed over his shoulders and under his armpits, and are buckled so tightly that when he has to raise his rifle to his shoulder he does so with pain and difficulty, and finally he has to keep his head bent down lest the canteen on the top of his knapsack should knock off his shako, or that litter ornamental head-piece derange the position of the canteen. Freedom, lightness, and looseness are then the great desiderata in the dress of a soldier, instead of which we have constraint and clumsiness in every part of it, for even the ammunition-boots don't fit, and, as I have already written, from head to foot, the British Infantry soldier is the most painfully ill-dressed man in the world. As long as he is dressed and equipped as he is now, so long will he straggle and fall out, and 'Old Soldiers' and others will denounce him to the Times for doing so. When he gets a uniform that will permit him to use his limbs somewhat in the way nature intended their use, he will march as well as other troops, or as he does in India, where he is lightly clothed, and where he can do his twenty miles without straggling or complaint; but until that happy time arrives, he must expect to find himself written about by 'Old Soldiers,' also by—JENKINS.—7th of May, 1869."

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S (Ex. Army Med. Staff)

C H L O R O D Y N E

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE. The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Remedial Uses and Action.

THIS INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of Opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Colic, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

Those exhaustive diseases—Fever, Ague—so common in tropical climates, are rapidly arrested, and the cold stage in a few moments checked by a timely dose, when warmth and a general glow of the system is established, and comfort secured.

As a Sedative, Neurotic, and Antispasmodic, it is unequalled by any other known Medicine, and not to be surpassed in its specific effects.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay:—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec., 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered, the patient recovered.

Mrs. Forbes, wife of the Chaplain at Paris:—"I cannot speak too highly of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne; I have not in any single instance been disappointed with the result, even in aggravated cases of Indian Cholera."

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866:—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not 'supply a want and fill a place.'"

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera:—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

CHLORODYNE, the Great Remedy for CHOLERA.—See Report in the Times, Sept. 6, from the Malta Correspondent, who states, August 24th, that "108 cases and eighty-one deaths occurred at Messina; 60,000 people fled from the town, which is in a most deplorable condition; that Chlorodyne has been found most efficacious as a remedy, and a number of persons are reported to have been saved by its use."

Now as there are various imitations sold under the name of Chlorodyne, containing Indian Hemp, Morphia, &c., ingredients highly adverse to the cure of Cholera, the public are cautioned against the use of any compound under the name of Chlorodyne, unless it bears the name of Dr. J. Collis Browne, who coined the word Chlorodyne to designate his wonderful discovery, which he fully tested for many years in her Majesty's Service before introducing it to the public, the wonderful success of which has given rise to various imitations totally different to genuine Chlorodyne. See the decision of Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood, reported in the Times, July 13th, 1864.

The extraordinary medical reports on the efficacy of Chlorodyne renders it a subject of most vital importance that the public should obtain the genuine, which is now sold under the protection of the Government of Great Britain, authorising a stamp, bearing the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne," without which none is genuine. Sold in bottles, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d., by all Chemists. Sole Manufacturer, J. T. # IMPORTANT HISTORICAL WORKS.

Just ready, in Two Vols., 8vo., £1. 8s.

MEMOIRS AND CORRESPONDENCE OF FRANCIS ATTERBURY,
D.D., BISHOP OF ROCHESTER. With his DISTINGUISHED CONTEMPORARIES, chiefly from the Atterbury and Stuart Papers. By FOLKESTONE WILLIAMS.

Just published, in Two thick Volumes, demy 8vo., price £1. 12s.,

LIVES OF THE ENGLISH CARDINALS, from NICHOLAS BREAK-SPEAR (Pope Adrian IV.) to THOMAS WOLSEY, Cardinal Legate. Including Historical Notices of the Papal Court. By FOLKESTONE WILLIAMS, Author of "Court and Times of James I.," "Court and Times of Charles I.," "Memoirs of Sophia Dorothea," &c.

Scarcely one adequate biography exists in print of "the Princes of the Church" of English birth; and when they are named collectively by their own countrymen, or foreign writers, they are briefly catalogued—frequently with doubtful incidents and questionable dates; nevertheless, the majority attained the highest honours, spiritual and temporal, and were engaged in some of the most important transactions in European history. It has, therefore, been considered that an acceptable service might be rendered to students by collecting the trustworthy details of Bale, Pits, Leland, Godwin, Tanner, Dagdale, and similar explorers in the same field of inquiry, adding such notices as may be gathered from the annals of the popes and cardinals, —Baronius, Ciaconius, Aubrey, Spelman, &c.; from the numerous monkish chroniclers, from Hemmingford to Jocelin de Brakelonde, as well as from contemporary correspondence; and combining with them new facts from the researches of modern historians, such as Pauli, Neander, Dollinger, Ranke, Cardella, Sismondi, Guizot, Lingard, Milman, Brewer, Giles, &c., &c.

Whilst tracing the development of the papal system, care has been taken to exhibit its influence upon society, especially at Rome, Avignon, or wherever the Pontifical Court resided. As members of what may be called the Privy Council of the Pope, each of the English cardinals who chose to remain at the seat of government assisted in its administration. Many were employed as diplomatists, or took a prominent part in the great councils, called from time to time to remedy evils then afflicting
the Holy See; almost all were members of the hierarchy, in one or other of the principal branches of the Roman Apostolic Church, and not a few possessed almost unlimited authority at home in secular employments.

by permission, from the French of A. FREDERIC OZANAM, late Professor of Foreign Literature to the Faculty

"Mr. Glyn's translation from Ozanam deserves high praise, and will, we hope, be cordially welcomed."
—The Month.

"M. Ozanam's work, when not warped by ecclesiastical assumptions, is a valuable repository of facts and ob-

THORNTON, Esq. Containing a copious Glossary of Indian Terms, and a complete Chronological Index of

"Mr. Thornton is master of a style of great perspi-cuity and vigour, always interesting, and frequently rising into eloquence. His power of painting character and of bringing before the eye of the reader the events which he relates, is remarkable; and if the knowledge of India can be made popular, we should say his is the pen to effect it."—Times.

increased by a popular and amusing narrative."—*Edin-

THE HISTORY OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA from the Appointment of Lord Hardinge to the Death of Lord Canning. By LIONEL JAMES TROTTER, late 2nd Bengal Fusiliers.

The First Volume of this History embraces the period from Lord Hardinge's appointment, in 1844, to the re-irement of the Marquis Dalhousie, in 1856.
The Second Volume commences with the arrival of Lord Canning in India, in 1858, and closes with his Lordship's death, in 1862. This being the most eventful period in the annals of the East India Company, including the Mutiny, great pains has been taken in its narration.

In One Vol., 8vo., pp. 1015, with Map, price £1. 1s.,

A GAZETTEER OF INDIA, Compiled chiefly from the Records at the India Office. By EDWARD THORNTON, Esq.

The chief objects in view in compiling this Gazetteer are:—
1st. To fix the relative position of the various cities, towns, and villages, with as much precision as possible, and to exhibit with the greatest practical brevity all that is known respecting them; and,
2nd. To note the various countries, provinces, or territorial divisions, and to describe the physical characteristics of each, together with their statistical, social, and political circumstances.

To these are added minute descriptions of the principal rivers and chains of mountains; thus presenting to the reader, within a brief compass, a mass of information which cannot otherwise be obtained, except from a multiplicity of volumes and manuscript records. The work, in short, may be regarded as an epitome of all that has been written and published respecting the territories under the government or political superintendence of the British power in India.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, May 15; Agra and Calcutta, May 11; Madras, May 10.

With the hot season in India the reign of dulness has once more set in. Shere Ali has already receded into the political background, and no other celebrity seemed likely to take his place. Sir R. Temple is already in England. Lord Mayo had not yet met his Legislative Council at Simlah. Sir Seymour Fitzgerald was taking his ease at Mahableshtar, and from Madras we hear nothing about the movements of Lord Napier. Even from Afghanistan the news is generally peaceful. Nobody now believes in the story of Azim Khan's march on Herat at the head of forty, or even four thousand men. The force under Shah Nawaz Khan has dwindled—in common report—to 1,200, and it seems quite certain that that hereditary foe of the Barakzai princes has had no aid from Persia in his designs on the fortress of which his father was once governor. No troops had moved out of Kabul towards Turkistan, possibly because the Ameer of Badakshan, as reported in our last number, was raising troops himself for the pacification of that province.

LORD MAYO, however, is not idle. In addition to other duties, he is said to have taken the Department of Public Works under his special supervision. His work in that direction will not be light, if all accounts of the extravagance and blundering in the department be near the truth. With this fresh business on his hands it was hardly to be expected that his lordship would also take over charge of Sir R. Temple's department, as Sir Richard wanted him to do. That part of the work is reserved for Mr. Stansfeld, whose administrative experience will be supplemented by the acknowledged ability of his financial secretary, Mr. R. B. Chapman.

PERHAPS the most important news received by the last mail is that which, to a certain class of humanitarians, will sound the most disagreeable. The Emperor of China has just issued a proclamation forbidding, under heavy penalties, the cultivation of opium in any part of his dominions. Thereupon the Indian Government lost no time in calling upon the Bengal Government to consider forthwith the propriety of making a large addition to the area of opium cultivation in Bengal. Mr. Grey will no doubt act upon the suggestion, with a readiness sorely displeasing to those philanthropists who denounce the indulgence in any form of stimulant or narcotic as utterly immoral, and who believe that opium is ruining the Chinese even faster than alcohol and tobacco are ruining ourselves. In India however the financial charms of the poppy are enhanced by a well-founded belief in its general harmlessness and a pretty wide experience of its medicinal virtues. The temperate use of opium in the East is no more hurtful than the temperate use of beer and wine in the West. In fact, one might almost say that it is far less hurtful, as it prevents or alleviates some of the diseases most prevalent in warm climates.

INDIAN cookery is not to be despised, as most of our readers are probably aware. How a dirty-looking bawachi contrives to turn you out a capital dinner with raw materials of the poorest, and utensils of the simplest kind, is a mystery which very few English cooks could ever fathom. And, in another sense, it is a mystery which no English housewife in India should ever attempt to fathom, under the penalty of losing her appetite for the remainder of her Indian sojourn. Into the secrets of an Indian cook-house none but the strongest stomachs can pry with impunity. Too nice a curiosity, so fatal to the enjoyment of many good things, is peculiarly fatal to the enjoyment of a good dinner, in other countries besides India. Most old Indians could cap our remarks with an illustration to the point. But we doubt if the following story, taken from the Madras Times, could easily be surpassed in its own line:—

In a certain regimental mess, in which the bachelor dining members paid little attention to the dispositions of the cook-room, an officer, by good or ill fortune, conceived the desire to inspect the culinary arrangements of the kitchen. What did he behold? Upon the centre of the floor a vast round of beef for that day's dinner. Seated on the beef a little black boy—as the vulgar song says “as naked as Venus,” and kicking his little heels in mid air. The intruder was horrified. Not so the cook, who said proudly “my son, saar!” Then with a grin, for he was a facetious Bobabee, “he make beef nice and tender for gentlemen.”

SOME time ago a question was asked in the House of Commons touching the imprisonment in an island fortress of one Sidi Abdurrahman, who claimed to be the rightful Nawab of Junjeera, a small principality on the western coast of Bombay. Whatever was the real character of his dungeon, certain it is that he has made his way out of it, and gone off to Mahableshtar in hopes of inducing Sir Seymour Fitzgerald to do something or another in his behalf.

SIR DONALD MACLEOD's short visit to Simlah is now believed to have had no connection with the Punjab Tenancy Act. Lord Mayo doubtless wanted to consult him on the general question of affairs in the Punjab. People are already speculating on Sir Donald's probable successor. It is even asserted that the post was offered to Sir R. Temple, whose ambition led him to decline anything less than a full governorship. The story however seems to us more characteristic of the weather and the popular view of Sir R. Temple than it can be true. Even his ambition might be satisfied with a lieutenant-governorship.

WE are glad to see that the Secretary of State for India has shown a high appreciation of Mr. W. Hunter's services to Indian archæology. His Grace has readily sanctioned the late Viceroy's proposal to bestow £2,000 on the author of the "Annals of Rural Bengal" and the "Dictionary of the Non-Aryan Languages of India and High Asia," as works in which Mr. Hunter "has supplied a most valuable contribution to ethnological and philological science, and has reflected honour on the service of which he is a member." As this journal was one of the first in this country to point out Mr. Hunter's merits, we need hardly express our approval of the liberal treatment he has received from his superiors. But "envy doth merit like its shade pursue," and Mr. Hunter may set off these marks of official sympathy against the disparaging criticisms of the Calcutta Review and other detractors in India. Whether he knew much or nothing of Greek in 1861, whether he cut a good or an indifferent figure in the Civil Service examinations, it is certain that he has produced two works which place him in the foremost rank of historical and philological students, and which have already enlisted a large amount of public interest in the future of the Non-Aryan races in India. Like many other able men, he has benefited largely by the labours of his predecessors in the same field, but the modesty with which he acknowledged his debt to Mr. Bryan Hodgson, for example, ought to have saved him from unfair disparagement and groundless misrepresentation.

THE Government of the North-West Provinces has just issued a memorandum, bristling with sharp comments on the neglected state of the roads and public buildings in Ajmere and Mairwarra, and insisting that Ajmere should be made a model for the rest of Rajpootana. Colonel Keatinge, on his part, is doing his best to encourage progress in the native states. One of his latest reforms is the substitution of Hindi for Urdu as the official language of the country. The use of the Urdu since the days of Akbar has led to the carrying on of all official correspondence through Moonshies, not one Rajpoot chief in a thousand being able to read an almost foreign language written in a foreign character. The Gazette in English and Hindi, established by Colonel Keatinge a few months ago, is said to be becoming "a power for good in Rajpootana." It is read at all the native courts and by most of the Thakoors, whose great ambition seems to lie in seeing their names favourably mentioned in print. One prince, hitherto remarkable for administrative indolence, lately offered, we are told, to undertake some public works, if his name might only be mentioned in the Gazette as those of the Jeypore and Khetri Rajahs had been.

THERE is a rumour afloat in India that the highest furlough pay for civil servants is to be reduced from £1,200 to £1,000, on the plea that the present rate tempts civilians to linger on in the service instead of retiring betimes. We are inclined to look on this story as quite unfounded. It would in the first place be a needlessly vexatious act thus to alter the new furlough rules so soon after they have been issued, and in the second, we must remember that the highest furlough pay in the army is also £1,200. If the pay of the civil service were to be cut down, would it not provoke a cry of just resentment at the unfair preference displayed towards the army?

THE pleasure expressed in India at the success of so many native candidates for the Civil Service will be not a little damped by the further news that two out of the four have since been rejected on the score of age. It seems that according to the register of the Calcutta University these two unfortunates were older than the age prescribed, although the evidence of their private horoscopes and other documents told entirely the other way. We believe that a youth entering an Indian College is put down or puts himself down as fourteen, for instance, when he may be no more than thirteen and one month. On the other hand it might be pleaded that anyone could tamper with his own horoscope, and that a public register is the only trustworthy guide. Be that as it may, Sir Edward Ryan and his colleagues have very unwillingly taken a step which is sure to arouse much outcry among the natives of Bengal. Gladly as those would have strained a point in favour of young men who have made their way to England in spite of strong social, and class prejudices, and of remonstrances, bitter or affectionate, on the part of kindred and friends—one of them had to steal away like a thief—they have found themselves barred from any milder alternative than a strict adherence to established rule. Still, if there was any real uncertainty about the case of these poor fellows, no one surely, except their defeated rivals would have quarrelled with the Commissioners for giving them the full benefit of the doubt. Anyhow something should at once be done to ensure perfect accuracy on a point of so much consequence as that of age in the registers of all schools and colleges in India.

MR. COOPER, the indomitable explorer of Western China, read an account of his late travels before a meeting of the Bengal Asiatic Society. Of course he found in Sze-Chuen the garden of Central Asia; each traveller's newest discovery is sure to be a garden. Not quite equally of course, that province offered a fine field for the cultivation of opium. Two or three gentlemen in turn then made friendly efforts to dissuade Mr. Cooper from the dangerous journey he proposed taking by the north of Assam. They even suggested an alternative route or two, but Mr. Cooper proved intractable, declared he had "a mission to perform," and said enough to turn the previous words of warning into admiring cheers and farewell blessings.

IN Oman matters are still unsettled in several ways. Azanbin Ghez is said to be dreading an attack from a rival who is said to enjoy the support of the Sultan of Zanzibar, who is still recalcitrant about the tribute owed by him to the Imam of Muscat. The Sultan indeed was on the point of sending a mission on that subject to Bombay, which will probably fare no better than his late mission to this country. Again, the Wahabees of Oman seem bent on getting rid of their Hindu neighbours, who being British subjects must be protected. The Times of India proposes that we should bargain with Persia for a port in the Gulf, as a means of keeping order easily and encouraging our own trade.

CHOLERA has reappeared in the 58th Foot at Allahabad, and broken out among the troops at Seetapore. Kurnool, on the Madras side, has been abandoned as a military station, owing to its unhealthiness.

THE LATE LORD BROUGHTON.

THE death of the first and last Lord Broughton at a ripe old age leaves no particular mark on the minds of the present generation. Obituary notices tell us all about the boroughs for which he sat as Sir John Hobhouse, and are lavish of small details concerning his family connections, his colonelcy in the Militia, and his partnership in the firm of Whitbread and Co. They remind us briefly of his intimacy with Lord Byron, of the imprisonment that greeted the publication of his "Letters to an Englishman," and of his official career as President of the Board of Control in two administrations. He never came to the front as a statesman, and his literary achievements live for us only in the notes to the fourth canto of "Childe Harold." And yet at more than one stage of his career he enjoyed a certain amount of the fame that springs from passing circumstances. Byron's friendship reflected a certain lustre on its object. His own ardent liberalism in the dark days of 1819 carried him from a cell in Newgate to the head of the poll in Westminster. His political services secured him the Presidency of the Board of Control under Lord Melbourne, and in that capacity he earned an unenviable kind of immortality as the author of the Afghan war. To Anglo-Indians he is chiefly interesting from this point of view. Thirty years ago it was thought a wise move to counteract Russian intrigue by one of the most wanton attacks on a nation's independence that statesmen in a panic ever devised. In spite of Sir A. Burnes, of the Court of Directors, of Lord Auckland himself, the President of the Board of Control decreed that an English army should bear back the worthless Shah Sujah to the throne from which a far abler, and for us more serviceable prince had long since ousted him with the consent of nearly all Afghanistan. Of the poetic Nemesis which rewarded that act of supreme immorality the present generation has learned enough in the eloquent pages of Mr. Kaye. But not till a few years ago did Lord Broughton settle the question of real responsibility for that act by declaring in the Upper House that he, in fact, and not any other, was the author of the Afghan war. Between him and Lord Palmerston, at any rate, will rest the full credit, such as it was, of the move which first shook our Indian prestige and saddled India with a heavy debt.

THE LEGALITY OF THE BONUS SYSTEM.

THE actual legality of the Regimental Bonus System in the Indian Army of other days has been so often called in question, not to say bluntly denied, that many of our readers will feel thankful for the light thrown on that subject by the pamphlet now before us.* It is a necessary appendix to the one we noticed a short time ago. Without this additional evidence the claims now advanced by more than a hundred officers to compensation for their forfeit bonuses would hardly from the legal point of view be deemed complete, however strong a case can be made out for them from the moral side. In a question of this sort no weapon of legitimate warfare should come amiss to those who attack a position held by an enemy strong in numbers and thoroughly equipped with every means of defence, except perhaps the consciousness of fighting in a good cause. If the claimants of compensation can show the legality of the system for whose abolition they seek to be reimbursed, they will have gone far to undermine the only tenable grounds of resistance to their claims. Let them convince their friends in Parliament that the law also is on their side, is not at any rate against them, and they will hardly appeal in vain to the justice of their countrymen. The gentlemen in the India Office would then no longer be restrained from evincing a natural sympathy with the just grievances of their former and present servants.

How then stands the legal part of the case between the contending parties? Was the Bonus System legal or was it not? The popular impression, founded on Sir Charles Wood's hasty inference from certain judgments in the Courts of Exchequer and Queen's Bench, rests on the assumption that it was not. And yet, as we find from the legal opinions republished in this pamphlet, nothing could well be more at variance with the facts. Take, for instance, the case of Græme v. Wroughton, as decided on the 4th of June, 1855. Discussing this case at great length and with the fairness of an umpire, in 1865, Mr. Rathborne, of the Middle Temple, is "clearly of opinion that there was nothing in the decision in that case whatever to show that the Bonus System, as followed in the Indian army, was illegal." In a later opinion on the same point Mr. Rolt, Q.C., afterwards Sir John Rolt, Attorney-General to the late Government, and Mr. H. James, now Queen's Counsel, "incline to be of opinion that if an opportunity occurs for reviewing the decision of the Court of Exchequer, the dicta in the judgment referred to will not be concurred in, and that the Bonus System will be held to be legal." These gentlemen go yet further, saying that "even to the extent to which the case determines the question involved, we have grave doubts whether it would on further consideration be held to be good law."

On this latter point, however, we need not specially insist. We are even willing to allow that Baron Martin could have decided no otherwise than he did on the question argued before him. In a Court of Equity the issue might have been different; but as sitting in a Court of Common Law, his lordship may have been debarred by the rules of Court from deciding the case on any other pleas than those brought forward on either side. Be that as it may, it was the plaintiff's counsel who ensured his client's failure by resting his case on narrow technical issues, instead of standing on the broad ground afterwards taken by Mr. Rathborne, with the ultimate approval of Sir John Rolt. The defendant's counsel had pleaded, in excuse of his client's breach of faith, that the agreement made with the plaintiff was a corrupt and illegal covenant according to a certain statute of George III., which forbids the entering into a "corrupt bargain" for the possession or the surrender of any public office under Crown or Company. What was the plaintiff's answer, as furnished by his counsel? The agreement, he averred, was not unlawful, because the statute was aimed at direct agreements between the holder and patron of an office, not at agreements between either holder or patron and a third party. In this case, moreover, the major who got the bonus could not, it was pleaded, be said to have given up his office for money, because, though ceasing to be a regimental major, he continued to be a major in the army.

At the rejection of pleas so transparently quibbled who can be surprised? Naturally enough the Court decided that an illegal agreement was none the less illegal for the intervention of a third party, and that Major Grant had illegally sold his office of regimental major, whatever rank he might retain in the service. But to draw from such a verdict conclusions fatal to the claims now put forward would be simply absurd. In that particular instance a good cause was stupidly defended—that is all. The action was tried on one of those false issues so dear to lawyers of a certain class, and the result of course was what any rational being might have expected. We can hardly quarrel with Baron Martin for showing no wider converseance with the facts of the case than did the barristers and attorneys who were paid to get it up in proper form. But we may safely challenge anyone to prove that Baron Martin's ruling has anything whatever to do with the real bearings of the case so suicidally prepared for his perspiration. What every officer concerned in the present business would most strenuously insist upon, is exactly what Messrs. James and Rathborne and Sir J. Rolt concur in pointing out—namely, that nothing of the nature of a "corrupt agreement" can be predicated of the system under which Indian officers were wont to retire with a bonus in addition to the pension of their rank. The Bonus System, remarks Mr. Rathborne, "so far from being a corrupt bargaining or contracting for the giving up of an office such as the Act contemplates, was a system that had been for nearly thirty years in full and open operation, with the entire sanction of the constituted authorities"—namely, the Court of Directors, the Board of Control, and the Indian Government in India; and "this sanction had been avowedly given to it on grounds of the highest public policy—namely, the conducing to the contentment of the officers of the Army of India, and to the efficiency of that Army." To the same effect write Messrs. Rolt and James—"In this case also what has occurred has been expressly sanctioned by the Board of Directors and by the Governor-general of India. We presume that in their judgment no illegal act has been committed, and certainly their approval negatives all idea of the transaction having been corrupt."

That the Bonus System was formally authorised by the Court of Directors nobody in these days would think of disputing. But, as Mr. Rathbone takes care to remind us, all despatches sent out from the India House were "undoubtedly written and sent to India, in concurrence with and under the sanction and approval" of her Majesty's representative at the Board of Control, in compliance with the provisions of Act 33, George III. cap. 52. Thus the Bonus System bore the threefold sanction of the Crown, the Company, and the Indian Government which published the despatch. It represented no "private unauthenticated agreement," like that which Lord Loughborough had declared invalid in the case of Parsons v. Thompson; but was an arrangement stamped by the approval of all the authorities empowered by law to legislate for her Majesty's Indian dominions. That it was not "contrary to public policy" the directors themselves declared with much emphasis in the despatch of September, 1837. But perhaps it was contrary to the laws of England, especially to that Act which forbade the buying and selling of public offices? Even this thrust however is easily parried. It was expressly provided by a later Act of the 49th George III.—an Act for the further prevention of the sale and brokerage of offices—that nothing in that Act should extend to "any purchases, sales, or exchanges of commissions in his Majesty's forces, under regulations made or to be made by his Majesty." Now, as every Indian officer held a commission from the Crown, and as the bonus system was ~~expressly~~ recognised by a Minister of the Crown, does it not seem preposterous to talk of excluding one portion of her Majesty's forces from the benefits of a provision clearly applicable to all alike? On what principle of fair play can the authorised sale of commissions by Queen's officers be placed on a different footing from the authorised bestowal of a retiring bonus on a Company's officer? The provision in question, be it noted, concerns not only the present, but the future. It speaks of "regulations made or to be made by his Majesty," and we know that in 1837 the bonus system did receive its formal sanction from "her Majesty's Commissioners for the affairs of India." In every way therefore it is utterly absurd to argue that the bonus system comes under the head of corrupt bargaining, or falls out of the category of transactions expressly legalised by the Act above quoted.

It might even be argued, as Sir J. Rolt puts it, that "neither in letter nor in spirit does the retiring officer [in the old Indian Service] sell or transfer his commission," and that the bonus received "is more in the nature of a superannuation allowance than the price of a sale." But that is a nicety which lawyers may, in this instance, be safely left to consider for themselves. We have shown that the case of the Indian officers stands on the broader and simpler ground of a common legality with the practices authorised in the Queen's army. That is a conclusion from which no amount of hair-splitting ought to be allowed to distract the attention of persons anxious to reach the truth of the whole question.

THE REJECTED RETIRING SCHEME. TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—I have read the despatch of the Secretary of State for India regarding the retiring schemes proposed by the Indian Government in your paper of the 5th ult., as well as your leading article on the subject, and I was at first inclined to take your view of the case; on examining it more closely, however, I find that the assertion made by the Secretary of State (paragraphs 31 and 35), that there would be an absolute loss if the proposition made by the Indian Government were carried out, is utterly unfounded, even if it were necessary in every case of retirement to make a new appointment to the Staff Corps.

This will be most plainly shown by taking the case of a lieutenant-colonel recently promoted, and showing for periods of six years his pay if remaining in the service, or his pension and the pay of his successor if he retires on increased rate of pension and bonus.

	Retiring on Pension and Bonus for six years.	Remaining in the Service.
Pension £515 per annum	£3,090
Bonus	1,000
Lieutenant's pay for six years	1,800
Saving to Government	62
	£5,952	Six years pay as lieutenant-colonel
		£5,952
AFTER TWELVE YEARS.
Pension	£6,180	Ten years pay as lieutenant-colonel
Bonus	1,000	£9,920
Lieutenant's pay	3,600	Two years full colonel's allowance
Saving to Government	1,380	2,240
	£12,160	£12,160
AFTER EIGHTEEN YEARS.
Pension	£9,270	Ten years pay as lieutenant-colonel
Bonus	1,000	£9,920
Lieutenant's pay, twelve years	3,600	Eight years colonel's allowance
Captain's pay, six years	2,692	8,960
Saving	2,318
	£18,880	£18,880
AFTER TWENTY-FOUR YEARS.
Pension	£12,360	Ten years pay as lieutenant-colonel
Bonus	1,000	£9,920
Lieutenant	3,600	Fourteen years colonel's allowance
Captain	3,590	15,680
Major	3,072
Saving	1,978
	£25,600	£25,600

This case has been selected purposely as the most unfavourable that could occur, but the saving to Government would be greater in the case of an officer retiring when only entitled to major's pension on the one hand, or when nearer to lieutenant-colonel's allowances on the other.

From the list of unemployed officers (paragraph 21) we learn that of 320, 200 only are in any way unfit for employment, leaving 120 officers fit to hold any appointment. Hence it would be unnecessary to appoint officers to the Staff Corps to fill vacancies to at least that number, and the difference between pension and pay would so far be clear saving. The unemployed list does not appear to include officers in England on leave, of whom, especially in the higher ranks, the greater part have passed the examination in some native language, and are eligible. These officers will require employment on their return to India.

The Secretary of State also makes no account of the officers who have not passed the examinations, but are well fitted in other respects, and who are ordered in Paragraph 54 of his despatch to be employed. If the 200 extra pensions and bonuses were given, there would be in all probability more than a sufficient number of officers available to replace those induced to retire.

That there are more officers than are required under the new organisation no one who has been lately in India can feel any doubt. The mere fact of appointing them to regiments or other duties does not render them more necessary to the service, nor does it lessen the cost of the Staff Corps.

Whether it would be a wise measure to give a bonus in excess of the increased pension is a matter of doubt, as the latter measure might suffice to induce a sufficient number of officers to retire; and to pay so large a sum as £200,000 at the onset would prevent that immediate saving which would be desirable; whilst, if 150 lieutenant-colonels and 50 majors were induced to retire on £150 to £175 a-year in excess of their ordinary pensions, the saving would be very considerable and immediate in its results.

That the present despatch will have the effect of settling the question or relieving the feeling of restlessness and discontent alluded to in paragraph forty-five, may well be doubted when a simple calculation shows that the Secretary of State for India has taken a mistaken view of the case. I feel sure that the body of Indian officers will still believe, as I do, that in the course of a year or two, when the increased cost of the staff corps begins to be felt, something must be done to reduce it.—Hoping you will insert this letter or give the subject your attention, I am, Sir, yours, &c., AN INDIAN OFFICER.

COMPENSATION FOR REGIMENTAL BONUS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—As a supplement to my letter published in your last issue, I now send you the scale known as the "Delhi Scale," which was in general use previous to the amalgamation, showing what sum an officer received from his regiment on retirement; the several amounts are not large, but I feel sure they would be gladly accepted (if offered) by many officers of high rank and standing in the Staff Corps, while the revival of the old regimental purchase system would not only allay the feeling of injustice under which all officers are now smarting, who have been cruelly deprived of those "expectations," which, in the words of Lord Derby, they had had secured to them by the Parliamentary guarantee, but what the Government no doubt consider of as much importance, the adoption of such a scheme would, at a comparatively trifling outlay, greatly relieve "the financial" pressure which is fast approaching, and would in no way compromise the declaration of Sir Charles Wood, to which the Duke of Argyll adverts in paragraph 46 of his despatch:—

OLD "DELHI SCALE."

No.	Rank.	Amount to be paid to an Officer selling out, at 2s. per rupee.	Remarks.
1	Major	£3,000 0 0	I have given below the case of a senior captain retiring when his major was junior on the list, but as on each line step (in this position) occasioning an advance to his major on the gradation list, he would be entitled to £15, this amount would have to be added to gratuity for each line step so obtained.
1st	Captain	1,800 0 0
3rd	"	1,305 0 0
4th	"	1,176 0 0

To give another instance of the benefit derivable to Government from such a scheme, say that a lieutenant-colonel, or possibly a colonel in the Staff Corps, who is senior captain only in the cadre of his old regiment (with his regimental major just promoted) wishes to retire on his pension, he would get some £360 as pension, plus the sum (in the scale) corresponding to his position in the cadre, viz., £1,800; and, as the same officer on the effective list would be drawing above £1,000 a-year (probably without employment), the saving to Government in each of such cases would be about £600 per annum. When this is considered, with the fact that the revival of the old regimental gratuities on the above scale as compensation for the loss of regimental purchase funds would be only doing an act of justice, and satisfying all parties at a trifling cost, the measure is surely worth considering.—Yours,

JUSTICE AND EXPEDIENCY.

DISESTABLISHMENT OF THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.

The Pioneer thinks that, as the Catholic Emancipation of 1829 was the passing bell of Protestant ascendancy in Ireland, in like manner the death knell of the Indian Civil Service will perhaps turn out to have been sounded by the measures of 1858 (21st and 22nd Vic., cap. 106,) when her Majesty in Parliament assumed for the British nation the direct management of British India, and reduced that previously anomalous dependency to an orderly orbit in the harmony of the imperial kosmos—for the Civil Service up to that time had been what it could be again no more. Native administrators had been employed in the dawn of our power; for the Company was above all things commercial. But when it was found that the natives could not govern, and that misgovernment meant short produce and bad dividends, it became necessary to sweep them away. The next step was to create a separate European machinery for introducing among the people of India that amount of protection to life and property without which the agriculturist would not raise the wealth of the soil, nor the merchant distribute that wealth and its equivalents. Then began that curious mixture of nepotism and enthusiasm which, as Mr. Bright says, was bred in corruption, but which nevertheless bore fruit in the deeds of heroes—which might be characterised as a Money-Lushington combination pour exploiter le pays, but might with equal justice be described as a patriotic contribution by retired public servants to the beloved land of their adoption; a passing of their sons through the fire, not to Moloch but to duty. The young men set apart for Indian employment were often born in India; they were reared, one may say, on curry and rice; they passed their boyhood at Cheltenham or in Portland-place, among models of the Taj or stuffed tigers, in houses where "Directors" and "Chairs" were the guests of honour, and where Ram-mohun Roy or Dwarkanath Tagore was occasionally a visitor. On reaching the age of seventeen or eighteen they went to Haileybury, as a matter of course, with all the varied possibilities of their time of life undetected and unsifted—a few to study, the majority to haunt billiard-rooms and pot-houses, to make love to tradesmen's daughters, or to poach hares in the squire's hedgerows—but all, in every class, always to have their minds fixed on India, and to be imbibing influences derived from the East. Arrived in India, they went in the first instance to some old friend's house, where the civilian was met perhaps by the old bearer that had nursed him in long clothes; and when he got "through College" (which he was a long time doing) he went up-country to the old district where his father's name was a household word. We are describing a system, not defending one. We do not think that the state of things we have been sketching was ever perfect; and we would not, if we could, restore it now. It gave India a precious lot of hard bargains, and a small residuum of men of very great merit; but, whatever it did else, it was natural, spontaneous, and "understanded of the people." And now it is gone, like the Heptarchy, the feudal system, or the neige d'autan. What we have in its place is a mere transition. The monopoly of employment created by the Court of Directors to form a provision for their friends and relations has been kept up as a prize for the temptation of ambitious schoolboys. But, at the same time, that Proteus "Dowb" has been forcing the fence at fifty different points. "Justice to the Staff Corps," "India for the Indians," "The Wrongs of the Uncovenanted,"—these are some of the better known and juster excuses which have been found for enlarging the sphere of selection beyond the circle of Wallahism. Outsiders have since been given to those who were once content to feed on the crumbs that fell from the children's table.

A LOCAL ARMY FOR INDIA.

The Times of India thinks it is high time that this question of a local European force for India, re-opened by the home press, should be taken up warmly in every quarter. We look upon it as one of the important changes that must be brought about soon, along with the abolition of the staff corps, and the re-establishment of the regimental system of organisation. The staff corps will fall, because we cannot afford to pay for it, and because its constitution and rules of promotion give us a flood of officers of the higher grades whom we cannot employ, and whom, if we don't keep in India, we must bribe to get out of it. A local European force will be created, because public opinion will demand it; because, when the reform of our Imperial army organisation, generally insisted upon at home, is completed, and soldiers will only enlist for short periods, it will be practically impossible to garrison India with Imperial troops; because the conviction is growing that England may somehow or other be drawn against her will into a Continental war, and that she must have all her available troops mobilised at home, not scattered over the face of the globe. And we shall return to the orthodox system of officering regiments regimentally; because, in default of the present Staff Corps system—which we will suppose to have become a tale of the past, a warning for the future—there is no other recognised among civilised nations, none so agreeable to English ideas and history, none so practically effective, none so economical; and because, if we have it, we shall be able to rear up a real veritable Staff Corps, properly so called, a body of duly qualified Staff officers, specially marked out by their attainments for Staff employ of proportions that shall bear something like a just ratio to the rest of the army, and on principles of promotion that will not lead us to a dead lock such as we now bemoan. How this may be effected we propose to demonstrate before long. These are our anticipations, and recommendations; and we shall not cease to urge them upon the attention of the public, for we honestly believe them to be for the good of the military service of India, and, through it, of India itself.

OVER-LEGISLATION.

The Times of India admits that there was some truth in Mr. Maine's line of defence against the charge of over-legislation. He proves that much of what has been done was unavoidable; but the most he shows is that the haste and pressure of recent legislation is a necessary evil, not that it is not an evil, still less as the Pall Mall writer puts it, that it is a good to be sought after and continued. We take it that the duty of the legislator is to wait upon public opinion, not to precede it, and that he is the most felicitous statesman who so exactly hits the right moment for legislation that he seems to lead when in fact he follows, and who knows when and how to yield before the concession has lost all appearance of grace. The latter of these contingencies is not likely to press upon the Indian statesman for many years to come. It is the former which concerns him; and we hold that legislating for an idea—a desire to bring up the Indian Statute Book to the standard of that of Great Britain, to assimilate the laws of the nations to our own as far and as fast as may be to introduce change upon change, and to pile Act upon Act, is altogether to proceed upon a mistaken whim. The natives feel themselves harassed and in a whirl. There are abundant reasons for asserting that they regard the racing pace of recent legislation as the pace that kills; and for our own part we are quite sure that it is far to good to last. To be sure, if the curtain is for a moment lifted, and a native prince like Scindiah reveals to us the state of native opinion upon our legislation, the Pall Mall writer and others like him can pooh-pooh such revelations, and tell us that the natives are silly fellows, and that if they do not like our measures they ought to like them. Fortunati, sua si bona norint, as Sir John Lawrence would say; but the truth is we cannot afford thus haughtily, and in the blindness of our own pride, to ignore the opinion of the people of the country. They are becoming daily more and more capable of criticising our actions. We are teaching the elephant the consciousness of its own strength; and at this moment there is perhaps no appointment in India more important than that of the legislative member of the Supreme Council, in whose hands, at this crisis of our transition state, are grasped the issues of permanent good or ill according as the measures which he advises are sound or the contrary. Spick and span new doctrinaires from England, without any knowledge of the people for whom they come out to legislate, may produce nothing but unmitigated evil. At all events, we trust that let whoever may be sent among us, he may be fully instructed at the India-office, that what India now wants is rest, and not agitation; administration, and not legislation, which can possibly be deferred to a more convenient season.

RAILWAY TRAINS ON FIRE.—We hear (says the Mofussilite) that the passengers by the evening train, on the 4th, from Gazeabad to Umballa, had a most unpleasant time of it. The bedding of one caught fire, another woke up nearly suffocated by the smoke, and it is providential that some of the ladies were not burnt to death. The calls for the guard were most vociferous; fortunately he came to think something was wrong and had the train stopped, thereby giving the opportunity of extinguishing the many small fires from the sparks which might otherwise have burst into open flames.

THE CHIEF JUSTICE OF CALCUTTA.—Sir Barnes Peacock assisted Lord Canning in framing the celebrated Press Gagging Act in 1857. He may possibly be still of opinion that the public have no right to think, or at all events to express their thoughts publicly. But surely it is time for public men in India to disabuse their minds of this idea. It is not long ago that Mr. Gladstone declared that without the corrective influence of the press public men would live in a fool's paradise. It is really melancholy to find that, even with this influence, there are many estimable individuals who in this country occupy that position.—Madras Mail.

STATION TALK.

SIMLA, May 7.—This picturesque and pleasant place is beginning to look very lively. It is not "full," nor anything like full, but the leave season having commenced, numbers have dropped in, and there are very few houses which have not been engaged, though as yet not one half of the lessees have arrived. The weather, too, for at least two weeks past, has been beautiful—bracing, yet mild and sunshiny. There have, however, and within the last few days, been one or two cases of sunstroke. But if, ladies will go out in the middle of the day without parasol and with no better head-protection than the lace apology for a bonnet which is now the fashion, such accidents must be expected. The nights are cold, and the early morn and advanced evening chilly, but in the middle of the day the sun is quite powerful enough to render precaution against coup de soleil if not positively necessary, at least highly advisable. Sir Richard Temple stayed but a day here, and then left for Bombay, whence it may be presumed he has ere this embarked for England. During his absence the finances are not to be suffered "to take care of themselves." The Viceroy will not become his own Financial Minister, notwithstanding Sir Richard counted on his Excellency taking charge of the "current duties of my department during my absence in England." Mr. John Strachey is at present in charge of the finances, and that charge he will retain until, at any rate, Sir Richard Temple has returned. This is Lord Mayo's arrangement, and your correspondent ventures to think it is one in consequence of which Indian financial management will not suffer. The talked-of redistribution of duties amongst the ministers, i.e., the members of Council, has been carried out. The Viceroy will retain under his own immediate superintendence all the purely political and diplomatic work of the Foreign Department, assuming, in addition thereto, the ministerial control of the Public Works Department. Governors-General and Viceroys have hitherto almost invariably kept the policy and diplomacy of the Foreign Department in their own hands; but it is something new to hear of the head of the Government taking upon himself the burden of that rather unpicturesque quota of the aggregate of the duties which go to make up Indian administration, designated "public works." Lord Mayo, however, is said to be especially qualified for the task. However acquired, whether in Parliament or as the owner of extensive landed property, his lordship is understood to know more about railways, their construction, maintenance, and proper management, than the railway officials will find at all agreeable should they in any way lay themselves open to snub or censure. And, with respect to canals and other great public undertakings, a similar degree of viceregal intelligence is said to exist. All this, however, was to be looked for in a nobleman who, with estates of his own, has spent years in Parliament, and has had an administrative training at home. The very best results, it seems to your correspondent, are likely to result from the Viceroy thus practically identifying himself with the Department of Public Works. It will, at any rate, make the Secretary quite strong enough to overbear opposition to any internal reforms he may originate. And that there is ample room and scope for internal reform, is so almost axiomatic as to require no demonstration. Mr. John Strachey, besides the Finances, will have ministerial charge of what are styled the Internal Affairs of the Foreign Department—that is, of the administrative details of all non-regulation provinces. To Mr. Ellis has fallen the Home Department. It is possible, though not very probable, that there will be further changes. The Council is short of one member, the practical vacancy caused by Sir Richard Temple's leave to England not having been filled up.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

A CHANGE FOR THE BETTER.—The Mofussilite mentions with pleasure that the East Indian Railway trains are now keeping good time; but does not profess to be aware whether this improvement is due to the recent fillip administered by Lord Mayo.

CURIOUS CUSTOM.—Major W. J. Williamson, in one of his reports to the Commissioner of Cooch Behar, mentions that when a Garrow father is killed by a tiger—apparently a not uncommon mode in those parts of shuffling on the moral coil—the sons change their names, in order to throw the tiger off the scent of their identity, in case he should have a rooted hostility to the family.

THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNORSHIP OF THE PUNJAB.—The Central India Times asserts on "indisputable authority" that the Lieutenant-Governorship of the Punjab, about to become vacant on the retirement of Sir Donald Macleod at the close of the current year, was offered to Sir Richard Temple and declined by him. "He aspires," says our contemporary, "to the higher dignity of Governor of a Presidency. Sir Richard on the expiration of his leave will return and resume office as head of the Financial Department, and intends to retire after five years, should he not be so fortunate as to have an offer of the more exalted office in the interim."

TONK.—The Masaud Waziris continue their lawless practices. About six weeks ago they murdered a jemadar of the Nawab of Tonk. Still more lately they made an attack on a village in the Tonk Ilacqua, murdering two of the villagers and wounding four others.

EAST INDIA RAILWAY VOLUNTEERS.—The Bengal Government has, in accordance with special instructions received, conveyed to the officers of the East India Railway an expression of the Viceroy's satisfaction with the zeal they displayed in the formation of a volunteer corps, and of his cordial appreciation of the spirit in which they met the views of the Government in the matter.

SIMLA.—A Simla letter of the Mofussilite mentions that there are few if any houses now available, and that "The Mall" is becoming daily more densely thronged with visitors. This favourite sanitarium will be unusually crowded this year, in consequence of the railroad offering such facilities for the Meerut people to go there instead of Mussoorie and Nainee Tal, as they did before the line was opened.

SIR W. MORGAN.—A private letter informs us that Sir Walter Morgan left Simla lately far from well, and against medical advice, simply because he thought it his duty to be present, if possible, at the opening of the High Court. We will not be guilty of the impertinence of praise, but we must express our consciousness that it would be a misfortune for the North-West Provinces if the learned and able Chief Justice's health should fail.—Pioneer.

DARJEELING.—The Darjeeling Municipality has rejected the Simla system of conservancy in favour of a plan devised and about to be patented by Mr. Gilbert Hickey. This consists in carbonising all station refuse in retorts constructed for the purpose. With the gas produced he proposes to illuminate the station; while the refuse in the retorts will be most valuable manure, containing phosphates, sulphates, and carbonates of potash, soda, lime, magnesia and iron, and readily saleable, it is hoped, at two rupees a maund. The Lieutenant-Governor has sanctioned a grant of Rs. 400 for the purpose of giving the plan a fair trial.—Pioneer.

THE PESHAWUR RAILWAY.—Among the engineering difficulties to be overcome in connection with the construction of the Lahore and Peshawur Railway, the most formidable are the bridges over the Ravee, Jhelum, Sohan, Herat, Indus, and Chenab, especially the bridge over the last-named river. Both banks of the river Chenab are sandy, and the current constantly changing its bed, so much so, that it is said that only a few years ago this river ran under the town of Goojerat, from which it is now more than ten miles distant. It was computed by Colonel Alexander Taylor, of the Engineers, that for miles the left bank of the river would require masonry work to keep the river in its present course, and that the bridge would be a little short of three miles in length. The estimate for this gigantic structure, which, when completed, will be the largest bridge in the world, was a million sterling.

FIVE PER CENT. GOVERNMENT DEBENTURES.—With reference to the notification of 4th November, 1866, No. 11, and to the further notification No. 3,623 of the 21st December, 1868, the Governor-General in Council has directed that the term of the Five per Cent. Debentures of the issue of twenty lakhs, which fell due on the 4th of January, 1869, and were extended for a period of six months, to the 4th July, 1869, shall, at the option of holders, be further extended for one year, and shall bear interest for such extended term at the rate of 4½ per cent. In the event of payment in cash being demanded at any time after the 4th July, 1869, and before the 4th July, 1870, the debentures will be discharged with interest to the 3rd July, 1869, only, at the rate of 5 per cent. These debentures will be received at any time during the year of extended currency if tendered in payment of taxes and Government dues, and in such cases will carry interest from July 4, 1869, to the date of discharge at the rate of 4½ per cent.

ROBBERY OF THE MAILS.—A most daring robbery was committed on the mail-cart, which left Agra for Gwalior on the evening of the 27th or 28th ultimo. It appears that, when within a few miles of Dholepore, some twelve or fourteen men, armed with lathies, rushed upon it from either side of the road, and crippling the horses by striking them across the knees, felled the coachman, as also a European traveller, a Mr. Bourne, who was seated alongside of him—the bargeer, meanwhile, having bolted, escaped unhurt. The coachman received a very severe pounding, but the European got off with only a wound, though rather an ugly one, in the forehead, caused by a blow from a lathie. The ruffians then dragged the cart some distance from the road, and ransacked the contents, carrying away the baggy parcels and leaving the mails scattered over the plain. The European managed to make his way to the nearest police chokey, which was only about a mile from the spot. From this he was taken to the Dholepore dak bungalow, where the Rajah caused every attention to be paid him, and ultimately sent him on in his own conveyance to Morar. The coachman still lies in a precarious state in hospital at Agra. We are however glad to add that several of the robbers have been apprehended, amongst whom—probably, our readers will not be surprised to hear—are a discharged post-office coachman and a bargeer, and two burkundazes in the Rajah's service! Their trial is now being proceeded with in the Magistrate's Court at Agra.—Mofussilite, May 8.

SIR D. MACLEOD.—The Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab arrived at Simla on the 1st May. His visit, it is said, has no reference whatever to the reconsideration of the Punjab Tenancy Act.

EXECUTION OF A '57 REBEL.—The sentence of death passed on Ramtahul Singh, sepoy of the 17th Bengal Native Infantry, by Mr. H. G. Keene, Judge of Azimgurh, for the murder of Lieutenant C. W. Hutchinson, having been confirmed by the High Court, N. W. P., was carried into effect on the morning of the 29th April. With reference to the disposal of his body, it is strange that being a Hindoo he begged that the rites of sepulture by interment be performed, and that on no account was his corpse to be burnt, in accordance with the dictates of his religion. On being asked the reason, he said that he did not wish half of his body to become a prey for dogs and vultures. When he reached the scaffold, wishing the Hindoos the usual "ram ram," and the Mahomedans, "salaam," he mounted the ladder without assistance, and protesting his innocence to the last, was launched into eternity. A day previous to his execution Ramtahul Singh received a letter by post from some one signing himself "Akbar," who seemed to be over-anxious for the prisoner's family. The letter accused Ramtahul Singh of dilatoriness in not corresponding with Akbar since his arrest, and concluded with the cool advice, that should "hanging be in his kismet" he must not fail to urge on the Government to undertake the guardianship of his four children by demanding that some kind of provision be made for them.—Delhi Gazette.

THE AMEER OF KABUL.—The Ameer of Kabul is reported to have reached Jellalabad on the 26th of April. The marriage of the Ameer with the daughter of the late Wazeer Nizam Ood Dowla was, we learn from the Pioneer, celebrated on the night of the 27th ult. at Jellalabad. His Highness halted at Jellalabad for four days, and had frequent conferences with the Mullicks of the Khyber, who are very anxious to be accorded their whole allowances. The preliminary step to such a concession, as the Ameer rather naively remarked, was that they should abstain from robbery and other heinous offences. It is reported from Peshawur that the Ameer when he reached Jumrood found some 1,200 to 1,500 persons awaiting his arrival, with the hope of being allowed to profit by his escort through the Khyber Pass. The crowd consisted mainly of Hindoo and Mussulman traders, bent on trying their fortunes in Afghanistan. "This looks," remarks the Pioneer, "as if the class who are most alive to their own interest, and whose presence in a strange country would be to no advantage without the prospect of peace, expect great results from the recent meeting at Umballa. At all events it points to the fact of the Khyberies being less dominant than they were generally supposed to be two months ago. We believe that the Ameer raised no objections to being accompanied by the traders."

MILITARY.—We regret to learn from the Pioneer that cholera has reappeared in H.M.'s 58th Regiment at Allahabad, both in the wing occupying the Chatham Lines, and in that which lately returned to the new barracks. The Englishman remarks that "the matter deserves the more attention as there is no epidemic in the city, and the men employed in the railway works are healthy." "We only a short time back," writes the Lucknow Times, "announced the appearance of cholera in H.M.'s 1-11th Regiment, at Fyzabad, and now we regret to have to record its presence in the ranks of the Rifles at Seetapore, and in such a serious type as to have caused great alarm to the military authorities. We sincerely trust every exertion will be made to check the spreading of this dreadful disease." Brigadier-General H. Forster, Royal Artillery, is appointed to act on the Divisional Staff of the Army, during the absence of Major-General T. Tapp, C.B., A.D.C. to the Queen, proceeded to Europe. It is said that Major-General D. M. Stewart is about to proceed to Cashmere, and that he will visit Simla en route to England at the end of his trip. The changes consequent upon General Stewart's departure are not yet officially announced, but there is still every probability, says the Pioneer, that Colonel Sam Brown will obtain the Peshawur command, and Colonel D. M. Probyn replace the latter in the command of the Central India Horse.

CIVIL.—The Jubbulpore Chronicle hears that "Captain Lugard has declined the cantonment magistracy of this station, and that Lieutenant W. S. Brooke will obtain the officiating appointment."—We observe that Assistant-Surgeon J. Cleghorn, 10th N.I., has been appointed to the medical charge of the Political Agency at Mandalay.—"We understand," says the Pioneer, "that in the re-distribution of work among the members of Council, his Excellency the Viceroy has assumed the supervision of the Public Works Department, in addition, of course, to the more critical questions of the Foreign-office. The Hon. Mr. Strachey takes Finance in the absence of Sir Richard Temple, as well as a share in the work of the Foreign Department."—The total number of Civil servants of the Bengal Establishment in the Lower Provinces absent on furlough or special leave on the 31st March last was 42, the percentage on the number of civil servants employed there being 17.1; the number absent from the North-West Provinces was 30, or a percentage of 14.6; the number from the Punjab was 7, or a percentage of 12.9; from Oudh 2, or a percentage of 10; from the Central Provinces 4, or a percentage of 26.6; the grand total of absentees from the Bengal Establishment being 88, or a percentage of 15.6.—Lieutenant-Colonel Cox, now additional Commissioner of Peshawar, has been nominated to officiate for Mr. T. D. Forsyth, C.B., Commissioner of Jullundhur, during the six months' leave of absence to England granted to that officer. We have not heard yet who is appointed to succeed Colonel Cox at Peshawar.

AFGHANISTAN.—The latest intelligence from Afghanistan represents every province and division of that wild country as most desirous to evince its loyalty to Shere Ali. Every chief in Turkestan has declared for the Ameer; and with an enthusiasm almost sufficient to lead one to think they never espoused the cause of his fugitive brother and ere-while active rival, Azim; and that those trans-frontier chroniclers of contemporary events, who reported that they had done so, most foully libelled them. The solution of the problem is that there has come to prevail throughout the length and breadth of the dominion Dost Mahomed won for himself and successor a belief that Shere Ali has had pledged and promised him the support of the British against all assailants, and since 1842 there is no Afghan who does not shudder at the bare idea of a British force passing westward of the Suliman range. Shere Ali, as may be imagined, is not likely to undecieve his subjects as regards his standing assured of British support against all possible and impossible foes. A report has reached Simla, of the truth of which little doubt is entertained, that Ishak Khan, the son of Azim Khan, and who so exerted himself to keep his father's cause alive in Turkestan, has been captured on this side of the Oxus by the Ameer of Sheerabad. If this be true, and there is little doubt that it is, "a policy of assurance" on Ishak's life would now be worth its full value. Shere Ali will spare no enemy, and were he even inclined to display virtue, Yacoub, his young, able, and rather bloodthirsty son, would rob him of the chance of exercising that virtue. Azim Khan and Abdool Rahman are either in Seistan or close on the borders of that province. For the present they may be said to be beyond the grasp of Shere Ali; but should Persia refuse them shelter, it is not easy to see how—should they fail to regain the British frontier—they will be able to evade capture—and death!—Times of India Correspondent.—It is said that Mohammed Azim Khan and Abdool Rahman Khan have been captured at Herat. We cannot vouch for the truth of the rumour.—Indian Public Opinion, May 7.

MR. COOPER, THE EXPLORER.—At a meeting of the Bengal Asiatic Society, on Wednesday, the 12th May, Mr. Cooper gave an account of Western China. In an address of nearly an hour he described the rivers, trade-routes, modes of travelling, cities, commerce, and various other matters connected with Sze-Chuen. Its latitude he fixes at 30 20 North, and the longitude at 102 5 East, and describes the country as the garden of Central Asia. He also remarked forcibly on the increase of opium cultivation there. After he sat down, Dr. Anderson, who had accompanied the mission from Burneah, described what he had seen and heard of the countries north of Burneah. Colonel Thuillier warned Mr. Cooper of the dangers attending the route by way north of Assam, that he had chosen, instanced the fate of the Rev. Mr. Creek, wished every success to Mr. Cooper, and concluded by drawing his attention to solving the question whether the Sanpoo and the Brahmaputra, or the Sanpoo and the Irrawaddy were one and the same river. Mr. Cameron said he had been himself among the wild tribes to the north of Assam, and could say that Mr. Cooper could not have chosen a more dangerous route. Almost any other route, whether by way north of Sikim into Bhootan and Lhasa, or east by way of Munipoor, was safer. He had found the tribes extremely low in the scale of civilisation, very cunning and deceitful, treacherous, superstitious, holding great faith in charms and sorcery, and that it would be a most difficult matter to pass through them safe with life. Mr. Cooper here asked Mr. Cameron some questions in detail, and then rose and said:—"I feel I have a mission to perform. I shall go forth under the protection of the Almighty on this difficult, however hopeless, enterprise, and hope to live and return successful and communicate to the members of the society the results." On this there was loud and long-continued applause. Mr. Cameron stated that, after all, only ordinary care and prudence were requisite, and that one should look carefully at each step he took, although he himself, when solicited some years since by Dr. Barry to undertake the journey, had declined. Colonel Thuillier again rose, and while heartily thanking Mr. Cooper for the pleasure he had afforded, on behalf of the society, stated that almost the greatest geographical problem of the age was to discover the continuation of the Sanpoo. The Hon. Mr. Phear, whose remarks were almost inaudible, said he should like to know if the extensive range of mountains which ran through the East Indian Archipelago was divided from the North Indian range by the Irrawaddy. At the instance of a member of the Chamber of Commerce Mr. Cameron asked Mr. Cooper whether his object was to open up a trade route and means of communication between two such great empires as India and China, or whether it was a question as to the sources and direction of rivers and ranges of mountains. If, as he presumed, it was the former, he would draw Mr. Cooper's serious attention to the route by way of Munipoor and North Burmah, as it was safer and probably equally short with the Northern route, and opened into as populated a province of China.

BANGALORE.—A Madras contemporary learns from a correspondent at Bangalore that a dramatic society has been established there, to consist of an unlimited number of subscribers. The management is to be vested in a committee consisting of Mr. Bowring as president, Major-General Haines and Mr. Kindersley as vice-presidents, and twelve members, to be selected annually from officers of the Mysore Commission and of regiments and corps in Bangalore garrison. There are to be not less than four performances during every season.

COTTON IN MADRAS.—Cotton cultivation in the Madras Presidency is not progressing. From the returns for last March it appears that there were not more than 1,202,013 acres under this cultivation, which is a falling off of 190,896 acres when compared with last year. The highest price reached in last March was by the Salem cotton, the market rate of which was Rs. 161 for a candy of 500 lbs. The lowest price was attained by South Arcot, the cotton of which was not valued at more than Rs. 74 a candy.

DIVORCE SUIT.—The names of the parties in the Madras divorce case (in which damages to the extent of a lakh and a half are sought from the co-respondent) have at last appeared in print. They are "Coleman v. Coleman and Colquhoun." The Advocate-General, for Mr. Coleman, made an application at the Madras High Court on Monday, the 3rd, in chambers, to Mr. Justice Carmichael, that the hearing of the case might be adjourned for three weeks. The application was granted, and notice of the adjournment was ordered to be served in a registered letter on the respondents.

THE NAWAB OF ARCOT.—The liquidation of the liabilities of the Prince of Arcot appears from a paragraph in the Madras Standard to be a matter of considerable difficulty. The secured debts of his Highness amounts to nearly fifty lakhs, while the unsecured debts are much larger. Government have proposed granting the Prince fifteen lakhs of rupees towards the settlement of his pecuniary difficulties in order that he might prevail upon his creditors to take a certain dividend in full payment of their claims. Should, however, the creditors be disinclined to come to a settlement before the 30th June next the Government will withhold the grant.

A YOUNG LION UNDER CHLOROFORM.—The other day one of the young lions at the Park had its tail bitten by one of the tigers in the adjoining compartment. At first there was reason to believe that no dangerous results would follow, but on Friday evening it was judged necessary that a portion, if not the whole, of the tail should be removed. Mr. Pritchard and Dr. Miller were requested to undertake the operation, which was successfully performed on Saturday morning by Dr. Miller under chloroform, of which five ounces were used, and the tail was removed close up to the stern. At one time during the operation the animal was to all appearance dead, and did not breathe. The chloroform was at once stopped and Dr. Miller went into the cage and commenced briskly rubbing so as to inflate the lungs, a plentiful supply of water being also poured over the animal. After a brief but anxious interval he showed signs of life, and the remainder of the operation, taking up blood vessels, &c., was completed. There was very little loss of blood, and after a little time the cub was sufficiently recovered to walk about the cage, and it is hoped he may now do well. This is, we imagine, the first and only instance of a lion having had its tail cut off under the influence of chloroform. The young lions were born in September last, and they are now the size of large Newfoundland dogs.—Madras Times.

MILITARY.—The Madras Government has forwarded, for the favourable consideration of the Government of India, a letter from the Quartermaster General at the Presidency, conveying a strong recommendation from his Excellency Lieutenant-General McCleverty, that advantage should be taken of the withdrawal of the native infantry regiment from Kurnool (which has been abandoned as a military station), to increase the force at Secunderabad by an additional native corps.—We (Madras Athenæum) have been given to understand that Colonel A. C. Silver, previous to his departure from India, addressed a memorial to H.E. the Commander-in-Chief, the prayer of which was that the next Brigade Command that fell vacant might be conferred upon him. As an argument in his favour Colonel Silver urges that by his electing for the General Service he has been superseded in position, according to the Army List, by those who were much his juniors prior to the formation of the Staff Corps, to some of whom (his juniors) commands have been given to which he should otherwise have had a decided preference and claim.—It has been decided by Government that Colonel W. G. Woods (who is expected in India by the first steamer in this month) is to act for Colonel Silver as Superintendent and Agent for Army Clothing during the latter's absence in Europe. Lieutenant W. F. Wright is to conduct the duties of Superintendent on his responsibility, pending Colonel Woods' arrival and assuming charge.—Madras Athenæum.

STATION TALK.

KURRACHEE, May 5.—One of our oldest and most popular medical officers bids us farewell to-day. I allude to Deputy Inspector General of Hospitals S. M. Pelly, C.B., who has been transferred to Poona. Until the arrival of his successor—Dr. Mahaffy—Surgeon Major Style has been directed to perform the duties of his office, and Assistant Surgeon Morton, of the 1st Belooch Regiment, to conduct those of Staff Surgeon. Our esteemed Major General, Sir George Malcolm, K.C.B., also leaves for Bombay to-day, having obtained six months' furlough to England, on medical certificate. It is to be hoped the bracing climate of his native land will soon restore him to his wonted health, and that when his leave expires he will return, with renovated strength, to resume his appointment at Kurrachee. Colonel Woolcombe, C.B., of the Royal Artillery, took over command of the division yesterday. It is stated that a Major General will be sent to act for Sir George Malcolm; but this is doubtful, as no general officer would like to come here for so short a period as six months, especially as two permanent "commands" will soon fall vacant. We expect Mr. Maxwell Melville—who has declined a seat on the Bench in Bombay—in the course of the present month, to resume his appointment as Judicial Commissioner in Sind. Mr. Raymond West, B.A., who, during the short time that he has been here has won golden opinions among all classes of the community, proceeds to Bombay to-day, en route to England, on two years' furlough. People here hope and pray that when Mr. Melville comes he will be permitted to continue in office for a lengthened period; for constant changes among the personnel of the judicial departments operate detrimentally in the long run. Major Foster, who was appointed, as a temporary measure (on the departure to England of Colonel Church), to act as Deputy Judge, Advocate-General and Cantonment Magistrate, has been relieved of his duties by Major E. M. Gilbert Cooper, of the Bombay Staff Corps, who arrived from Bombay last week. Advices from Sukkur announce the appearance of small pox, in a virulent form, among the native population in the Shikarpoor collectorate. The neglect of Government in not placing a proper medical officer in charge of Sukkur—the principal trading town of Upper Sind—is unaccountable. It is impossible for the present incumbent—a member of the subordinate medical department—to attend to the sick of its increasing population, and afford medical aid at the same time to the employes of the Punjab Flotilla. Our friends of the Indus Steam Flotilla are not to have it all their own way on the "classic river" in future. The enterprising contractors of this city, Messrs. McKenzie, Cosser, and Co., have determined to deprive them of a portion of the traffic on the Indus by running the steamer Soane from the 10th instant. This boat, it will be remembered, belonged to the late Oriental Inland Steam Navigation Company, and was purchased by Messrs. Cosser and Co., two months ago, for almost a trifle. The public are sure to benefit by competition of this kind. Touching the Nasurshah, a steamer purchased by an Arab merchant for the purpose of the conveyance of goods on the rivers Euphrates and Tigris, her first trial, it will be recollected, did not answer all expectations, owing to some trifling part of her machinery not having been sufficiently secured. This was easily discovered and rectified, and she was tried again on the 20th of last month, in presence of a number of professional gentlemen. One of the old engineers of the Indus Steam Flotilla was appointed by the purchaser to represent his interests on the occasion, and, on the whole, the result may be regarded as satisfactory. With a little alteration, which by this time has been completed, the vessel will start for her destination in a day or two. She is well fitted for the work she is intended to perform, and is capable of steaming at the rate of nine knots. Her engines are of 95-horse power, and are fully equal to what will be required of her in the Persian waters. On her last trial trip she had both wind and tide against her to some extent, but she ran at the rate of nearly nine miles, and this fact is sufficient to prove her adaptability for the navigation of the Euphrates.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

KURRACHEE.—We heard some time ago that the construction of a fortress in Kurrachee had been thought of, but we have learnt, for the first time now, that an estimate of above fifty lacs has been preferred for that defensive work. Government have thought better over the matter, it is said, and the existing arrangement will remain as it is.—Sindian.

WANTON MISCHIEF.—On the morning of May 12 the bust of Lady Frere in the Victoria Garden was found lying on the ground and broken into several pieces. There are reasons for believing that the injury was wantonly committed by some mischievous person during the previous night. The police are engaged in inquiring into the circumstance, and the Acting Commissioner of Police has offered a reward of Rs. 200 for the discovery and conviction of the offender.

DEATH OF DR. GRAY.—We regret very much to hear of the death of Dr. Gray, Medical Missionary of the U. P. Mission in Rajpootana. He had been suffering some time from severe diarrhoea, and the only hope of a favourable change appeared to be in getting to the sea. On the 5th of last month he left Nusseerabad for Calcutta, accompanied by the Rev. W. Martin. He daily became weaker, and on the 19th breathed his last at Halena, fifty-five miles beyond Agra, aged thirty-two.—Bombay Guardian, May 8.

MR. RUSSEL AITKEN.—An address, with an elegant cup, has been presented to Mr. Russel Aitken by his late subordinates in the municipality. The address and cup were intended by the overseers and other subordinates of the Engineer's Department of the municipality as a private testimony of their regard and respect for Mr. Aitken, or, as Mr. Hewson, manager of the Panwell Brickworks expressed it when making the presentation, as a mark of esteem for the kind and considerate treatment they had always experienced at his hands.

POONA.—A thunderstorm, one of those wild precursors of the monsoon not unusual at this season, passed over Poona last night. It seemed to be a meeting of storms from the west and south. It was at its height about nine o'clock. The lightning was intensely vivid, and almost constant in its coruscations. The thunder-claps were terrific, and the roll unceasing during the height of the storm. Rain fell in torrents. The effect of the storm has been just what was needed in purifying the atmosphere and cooling the air.—Deccan Herald, May 10.

STORM AT BARODA.—A correspondent at Baroda, under date 10th May, writes that "a terrific storm, accompanied by thunder and lightning, commenced at about 7.30 P.M. last night, and continued with unabated violence till about 9.30. Along the main road leading to the city one of the huge banian trees which line the road on either side was uprooted and carried away some yards, also many very large neem trees. In camp several large neem trees were broken as if they had been rushes, and large boughs innumerable were to be seen this morning strewn all over camp. The roofs of several houses were blown off."

THE WEATHER.—The weather prevailing upon the Ghauts appears to lend weight to the belief that the monsoon will set in betimes this year. We all know that every season is, with some people, a "most unusual one," but there really does seem this year to be good ground for the annual prediction. On Friday and Saturday night rain fell heavily upon the Ghauts, along the Khandalla range; and the fall probably extended beyond Mahabeshwur. Heavy clouds float over, both in the morning and evening; and the air during all but the two or three hottest hours of the day is laden with moisture.—Poona Observer.

MAHABLESHWUR.—The new Frere Institution at Mahabeshwur was opened on the evening of the 5th May, with music and dancing. About one o'clock on the morning of the 6th there sprang up a counter attraction—a conflagration in the bazaar. The fire originated in a bakehouse, and threatened to lick up the surrounding buildings. Bandsmen and dancers, however, united their efforts, and confined its ravages to seven shops, one of them a milliner's, and another a potato store, from the ashes of which toasted potatoes could be procured, done to a turn. Mr. Frank Souter's house almost came to grief a few days before, through the outhouses catching fire; and Capt. Filgate's chimney being in bad order set fire to his house also, but water was luckily at hand. There had been no rain up to the 7th May: the weather was hot, and water was becoming scarce.

MILITARY.—The Poona Observer understands that several changes in the Commissariat Department will take place on the arrival from England of Colonels Dunsterville and Lucas, who are expected to arrive about the 22nd inst. Colonel Dunsterville will assume charge of the Commissary-General's office, Colonel Lucas will be appointed Deputy Commissary-General, and Major F. P. Mignon, Assistant Commissary-General, will be appointed to the Poona division of the army. Colonel H. W. Holland, the present Commissary-General of the Army, proceeds to England by the steamer which leaves Bombay at the end of this month on six months' leave of absence—Lieutenant-Colonel J. C. Graves, C.B., Commandant of the 3rd Regiment Bombay Light Cavalry, has been appointed Honorary Aide-de-Camp to the Governor-General.

CHOLERA.—We regret to hear that cholera has been prevalent, to a very extensive scale, at Sanglee, Koorundwar. It is also stated that this epidemic is raging at Dhoolia.—Poona Observer.

INDO-EUROPEAN TELEGRAPH.—The following letter from Lieutenant-Colonel Goldsmid, Chief Director Indo-European Telegraph, dated the 27th April, to the Secretary to Government, has been placed at the disposal of the press:—"Sir,—I have the honour to report that I yesterday received a telegraphic message from Captain Ross, reporting completion of the line to Charbar, and that all appeared satisfactory so far. I have received Mr. Walton's official report as follows:—'The trial line from Gwadur to Charbar is fully completed and in working order, and with the arrangements which I have made, I anticipate that the entire line to Jask will be completed by the end of June, when a detailed report of the whole operations will be submitted to you.' I have replied to Mr. Walton that his report is very satisfactory, adding, 'It is most probable that I shall leave India by the steamer of the 1st proximo; in which case it will be necessary for you to report further progress to Government direct.'"

JINJEERA.—A couple of days after the telegram appeared according to which Mr. Grant Duff described our relations with the Hubshee of Jinjeera as being of a "mixed character," the affairs of the Hubshee himself became slightly more "mixed." His relative, the Nawab Seede Abdool Rahiman, in whose behalf the unknown member, Mr. Eykyn, put the interpellation, settled the difference between that gentleman's information and Mr. Grant Duff's, by escaping from his island prison. It would appear from this that the hatchway of the dungeon containing the Seede Prince was not very heavy, or, as is more likely, that he could avail himself of a golden lever to open it. Any way, it would seem, his imprisonment in the "fortress at sea," had not been quite so rigorous as Mr. Eykyn supposed; and the Nawab is now, like the rest of the magnates of Western India, refreshing himself at Mahabeshwur. Doubtless, like others, he has business in view as well as pleasure. He is bent, we should suppose, on convincing Sir Seymour Fitzgerald that Mr. Grant Duff was quite in error when he said, "there is no validity whatever in his claim" to be the rightful Nawab of Jinjeera. The aspirant is not without friends, who have enabled him to get up his case and send his appeal home. Perhaps it is as well that he should be thus fully convinced that he can never become the veritable Hubshee. After having for more than a dozen years recognised as such the Seede Ibrahim Khan, the Bombay Government is scarcely likely to back a pretender, and thus risk having our relations with Jinjeera more "mixed" than hitherto they have been. Seede Abdool may have "a case," and he may have been ill-used by the other Seede; but, as Mr. Grant Duff intimates, we intend to respect "the rude independence of the small maritime State of Jinjeera," the proper course will be to stand by the man in possession so long as he behaves according to his Koran, which is his law and gospel, and by which he must be judged.

CLAIM TO ALLOWANCES ON LEAVE, C.S.

April 22.—No. 162.—The following letter to the Accountant general, Bengal, is published for general information:—

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, No. 2,790, dated the 12th ult., submitting a claim from Mr. F. B. Peacock, the registrar of the High Court, Calcutta, to an allowance of £500 per annum, during the portion in excess of twenty months of his absence in Europe on leave on medical certificate, from Oct. 24, 1865, to Nov. 12, 1868, and inquiring, first, whether the absentee allowance of covenanted civil servants forfeiting their appointments under Section 12 of the Absentee Rules of Dec. 16, 1864, and Clause C. of Section 8 of the Rules of June 16, 1868, should be determined by their standing at the time they forfeit their appointments, or their standing at the time their leave commences; and, secondly, whether such standing should, with reference to an order of the Government of India in the General Department, No. 3,449, dated Nov. 15, 1831, be held to include time spent at Haileybury College.

In reply to the first question, I am desired to observe that the rates of absentee allowance in the cases to which that question relates should be determined by the officers' standing at the time they forfeit their appointments.

In reply to the second question, I am directed to state that the Gov. gen. in Council considers it unnecessary to disturb the order of November, 1831, which directed that time spent at Haileybury College should be included in the computation of standing which qualifies for subsistence allowance, because nearly all the officers now in the covenanted civil service who were at Haileybury College have, without calculating the time spent by them at Haileybury, attained the standing which qualifies for the highest rate of subsistence allowance; but that the subsistence allowance of covenanted civil servants who were not at Haileybury must be regulated by their standing from the dates of their arrival in India. I am directed, however, to point out that the decision of 1831, which allows Haileybury time to be included in the computation of standing qualifying for subsistence allowance, does not authorise its being included in the standing which qualifies for absentee allowance under Section 12 of the Absentee Rules of December, 1864, and that, consequently, the standing qualifying for such absentee allowance must be computed from the date of an officer's arrival in India.

I am to add that Mr. Peacock's claim to £500 per annum from June 24, 1867, to Nov. 12, 1868, may be admitted under the orders contained in this letter, because, having arrived in India on Feb. 1, 1857, he was, according to those orders, an officer of above ten years' standing on June 24, 1857.

OPIMUM CULTIVATION.

April 17.—No. 58.—The Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to direct the following revision of Clause 3 of the notification of this department, No. 1,202, dated March 9, 1865:—

Clause 3 as it Exists.

Sections 28, 35, 48, 51, and 52 of Act XXI. of 1856, so far as they restrict the sale of opium to licensed vendors only and prohibit the possession of opium by other parties.

Clause 3 as now Revised.

Sections 28, 35, 48, 51, and 52 of Act XXI. of 1856 are to be considered in force in all districts subject to the following provisos:—

In districts where an acreage system is in force, there is no restriction upon the possession of home manufactured opium by bona fide cultivators of the poppy. The sale of such opium by the cultivators to any one but a licensed contractor or his agent, is prohibited.

The possession of foreign imported opium in any quantity exceeding 5 tolas weight, by any other party than a licensed contractor, or his agent, is prohibited, except under a pass granted under rules issued by the Financial Commissioner.

PENSIONS ON REDUCTION OF ESTABLISHMENTS.

April 26.—No. 201.—Read again financial resolution dated July 4, 1861, numbered 8,449 and 8,454, regarding the payment of both pension and salary to Government servants discharged on pension in consequence of reduction of establishment, and subsequently re-employed under Government in a temporary capacity.

Read letter from Deputy Accountant general, N.W.P., No. P A 8,478, dated March 25, 1869, submitting an inquiry in connection with the above subject.

Resolution.—Under the terms of the resolution of July 4, 1861, a Government servant discharged on reduction of establishment with pension, if temporarily re-employed under Government, draws both pension and the pay of the temporary office, provided the aggregate receipts do not exceed the pay of the appointment relinquished at the time of the reduction. In other words, if the pay of the new office be more than is equal to the pay of the former office, no portion of the pension is allowed to be drawn; but if less, so much of the pension is allowed to be drawn, in addition to the pay, as is necessary to make up the aggregate receipts equal to the former pay.

2. The Governor general in Council sees no reason why these rules should be restricted only to pensioners employed temporarily, and is pleased to direct that, in future, the same rule shall be applied to the cases of Government servants discharged with pension on reduction of establishment, who may be subsequently re-employed on permanent establishments.

3. With regard to the inquiry made by the Deputy Accountant general, N.W.P., the Governor general in Council observes that special orders of Government are not necessary for the admission of claims under these rules.

ALLOWANCES TO MEDICAL OFFICERS.

Simla, April 24.—No. 10.—The following letter to the address of the Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal is published for general information:—

"I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of Mr. Offg. Jun. Secy. A. Mackenzie's letter, No. 691, of Feb. 22, regarding the allowances of commissioned medical officers of the army officiating in civil appts.

"2. In reply, I am desired to state that orders will be issued hereafter regarding the allowances of medical officers officiating in any of the civil appts., the salaries of which were fixed in the G.O. of the Govt. of India in the military dept., No. 370, dated April 4, 1867, but that the allowances of a medical officer acting in any other civil appt. must be regulated by the rules for the grant of acting allowances to military officers in civil employ."

CIVIL FURLONGHS.

No. 101.—Read extract from the proceedings of the Govt. of India, in the foreign dept., No. 452, dated April 8, sanctioning an application from Mr. J. D. Gordon, judicial comr. of Mysore, on privilege leave, for permission to proceed to Europe on furlough for two years, on the expiration of his privilege leave, without rejoining his appt.

Resolution.—The Gov. gen. in Council observes that there are two theories of privilege leave—

First.—That which has always been maintained by the Secy. of State and the Govt. of India, viz., that this leave is granted for the purpose of enabling an officer who has worked uninterruptedly for a certain period to recruit his health and strength for future work; and,

Secondly.—That which has gained ground among the officers of the service, viz., that this leave is a privilege earned by past work, and has no reference to the future. On the first theory has been founded the rule which has always been insisted upon, that at the conclusion of privilege leave an officer must rejoin his appt. On the second theory, every attempt has been made to evade the above rule. Privilege leave has been unhesitatingly granted to officers, although it was known that at the conclusion of that leave they did not intend to do any more work for some time, but were about to proceed on leave of another kind. The formality of rejoining the appt. has been observed in letter, but the spirit of the rule has been broken by the nominal transfer of the officer concerned to a similar post in or near a presidency town, whence he could embark on longer leave.

2. H.E. in Council is of opinion that such evasions of the rule should not be allowed, and accordingly takes this opportunity of prescribing that an officer, when applying for privilege leave, shall declare that he has no present intention of taking another leave within a period of six months after the expiry of his privilege leave, provided, however, that if any officer to whom privilege leave is due be allowed subsidiary or preparatory leave, he shall be permitted to draw the allowances admissible during privilege leave for the period of his subsidiary or preparatory leave, or for any less period for which privilege leave may be due to him.

3. This rule will apply to all civil officers, as well as to military officers in civil employ.

4. With regard to the particular case of Mr. Gordon, H.E. in Council observes that as Mr. Gordon has already been allowed privilege leave unconditionally, he will not be required to join his appointment before proceeding on furlough.

PENSIONS TO SOLDIERS PREMATURELY DISCHARGED.

The following is the text of the Royal Warrant upon this subject:

Whereas it has been represented to us that it is expedient that soldiers who, on account of their second period of limited engagement being about to expire, or on account of medical disability, are not permitted to proceed to or with their regiments on foreign service, be granted their discharge from our army; and whereas, by our Royal Warrant of July 23, 1861, no rate of permanent pension is assigned to soldiers discharged at their own request, or for the public service, except such soldiers as shall have served the full term of twenty-one years in the Royal Artillery, Royal Engineers, or Infantry, or twenty-four years in the Cavalry.

Our will and pleasure is that soldiers discharged under the circumstances aforesaid, or on reduction of establishment—being Europeans, and serving as gunners, drivers, sappers, or privates—who, at the discretion of our Secretary of State, with the concurrence of our Commander-in-Chief, may be brought forward for discharge under the circumstances aforesaid, shall receive permanent pensions as follows, in addition to good-conduct pay under the regulations laid down in our Royal Warrant of July 23, 1861:—

A.—Cavalry soldiers serving under the Army Service Act, 1817, or enlisted previously: After 23 years' service, 7½d. a-day; after 22 years' service, 7d. a-day; after 21 years' service, 6½d. a-day; after 20 years' service, 6d. a-day.

B.—Cavalry soldiers re-engaged for 21-years under the Army Enlistment Act, 1857, and all soldiers of the Royal Artillery, Royal Engineers, and Infantry corps: After 21 years' service, 8d. a-day; after 20 years' service, 7½d. a-day; after 19 years' service, 7d. a-day; after 18 years' service, 6½d. a-day.

Non-commissioned officers, and other soldiers ranking as such, shall receive, in addition to the foregoing rates, the increased pensions laid down for non-commissioned officers in Article 9 of our said Royal Warrant of July 23, 1864.

EDWARD CARDWELL.

Miscellaneous.

IMPORT AND EXPORT OF BULLION.—A return of the value of bullion, gold and silver, imported into and exported from India has just been issued, from which it appears that the total excess of the imports over exports from 1800 to 1867 amounts to £311,131,300. The total value of the coin account during the same period amounted to £262,567 643.

EXPORT OF BULLION.—"Low's Indian Circular" of June 4 records the following exports of bullion per P. and O. steamers of the 22nd and 29th May, 1869, from Southampton:—To Bombay, gold £30,000. To Madras, gold £1,091. To Singapore, £22,390. By the Messageries Imperiales steamer Moeris, from Marseilles.—To Pondicherry, gold £1,234; Madras, gold £385, silver £1,600.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The biddings for £325,000 in bills on India took place on Wednesday, the 2nd inst., at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £288,400; and to Madras, £36,600. The minimum price was fixed, as before, at 1s. 10½d. Tenders on both presidencies at that quotation will receive about 59 per cent., and above that price in full. The result shows a further falling off in the demand for remittances, as compared with the previous biddings.

DEATH OF ADMIRAL LAMBERT.—Admiral Sir G. R. Lambert, G.C.B., died suddenly of apoplexy on Saturday afternoon, at the United Service Club. The deceased was appointed in 1850 Commdore on the East India station. He was second in command of the expedition to Rangoon in January that year, and was honourably mentioned at the capture of that place in April, 1852. He had the honour to receive the thanks of the Governor-General in Council for his conduct in command of the naval forces during the war. He was appointed in June, 1863, Commander-in-Chief at the Nore, since which he had not held any active employment.

HIS HIGHNESS THE NAWAB NAZIM OF BENGAL entertained a party of friends at the Alexandra Hotel, Hyde-park-corner, on Tuesday, June 1. Amongst the guests were the following:—The Marquis of Huntly, Sir Samuel Hayes, Bart., Right Hon. A. H. Layard, Sir Bartle Frere, G.C.S.I. and K.C.B., Major-general Sir George Lawrence, K.C.S.I. and C.B., Major-general Sir George Macgregor, K.C.B., Mr. Higford Burr, Colonel Lang, Colonel Nassau Lees, Mr. Grote, Mr. Kaye, Mr. W. le F. Robinson, Captain Upton, Captain Daubiez, Mr. Colin Mackenzie, Mr. Edward De Gex, Colonel Layard, Mr. David Money, Mr. H. Thoby Prinsep, jun., and Mr. Fox. His Highness and the two princes Ali Kadr and Soliman Kadr presided at the table.

REGIMENTS AND THEIR DEPOTS.—A General Order fixes anew the proportion of the depot and service companies of regiments abroad. No ensign is in future to be kept on the strength of the depot. Two captains and two lieutenants are apportioned to the depots of battalions in the colonies, and an extra lieutenant to those of battalions serving in India. The proportion of rank and file with the service companies and the depots respectively, will be in India 750 and 110; in other colonies, 560 and 90; and in Ceylon, China, Australia and the Mauritius, 750 and 90. The five battalions (1st battalion 23rd, 82nd, 90th, 93rd, and 103rd) coming from India next winter are to consist of 480 with the service, and 70 with the depot companies; the next batch to be relieved in 1870-71—viz., 1st battalion 7th, 77th, 88th, 94th, and 103rd—are to have but 70 men at the depot, while those coming home this summer from the colonies will have a total strength of 510 rank and file. They are the 1st battalion 16th, 1st battalion 22nd, 30th, 47th, 50th, 4th battalion 60th, and 99th regiments.

ALLEGED ASSAULT UPON A SURGEON ON THE HIGH SEAS.—At the Mausion-house, on Thursday, Mr. James Lunn Smith and Mr. Charles Cole, the captain and chief mate of a vessel called the King Arthur, were summoned on a charge of assault. The complainant was Dr. Fearon, a retired army surgeon, who was a passenger in the King Arthur from Calcutta, and he stated that on the night of April 17 the defendants committed a violent assault upon him, and that he was afterwards confined to his cabin for several days. He admitted that he had been the worse for liquor on one or two occasions during the voyage, and that the sale of brandy to him had been stopped. He also admitted that he was quarrelling with a fellow passenger immediately before the alleged assault, and that after the captain put his hands upon him there was a scuffle, and he (complainant) seized hold of the captain by the beard. A witness whom he called stated that Cole interfered apparently to separate them. Before the evidence for the prosecution was concluded, some observations were made by Sir Benjamin Phillips, and the complainant then withdrew the summons.

with invalided and time-expired soldiers on board from India, under contract with the Indian Government. She left Calcutta on the 19th of February. The officers, passengers, and troops brought home comprise Captain Tierney, R.A., in military command of the troops on board, Mrs. Tierney and child, Capt. Halliday, Bengal Cavalry; Mrs. Halliday and two children, Mr. Clarke, Rifle Brigade; Assistant-Surgeon Jones, M.D., in medical charge of troops, 152 non-commissioned officers and men, with four women and three children belonging to various corps serving in India; Dr. Morrison, Mrs. Morrison, and five children; Mr. Anderson, Mrs. Anderson, and three children; Mr. Ellis, Mrs. Ellis, and four children; Mr. Hessel-meyer, Mrs. Hessel-meyer, and two children; Mr. and Mrs. Crohan, and two children; Mr. Saunders, Quartermaster Leeson, Mesdames Talbot and three children, Smith and five children, Daley and five children, and Baptist and four ayahs. Seven deaths occurred on board during the voyage among the invalided soldiers from dysentery and consumption.

THE FALCONER MEMORIAL FELLOWSHIP.—At a special meeting of the Association for the Better Endowment of the University of Edinburgh held in Edinburgh, Mr. Christison, secretary, reported, on behalf of the general committee, that the association had been offered £2,000 for the purpose of founding a fellowship in the University in memory of the late Dr. Hugh Falconer, H.E.I.C.S. The arrangements provisionally agreed to by the committee in regard to the matter were to the effect that the Association should, by contributing from their funds a sum of £500, raise the fund for the endowment to £2,500; that the fellowship should be for the encouragement of palæontological geology, to be called the "Falconer Memorial Fellowship," and that it should be open to competition among graduates in science or medicine of the University of Edinburgh of not more than three years' standing. Among other details of the conditions for the fellowship, it was proposed that the competitive examination should be in the subjects of palæontological geology, comparative osteology, and fossil botany; and that the term of tenure should be for two years, with power to the Senatus Academicus of the University to extend the term to a third year. The report was unanimously adopted; and it was agreed to give £500 towards the endowment, as proposed.

DEATH OF LORD BROUGHTON.—Lord Broughton, whose name is more familiar to the public as Sir John Cam Hobhouse, died last Thursday evening in London, in his eighty-third year. His lordship was educated at Westminster School, and graduated B.A. at Trinity College, Cambridge, in 1808, and M.A. in 1811. He was a most intimate friend of Lord Byron, and was made one of the executors to his will. Sir John Hobhouse was in politics an advanced Liberal, and in December, 1819, a letter which he wrote containing some severe remarks on the conduct of several members of the House of Commons was declared to be a breach of privilege by that assembly, and Sir John was arrested and imprisoned in Newgate, where he remained until he procured his liberation a few weeks afterwards by the death of George III. At the general election in that year he was returned to Parliament for Westminster as colleague to Sir Francis Burdett, and continued to sit in the House of Commons, with one or two brief intervals of exclusion, until his elevation to the peerage in 1851. He first entered office in 1832 as Secretary at War in Earl Grey's Government, and was afterwards for a week Secretary for Ireland. In Lord Melbourne's first Administration he held the office of First Commissioner of Woods and Forests, and on the formation of his lordship's second Administration in April, 1835, was appointed President of the Board of Control, which office he held till September, 1841, and again filled it in Earl Russell's Administration, from July, 1846, to February, 1852, when his official and political career may be said to have closed. Lord Broughton was married in 1828, to Lady Julia Hay, daughter of the late Marquis of Tweeddale, and by that lady, who died in April, 1835, he leaves surviving issue two daughters—Charlotte, married to Colonel Dudley Wilmot Carleton, of the Coldstream Guards; and Sophia, married to the Hon. J. Strange Jocelyn, second son of the Earl of Roden. The peerage becomes extinct by the death of the late peer, but the baronetcy descends to his nephew, Mr. Charles Parry Hobhouse, of the Bengal Civil Service.

ROYAL COMMISSION ON COURTS-MARTIAL.—We have already told our readers the substance of the recommendation of the second report of the Royal Commission on Courts-martial. As the report has been submitted to her Majesty, we may specify these recommendations more particularly. The following is a summary of them:—With regard to general courts martial, a revision and simplification of the Mutiny Act and Articles of War, the preparation of a text book thereon for the use of courts-martial, and a strict examination therein by a deputy judge advocate-general of all young officers, are recommended. It is also proposed that whenever the services of a short-hand writer are available, the examination of witnesses shall be conducted vice voce, that a list of the witnesses should be given to the accused, that the reassembly of a court be discontinued except in case of illegal or impossible sentence, and, in cases of an acquittal, the immediate promulgation of the finding and discharge of the prisoner. It is suggested that cases of embezzlement should be tried by the ordinary civil tribunals, where such a course is practicable. With respect to district courts-martial, it is recommended that convening officers should have the power of calling in the assistance of deputy judge advocates where the probability of legal questions arising makes their presence desirable, and that for this purpose an increase should be made in the number of deputy judge advocates. Regarding regimental courts, the commissioners are evidently of opinion that they should seldom be had recourse to, for the power of commanding officers is to be increased to the infliction of twenty-one days' imprisonment, and it is suggested that these courts should never be held unless where a district court is impracticable. When a regimental court-martial is held, the members should all be of more than three years' standing. Upon the question of military punishments, the only recommendation that has not been already alluded to is that "marking" shall be abolished when circumstances allow.—Army and Navy Gazette.

PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY.—The report of the court of directors, to be laid before the proprietors of the P. and O. Company at the half-yearly meeting on the 11th inst., after stating that as usual the accounts would be reserved for the examination of the annual meeting, refers, first, to the company's fleet. The Deccan was despatched to Calcutta, via the Cape, in January, and made the run in sixty-two days. She has already taken up her work on the Suez line, and delivered the mail, which reached that place on the 21st ultimo, within the contract time. The new ship Hindustan is to be launched by Messrs. Day and Co. at Southampton on the 12th inst. In the early part of April the directors invited tenders for the construction of a new steamship, of about 3,000 tons and 600-horse power. A spirited competition between the leading builders of the North and South was the result, and the lowest offer, that of Messrs. Caird and Co., of Greenock, was accepted. The postal service:—A modification of the mail service with Japan has recently been introduced by the establishment of a direct line between Hong Kong and Yokohama, instead of the line hitherto maintained between Shanghai and Yokohama. This modification reduces the outward voyage to Japan by two days, and the homeward voyage by five days. The service between Hong Kong and Shanghai is kept up as a separate line. The company's business in shipments of silk from China, and cotton from Bombay, and the intermediate carrying trade is now most materially affected by the competition which prevails in almost every quarter, and the directors have been compelled to make concessions in their rates of freight, which tell very sensibly on the total earnings, as compared with the extent of operations. On the other hand, there has been a diminution in the cost of coals at some important stations. As regards the first six months of the financial year, the directors are enabled to recommend the declaration of a dividend of 3 per cent., free of income-tax, for the half-year ending the 31st of March last, and the warrants for this dividend will be payable on and after the 25th inst. The death of Mr. J. C. Ewart, one of the directors, is mentioned with expressions of regret. The resignation by the Earl of Leven and Melville of the office of an auditor of the company has left that post vacant; and a special meeting will be held for the purpose of appointing a qualified auditor in his place. The circumstance that the shareholders have re-elected his lordship at intervals of two years no less than thirteen times testifies to their appreciation of the manner in which he has always discharged his duties.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, June 1.—THE VICEROY OF EGYPT.—Mr. GOURLEY asked whether definite information had been received that the Viceroy of Egypt intended to visit this country, and, if so, what arrangements would be made for his reception by her Majesty's Government.—Mr. OTWAY said the Government had received information of the Viceroy's intention to come to this country, probably about the 22nd June, and that arrangements would be made for his suitable reception.

THE ACCIDENT AT THE BHORE GHAT.—Sir S. NORTHCOTE inquired whether the Government had received the report of the commission on the accident at the Bhore Ghat on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway; and whether any steps have been or are to be taken thereupon.—Mr. GRANT DUFF said the report had reached the India-office by last mail only; the Government had, consequently, not had time to take any steps respecting it. But the company had sent several of its servants to examine the Semmering, the Breunner, and some other inclines on the Continent.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, June 3.—THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.—Mr. EASTWICK asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether there was any foundation for the report that objection had been taken to the admission of three of the four successful native candidates for the Indian Civil Service on a question as to their respective ages; and whether, seeing that some natives of India have great difficulty in ascertaining their exact ages according to our calendar, it was the intention of the Civil Service Commissioners to adhere rigidly to the rules as to age in these cases.—Mr. GRANT DUFF: With reference to my hon. friend's first question, I deeply regret having to say that it is true that two of the native candidates who succeeded in the recent competition for the Indian Civil Service have been held to be disqualified on the ground of age. With reference to his second question, I have to say that the Civil Service Commissioners are absolutely bound by regulations having the force of law. They investigated this matter with the greatest anxiety, and came to the conclusion that they had no choice but to do as they have done when they were appealed to by a candidate who claimed to be of right age among the selected fifty.

HOUSE OF LORDS, FRIDAY, June 4.—THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT AMENDMENT BILL.—This Bill was read a third time, and passed after some observations from Lord Houghton.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FRIDAY, June 4.—THE BANK OF BENGAL.—Mr. G. GREGORY asked whether any order had been sent out for closing the agency established by the Bank of Bengal within the Presidency of Bombay.—Mr. GRANT-DUFF said that no absolute order had been given, but that the Government of India would use its influence in closing the agency referred to.

THE BANK OF BOMBAY.—In answer to Mr. DYCE NICOL, Mr. GRANT-DUFF stated that the report of the commission of the Bank of Bombay has reached the India Office, and that he hoped to be able to lay it on the table in a few days.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT.

The friends of the afflicted should try in their trouble these purifying remedies. For more than the third of a century have these medicaments been before the public, by which their merits have been universally recognised and commended. In all ailments they prove useful. In debilitated constitutions they act as preventives to disease, and where maladies have manifested themselves, the afflicted can resort to no remedies at once so efficient and harmless as Holloway's. They keep the blood pure, and preserve the stomach in a sound state; they cool and cleanse the whole system. These medicaments should be possessed by all; they will confirm good health, and prove serviceable under any infirmity which can afflict mankind.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, May 22; Agra and Calcutta, May 18; Madras, May 17.

THE papers by this mail are wellnigh devoid of news. Cholera has been raging among the natives of Baroda, and has paid some ominous visits to the European troops at Kamptee. A committee has been ordered to enquire into the cause of the prevalence of small-pox, diphtheria, and fever at Bangalore. The Kurrachee and Hyderabad mails have been plundered on their way through Guzerat. Our countryman, Baron Doleans, of the Calcutta Municipality, has been made a knight of the Royal Prussian Order of the Crown. Certain changes, recommended by Colonel Keatinge, are to be carried out in the political management of the smaller states in Rajpootana. The principal and two masters of Doveton College have been acquitted of cruelly flogging some of their boys, suspected of setting fire to the school. The old Bank of Bombay is paying its first dividend; and the Albert Life Insurance Company has caused so much suspicion, that a committee is going to enquire into its affairs. Such are the main items of the budget laid before us. We are further informed that Sir R. Temple brought home with him the whole of the Abyssinian accounts, duly classified and audited, and that Government is going to spend a little money in clearing jungle and improving the roads through the Punch Mehals, the scene of the late Naikra risings.

ONE other piece of news offers an amusing instance of round-about travelling. We learn for the first time from India that a medal is to be given for the campaigns on the North-Western Frontier from 1849 to 1863 with a special clasp for Umbeyla. We are glad to see this tardy justice done to the brave men who fought under Napier, Cotton, Chamberlain, and other of our frontier commanders, but why must the news of an order issued in London be first divulged to the dwellers in London by means of a newspaper printed ten thousand miles off? It is not a very perilous journey from Parliament-street to Waterloo-place. And the news as now received needs explaining. Why is the Burmese medal to do duty for the North-West?

AFTER escaping one cyclone in the middle of May, Calcutta as we learn by telegram, was visited by another on the 10th June, which damaged many houses and played mischief among the smaller craft on the river. Many lives are supposed to have been lost on the water; but we must wait for further particulars. The hurricane was still raging when the telegram was sent off.

If the complaints that circulate in the Indian papers touching the fort and cantonments of Morar in Gwalior be well grounded, it is about the worst place in Upper India for a large European garrison, and the barracks now building might as well have been let alone. The fortress itself stands on a rocky platform whose area is less than a mile square. The new cantonments are surrounded by low hills, chiefly of ironstone, which give out by night the heat they imbibed by day. The sites of the new barracks are close to these hills. In the hot weather the temperature throughout the twenty-four hours must be very like that of Sukkur, where ink dries up in no time, and candles melt to nothing. It is generally believed that the new Artillery lines were built on the site of a village which repeated attacks of cholera had half unpeopled. The place seems altogether unsuited for the large garrison which is destined to crowd it; and by the time the new buildings are ready for their tenants, Morar will probably share the fate of Kurnaul. Such is the prospect held out by persons on the spot. We cannot vouch for the truth of their statements, which may be more or less coloured by a personal dislike to the place itself. But it may be worth while to consider whether a space so limited can ever be fit to hold so many troops. On the other hand, we have heard of no great illness at Morar, beyond a comparatively mild attack of cholera, and we cannot believe that the cost of new barracks on a large scale would have been incurred without careful inquiry, after all the lessons taught us by former failures. The hottest places are not always, if even usually, the unhealthiest, else Agra as a cantonment would long since have been condemned. Overcrowding however is always unhealthy, and Meeanmeer, which is dry enough, has not proved a success.

MR. MAINE leaves India for good on the 9th October by way of Bombay. People in India are still wondering who will succeed him. That successor will not, we believe, be Mr. Forsyth, who prefers holding on to his present appointment in the India-office—so at least we are given to understand.

IN one respect great injustice has been done to the Bombay Government. They were indirectly charged by Mr. Lowe with needless delay in sending in their accounts for the Abyssinian campaign. And yet we now find that from the beginning of January, 1868, full accounts with vouchers were sent home month by month until the date of Sir R. Temple's departure. All things duly considered, the Bombay Government have set an example of promptitude in this matter which contrasts favourably with the English Government's long delay in making up the Crimean Bill.

THE next mail will have left Bombay on the 25th May, only three days after the last. Thenceforth until September the mails will leave Bombay every Tuesday, instead of Saturday, on account of the monsoon.

Why have the Hazara despatches never yet been published officially in England? That is more than we can tell; but we learn that they will at length appear in next Friday's Gazette.

We said not long ago that Theodore's son, Prince Alamayoo, was to go out to India in charge of Captain Speedy. It is now settled that he starts from England on the 4th of July next.

In the middle of May the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury formed themselves into a judicial court, for the first time since the days of Lord Liverpool, to consider the claim of General Whitlock's Field Force to the two hundred and sixty thousand pounds' worth of promissory notes captured from the rebel chiefs of Kirwee. The result of their deliberations will disappoint those who were sanguine enough to trust in the weight of legal precedents. We must suppose that the Lords Commissioners went by the latest precedent, that of the Punjab campaign, when the captured crown property was not thrown into the general prize heap. At any rate, we are assured that the verdict has been finally given against the claimants.

We are glad to be able to announce that the Secretary of State for India has resolved to appropriate the ground between the India Office and Charles-street to the building of a new Museum, Library, and Chart-office under one roof, from plans furnished by Mr. Digby Wyatt. This improvement has long been needed in order to do full justice to the treasures heaped up in the present library and museum, and to accommodate fairly the many students to whom the present offices, small in themselves and lying out of the way up back staircases, are virtually closed.

It is often asserted that, under the present system of raising and distributing the revenues of British India, no real injustice is done to the local Governments. They always get, we are told, as much money as they can reasonably desire for local purposes, although the sanction of the Central Government must first be accorded to each item of the outlay proposed. That the Central Government means to act fairly in all cases by the local authorities may be taken for granted; but with so many competing claims for money and so many reasons for enforcing economy, it must often be liable to put the curb on the wrong horse. A case in point crops up in the Police Report of the Punjab Government for 1867, the latest hitherto published. The Punjab police bear a specially good character. Their duties in that year were unusually hard. They had to keep order at the Hurdwar fair, and to do their best afterwards in fighting against the cholera, which threatened to play havoc with the towns and villages of the Punjab. In the process of enforcing quarantines, attending cholera camps, and distributing cholera medicines, they were "exposed to the sun by day at the hottest time of the year, and remained without shelter by night." All this was done by them with a hearty zeal and an absence of dishonest practices, not always predicable of native officials. The Lieutenant-governor himself confirms Colonel Hutchinson's praises by claiming for the Punjab police comparison "even with those of England and Ireland." And yet Colonel Hutchinson has to complain of the pennywise poundfoolish economy which has left the police-buildings to fall yearly into ever worse repair for want of the money which the Punjab officials are tired of asking for in vain from the Supreme Government. "His Honour is aware"—he writes—"that for the last four years the amount asked for. . . has been systematically cut down to such an extent that" the civil officers are in despair of averting the inevitable downfall of the neglected buildings. In some places the roofs have already fallen in, and the police been forced to turn out under canvas. One deputy-commissioner is thankful "that no lives have yet been lost from some of the buildings coming tumbling down." In his notes on the Inspector-general's Report Sir D. Macleod is "glad to say that a far more liberal allowance has been sanctioned for police buildings in the current year's budget, than heretofore." Last year therefore something was to be done to make up for past shortcomings. But the concession must have come too late to avert the worst consequences of an unwise delay. For one rupee that might have been well laid out four or five years earlier, it will take scores now to restore these ruinous buildings to their proper condition. Even native policemen have some claim to be decently housed when they are doing hard work on six rupees a month.

The two native youths who lately won and lost the right of admission to the Indian Civil Service have appealed against what they deem the injustice of their ejection from the goal so hardly won. Messrs. Banerjee and Thakoor in their memorial to the commissioners declare in the plainest terms that they were not twenty-one years old on the 1st of March. They appeal from the ages given in the University Calendar to the evidence of their solemn affidavits and of horoscopes which would be taken as good evidence in any part of India. Surendra Nath Banerjee was born on the 10th November, 1848, and Sripad Babajee Thakoor on the 26th February, 1849. The discrepancy between these dates and those of the University register they explain, as we showed last week, by the common Indian practice of reckoning one's age not from the last, but from the next birthday. This, we believe, is the simple truth of the matter, and the Commissioners will have reason to regret the precipitancy which led them to sacrifice the spirit of their rules to something less than the letter. In striving to be just they seem to have been guilty of a glaring injustice at a most unlucky time. A wiser policy would have given these natives the benefit of the doubt, if doubt there had been. But in their case we opine that there is nothing doubtful; Indian usage being clearly the true guide to a fair settlement of questions concerning natives of India alone. Again rejected by the Commissioners, Mr. Banerjee has turned for aid to the Court of Queen's Bench. In answer to the arguments adduced by his counsel, the judges have unanimously decided to grant him a rule nisi, which will not come on for hearing before November. We would advise the Commissioners to reconsider their verdict in the meantime.

MR. STANDISH GROVE GRADY, of the Home Circuit, Recorder of Gravesend, and author of several works of repute on English law, has been appointed by Lord Westbury and the other members of the Council of Legal Education, the new Reader on Hindoo, Mahomedan, and Indian Law to the Inns of Court. He was selected from amongst twenty-three competitors. The number of Indian students for the bar has so much increased that the Benchers of the several Inns of Court considered it expedient to found this professorship. It is not unlikely that the Benchers will resolve not to grant a remission of terms to any gentleman intending to practice in India unless he passes an examination in the Native and English laws; and this was probably one of the objects they had in view in founding the new chair which Mr. Grady will be the first to fill. The office, it is believed, involves the duties of examiner of candidates for the Bar. For these duties Mr. Grady is amply qualified. He has been largely engaged in initiating pupils in Indian and English law. He has a fair practice in the Privy Council, and his works on the Hindoo Law of Inheritance and the Mahomedan Law of Inheritance and Contract have been very well received here by the profession, and are regarded with respect by the Privy Council, and were, no doubt, instrumental in obtaining for him his present appointment. Circumstances may for a time prevent their being used as class-books in our Indian Universities; but their intrinsic merit will ultimately overcome all objections. They will become text-books in the Inns of Court, and surely what the high authorities of England consider repositories of learning and the proper channels for the instruction of pupils in the spirit and mysteries of those laws ought to be equally useful and valuable in India.

THE ABYSSINIAN BILL.

WE have not yet heard the last of the Abyssinian War. The debate in the House of Commons on Tuesday week brings back unpleasant memories of events and stories which the unfortunate tax-payer who had eaten his cake before he knew the price of it would willingly forget. The process of digestion is once more disturbed by loud complaints of the thriftlessness and mismanagement that aided in preparing the original meal. Mr. Candlish insisted on reminding us that the cost of rescuing a few Europeans and an American envoy from the clutches of King Theodore has gradually swollen from the estimated sum of less than four millions to the actual bulk of nearly nine millions; and on the mere statement of that woful discrepancy he rested his demand for a committee of inquiry. Sir Stafford Northcote, with the courage, let us hope, of a clear conscience, as well as the warmth of a chivalrous advocate for his absent friends in Bombay, seconded the demand, declaring his belief that the verdict would on the whole prove "very decidedly in favour" of the late Ministry, and "creditable to the Government of India, particularly that of Bombay." Mr. Mundella enforced the same demand for a very opposite reason; for the purpose not of vindicating, but of arraigning the authors of the late campaign. In his speech we come across our old friend the contractor, with his wonderful revelations about the compressed hay which lay for months on board ship off Zoolah, while the mules on shore were dying by scores of hunger. In some cases the hay was thrown bodily overboard after having cost the nation a bill for several months' demurrage. In others it was finally sold for the benefit, not of the nation, but of the ship-owners. Then there were 6,000 mules and horses "given away for an old song" after having been bought at ten times their proper value. And, most absurd of all, "500 women were taken from India to grind corn for the sepoys in Abyssinia; but they never did grind any corn." Altogether so frightful a waste of money was never before seen by men who had fought in India, America, Italy, Slesvig, and Bohemia.

It was in vain that Mr. Eastwick sought to justify everything that had just been condemned, even to the submersion of good hay and the buying up of mules at fancy prices in all parts of the world. Another old Indian, Sir C. Wingfield, was decidedly sceptical of Sir S. Fitzgerald's claims to the gratitude of his countrymen, so long as no fair explanation could be given of the five millions spent on sea transport alone. Colonel Sykes spoke yet more strongly against the excessive waste of money in ships, hay, coals, and mules. His very unfair attack on Consul Cameron—perhaps the most unjustly abused of living Englishmen—was properly resented by Sir J. Elphinstone, who also ridiculed the idea of mules abounding in Abyssinia. With regard to the excessive outlay on other things, he had "always noticed that as soon as shipowners and manufacturers had grown rich on warlike expeditions, they immediately began to grumble when the bill came to be paid." A yet more powerful champion for the defence arose in Mr. Alderman Lusk, who declared that the freight charges were "not extraordinary," amounting only to £1 a ton at a time when few ships were in the market.

In spite however of arguments like these, the feeling of the House seems to have justified Mr. Ayrton in yielding to the demand for a formal inquiry. Without imputing to the present Ministry any desire to aid in worrying the last, or assuming that the outlay was blamably excessive, we may fairly admit the need for a dispassionate inquiry which would either prove or disprove the necessary connection between so large an outlay and so small a business as the Abyssinian campaign. But the results of former inquiries are not encouraging as a guarantee for better management in the future. All the labours of Mr. Roebuck's Committee failed to bring the Crimean miscarriages home to the real culprits, or to effect more than a very slight improvement in the details of our military administration. And if the present Committee should conclude that too much money was spent in Abyssinia, would their verdict be free from suspicion in the event of its imputing blame either to the late Ministry or the Bombay Government? It is so easy to make scapegoats of the weak or the absent; and India practically belongs to both categories. Everything will depend on the impartiality of the Committee and their mode of handling the main question. If the matter gets thoroughly sifted, we venture to predict a verdict generally favourable to the managers of the late expedition. War once decreed on a certain definite scale, it is probable that the necessary outlay would not have fallen far short of the actual. For a certain amount of blundering under the circumstances every allowance should be made, especially in presence of the results achieved. Whether the war might have been avoided by a wiser policy, or conducted on a somewhat smaller scale, is quite another question. In justice to Captain Cameron, the inquiry should start from the day of his appointment; but that might be held to involve a perilous breach of the rule about letting sleeping dogs lie.

THE INDIAN POST-OFFICE.

THE Indian Post-office follows the law of development which has ruled in this country since the introduction of the penny post. Each year shows a steady increase in the business done and the profits realised. In 1867-68 the number of paid letters was 84,995,281, or close upon 24 per cent. above the total for the year preceding. Even in unpaid letters, which reached the sum of 22,321,703, the increase was over 3½ per cent. In registered letters, which numbered 1,266,441, there was a comparatively small increase of nearly 6 per cent.; while a decrease of nearly 50 per cent. in service letters of the old kind implies no real loss to the revenue of the department. Newspapers show an increase of 193,235, or 3.70 per cent. on the year before. Parcels have increased by 6.16 per cent. Books, which in 1866-67 had increased by 9.58 per cent., showed last year a further increase of 19.39 per cent.; a result mainly due to the removal of former restrictions by the Postal Act of 1866. The growth of the parcel business during the last two years is ascribed to the small extension of railways during that period; the Government having some time since forbidden the conveyance by post of parcels sent from the neighbourhood of one railway station to another. Hence each new junction between two great lines or sections of railway puts an immediate stop to the postal traffic in parcels; a piece of delicacy towards a rival service which the Postmaster-general deems quite superfluous, because it is only in small parcels that any competition could exist; the railways in respect of large ones being always able to underbid the Post Office.

In every year more than a million letters pass into the Dead

Letter-office. Last year the total was 1,779,248, of which 723,266 were returned to the senders, and the remainder lay altogether "undisposable." This, no doubt, is mainly owing to the carelessness or stupidity of the senders, human nature being much the same in all countries. A few instances in point might have helped the reader over the dry details of the postal service; but as the report is silent on such matters, we must leave him to consult the suggestive pages of Household Words and other popular serials for examples of the blunders perpetrated by witless letter writers at home. It is not always the fault of the writers, however, unless those of Oude are abnormally stupid or forgetful. In that district, which has not yet been placed under imperial officers, the proportion of undeliverable letters amounts to 25 per cent., whereas in the North Western Provinces and Bombay it is only 7·86 and 7 per cent. respectively. From this great disparity and the improvements visible in the postal arrangements of the 24-Pergunnahs and the Central Provinces, since the transfer of their district offices to the central department, we may guess how much of the larger percentage in Oude is due to causes which a better management would remove.

The Indian Post-office seems to drive a brisk trade in note-paper as well as envelopes. In the item of half-anna note-paper there was an increase of 25·31 per cent. The decrease in the sale of half-anna envelopes was compensated more than twice over by the increased sale of anna envelopes. In other sources of revenue last year's returns were very satisfactory. The passenger service by mail-cart and parcel-van paid its own expenses, while the net profits of the bullock-train and the Punjab military van dawk were more than Rs. 22,000, as compared with a deficit of Rs. 16,911 in the previous year. The great decrease in the returns from official postage—Rs. 23,09,840 for last year, as compared with Rs. 50,08,004 for 1865-66—is a temporary feature, produced by the immediate working of new rules coincident with the temporary maintenance of old privileges. On the one hand, there has been a large reduction in the weight of service letters; on the other, it seems that such letters, if sent from one to another part of the same district, are, for the present, exempt from all charge. When the time comes for removing that exemption, the revenue on service letters will, in all likelihood, rise again to 35 or 40 lakhs.

The postal outgoings have risen from Rs. 41,88,625 in 1865-66 to Rs. 47,54,940 in 1867-68, or nearly four lakhs more than in the intervening year. Part of this increase is due to the charge on special trains for overland mails and to compensation for the great loss of horses incurred on two mail-cart lines, while the remainder may be divided between the Abyssinian charges, the extension of local lines of post, and the higher rates of pay consequent on the prevailing dearness of food and labour. All these notwithstanding, and in spite of the decrease in official postage, the returns for the year show a net surplus of Rs. 13,29,506. Even if we reckoned against the Post-office the whole value of steam services paid for by another department, of the free services rendered by the railways, and a few smaller items of a like nature, there would still remain to its credit a balance of more than two lakhs, which, in spite of future additions to the outlay, will hardly be diminished in the years to come.

In the year 1867-68 the Post-office resumed in the North-West its bullock-train operations, which three years before had been undertaken by the Indian Carrying Company. The private company proved unequal to the task, and now the Government is ready to extend its carrying business all over the Peninsula, if only it can obtain from the various private agencies the concession of low uniform rates for the carriage of "undeclared goods." It has also organised a large military transport train between Nagpore and Jubbulpore, and the Punjab military van dawk has been further developed, "so as to form a connecting link between the upper and lower sections of the Punjab Railway." The results of these arrangements were to be noticed in the next report.

The Director-General complains of the unduly large share which India has had to contribute towards the carriage of the overland mails under the new system. "It seems unlikely," he thinks, "that, with a proper distribution of the subsidy payment, there will be any necessity for maintaining the present enhanced rates of postage."

During the same year various changes were carried out in the personal details of the Post-office. The five postmasters-general were classed in two grades with appropriate salaries, the highest being drawn in Bengal and Bombay. Changes were also made in the salaries of almost every class of Post-office servants, from the compiler of accounts to the Post-office peons, who were thenceforth to receive from Rs. 6-8 to Rs. 12 a month. In this way the department will attain in due time a degree of efficiency from which, in Mr. Monteath's opinion, it is still far removed. Higher wages will probably sharpen the postmen's wits; but something else is needed to check the dishonest tendencies encouraged by the practise of posting the new currency notes, unregistered or undivided, in thin transparent envelopes. The bulk of the offences committed last year by Post-office servants may be traced to this source. Thicker envelopes, if the natives can be tempted to use them, or a compulsory registration of letters containing gold or notes, would relieve postmen and clerks from a temptation to which they need not be exposed.

The new local post has answered well in Bombay. That city now enjoys six daily deliveries, and in one month the number of letters delivered there rose from 7,932 to 20,096, while the average net profit monthly from the nine branch offices amounts to more than fifteen thousand rupees. In Calcutta, on the other hand, the experiment has proved a failure. The Post-office peons, who are chiefly Mohammedans of a class notoriously turbulent, could not be kept in proper order by the deputy postmasters. The city has no natural division into districts, and to those artificially framed by the Post-office the public at large have paid no attention. Besides, in Calcutta, every one who can keeps his own chuprassies for the conveyance of "chits." Hence, even after a return to the system of direct delivery from the General Post-office, the number of local letters has averaged only about 3,000 a month.

Six hundred new post-offices and letter-boxes were opened in the year under review, a result whose advantages outweigh the accompanying increase of irregularities caused by the "ignorance and stupidity" of too many small village postmasters. Of the 134 letter-boxes 80 were opened in the Bombay Presidency alone. Many of these are attached to the great railway lines, with results even better than might have been expected. The system of sending "rural messengers" to collect letters from village to village has also been extended with marked success.

As a happy earnest of future improvements, we rejoice to hear that the want of a money-order system between England and India, on which we commented some time ago, is likely soon to be remedied. "Steps" to that effect were being taken when Mr. Monteath sent in his report. It is to be hoped that the authorities will not delay much longer in bringing them to a practical conclusion. In another year or so we shall learn what effect the late concession of a half-anna postage for letters weighing half a tola will have produced on the postal revenues of British India.

BONUS COMPENSATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

DEAR SIR,—In your paper of the 9th inst. I observe an article headed, "Legality of the Bonus System." It will perhaps strengthen the opinion of the legal authorities therein given if I mention that ten years ago an officer of the Bengal Artillery, having resigned the service, applied for his bonus; this the committee for managing the Fund refused, for reasons I need not enter into. He afterwards threatened legal proceedings, when the committee drew out a case and submitted it for the opinion of the then Advocate-general in Calcutta—I forget his name—and he gave it against the committee. This he could not have done had the system been illegal, as all the papers of the Bengal Artillery Bonus Fund are with Colonel Voyle. I dare say he would furnish copies of the above to any parties particularly interested in obtaining them.

On three several occasions the Court of Directors addressed letters to the Government of India on the purchasing out system, all of which were published in General Orders for the information and guidance of the officers of their army; what was therefore directly sanctioned by the Court of Directors can hardly be called illegal—at least, it was a privilege granted by the Court, with the sanction of the Board of Control, to the officers of their army, and, by the Act of amalgamation, all existing privileges were guaranteed by the “Henley” clause.

It is not unlikely that a trial may yet come off in one of the Equity Courts against the officers of the late Bengal Artillery for non-fulfilment of their engagements under their late Bonus Fund.—Yours, &c., ANON.

June 11, 1869.

[We are glad to find that the legal opinions from which we quoted last week were in harmony with the dictum of the Indian Advocate General. The law of the case is clear enough.—Ed. A. I. M.]

BUNDS AND TANKS.

The Delhi Gazette says, that as the traveller passes from the wide plains of Bengal and the North-West Provinces into Rajpootana, Central India, and the Western Presidency, the physical characters of the country materially alter. Instead of the apparently boundless plains, distant hills break the monotony of the view. As these are past, the face of the land becomes more rugged and uneven, numerous minor eminences cropping up here and there, with often picturesque valleys and flats between. It was doubtless this peculiar configuration of the country which in former ages tempted the princes of the West to the construction of those massive bunds stretching from one hill to another which in favourable situations form the boundaries of large tanks or lakes. Some of these bunds consist of masses of masonry forming a wall, often five or six miles in extent. During the monsoon many acres of land are thus flooded, becoming as it dries towards the hot weather an admirable nidus for the reception of seed. From the bund and sides of the deeper part of the lake the water is carried miles for the purpose of irrigation. Wherever one of these large tanks exist the country is converted into a green and smiling garden, contrasting strongly with the brown, barren, desiccated appearance of adjoining districts. In the absence of large rivers capable of supplying water for irrigation, and with water many feet from the surface, thus rendering wells practically useless for cultivation, nature has been bountiful in the provision of natural formations easily converted into reservoirs. Yet during recent years little, if any, additions have been made to these necessary works. Many bunds have indeed been suffered to fall more or less into decay, and as a consequence the surrounding country has become barren and desolate. The necessity of storing water throughout Western India appears to have been more acted upon, if not better understood, under native rule, than since British power became paramount. We cannot indeed call to mind one large work of the kind undertaken during recent years, excepting by Colonel Dixon in Ajmere. A proposition for the construction of a bund half-a-dozen miles long, securing the covering during the whole year of as many square miles of water, and ten times that surface of cultivation, would now be regarded as impracticable. Yet the lakes in existence in Meywar, in Ajmere, and in Ulwar, for instance, evidence that the authorities of other days did not fear attempting the most magnificent works. And such have for ages been a source of prosperity to the surrounding country, and an example which should have been more followed. But not only to serve present requirements should tanks be multiplied over the land, but also for the benefit of successors. The more water stored, the more cultivation, and the more trees. And as the latter increase in the land, so will the annual rainfall. During centuries of neglect the country has become dry, denuded of verdure, and semi-desert in appearance and characteristics. Yet there is evidence that in bygone ages Western India, even from Agra to Scinde, was not the sandy desert tract it now appears. Where geology informs us the country was not covered by the sea, cities and towns flourished, now scarcely having existence in name or tradition. And such again would spring into being could water, the mother of all vegetation, develop the astonishing fertility of the soil. We have heard much of canal and river irrigation, but little of the tank system. Yet in many parts of India the latter is the only method by which remunerative results can be secured.

NATIVE OFFICERS.

The Madras Athenæum re-echoes the universal opinion that the time has arrived for ensuring a supply of efficient native officers, and yet, in point of fact, the native officers are more effete, more imbecile, more “worn out old men” than ever. The causes are patent enough. The reduction of the Madras Army by twelve regiments of Infantry and four of Cavalry—one of the biggest political blunders ever perpetrated—and the abolition of the veteran battalions, have caused a great stagnation in promotion among the native ranks. The supernumeraries thrown upon the remaining regiments by the reduction have not even yet all been absorbed. The increase of pay to the commissioned ranks, while it has made the commissions more coveted, has made them more hard to obtain, because the men who have once got them will not give them up as long as they can help it. The result is that Subadars of sixty and Jemadars of fifty years of age have come to be considered as rather favourable specimens of juvenility. Fancy an army, with its company officers mostly of such a venerable age, employed upon active service, skirmishing, let us say, in Burmese jungles, or scrambling over the hills in Abyssinia. The corps—native corps we mean—that were actually sent upon the latter service, had been, as we are informed, officered on a different principle, the seniority rule not being reckoned to bear much stress in the Punjab regiments, nor, we believe, the principal stress in the Bombay native infantry. In the Madras native ranks, however, seniority is still far too much considered, and the consequence is, not only the inefficiency of the commissioned, but also of the non-commissioned ranks. The havildars and naigues are a great deal older men than the correlatives of sergeants and corporals ought to be. The average age of lance naigues even, the very lowest grade of the ladder of promotion, is about thirty-four years. Yet if a clearance were once made, there is plenty of material in the native army for providing more efficient substitutes. All we want is, first, a wholesale clearing off of the venerables, not only the thoroughly effete—who might be got rid of even as it is if commandants and medical officers would but do their duty—but also of those still effective for garrison, but unequal to field service, the men who, under the old system, would have been sent to the veteran battalions. The regiments, be it observed, would be far more efficient for active service with seventy men per company, all fully effective, than with seventy-five men per company of whom a portion were virtually “invalids;” and the pay of the forty men thus reduced would help to meet the additional burthen on the pension list. Secondly, we require a distinct understanding that promotions are made for the good of the service, and not as a favour to individuals; that they are conferred for merit, and not as of right. The new principle may doubtless involve grievous disappointment to many a respectable though useless old man, but if the Native Army is to be really efficient, it must be enforced. We think that, as soon as the first novelty was over, it would be rather popular than otherwise. Of course no system can please everybody; but one which throws open the path of advancement to the young and energetic instead of reserving all the prizes for those who have had the luck to grow old, would, we should imagine, be the one likely to enlist the greatest number of votes on its side, and to please those the most whom there would be the greatest advantage in pleasing.

RUPEES.

The Madras Times observes that few of us in making trifling purchases consider that a rupee is an honest two shillings—not in India at least. At home we very quickly learn to perceive the difference between one shilling and two. But this is not the worst of the rupee currency from a mildly social point of view. To the rupee currency is due that system of credit which absolutely compels tradesmen to charge high prices for their goods, and which renders it very difficult for purchasers, as well as vendors, to carry on ready-money transactions. No ordinary purse will stand the wear and tear of that unwieldy coin, the rupee, nor would any ordinary purse hold a sufficiency of rupees for a day's shopping. The results are, that Anglo-Indians are debarred, except at the cost of much personal inconvenience, from the benefits of ready-money transactions, and the credit system, a bad system for all concerned in it, has taken firm root in the Indian soil. Rupees, however, are very well calculated to give us a false estimation of wealth. It is a pet phrase of English novelists to say with reference to India, that it is “a country where men barter health for gold.” The aphorism may be true, so far as our great and well-paid officials are concerned; but it is false if applied to the ruck of Anglo-Indians, who, in truth, barter their health for silver, and for a silver coin which goes a very little way in India. The rupee is in fact a deceitful, treacherous coin, which, in a certain sense, must be regarded with disfavour. Theoretically, it is two shillings—practically, it is one shilling, and somehow or other it has an aversion to being broken. We almost as cheerfully pay one rupee for an article as twelve annas, and we, unhappily, never recognise a shilling in its India disguise of eight annas. The eight anna piece is the English sixpence, and so the mint encourages us to live always one hundred per cent. beyond our actual means, which is discreditable to its morality as a Government institution. In old times, the rupee was an excellent coin for India, but we venture to submit that its day has gone by. When all our “Europe articles” had to be brought 15,000 miles round the Cape at a great cost of money and deterioration in value, a rupee was the smallest coin with which we could hope to purchase them. Time and progress has changed all that, however, and freight is no longer what it was, thanks to steam and a closer connection with England. The Suez Canal will lower it still further. Living in India, in the old times, was also much cheaper, and men, thirty years ago, could afford to scatter rupees, where their successors find it hard to spend shillings. The rupee, however, remains the same—a deceitful friend, assuming a value to which it has no just title, and an emblem of the eastern luxury and display which may be said to have no longer an existence among us. Let us suppose, for a moment, that her Majesty's Government might, would, and could, abolish the sovereign and the shilling in England as current coins, and decree that all transactions were to be carried out in half crowns! How ridiculous, how inconvenient, would such a currency appear? Its first effects would, probably, be to raise prices 50 per cent., and to cause a credit instead of a ready-money system to be the basis of all tradesmen's operations. A half crown currency for England appears a monstrosity in our eyes, yet we are content to undergo its annoyances in this country with the greatest apathy! To suit the traditional proclivities of the native, or to avoid shocking his illogical prejudices, we are content to put up with a currency which is remarkably inconvenient, and different from every other currency in the British possessions.

STATION TALK.

DINAPORE, May 5.—But a few short weeks ago, when relating the outrage committed by a discharged fireman of the East Indian Railway on a lady travelling from Sahibgunge to Rajmahal, I commented on the low state of morals that characterises the servants of that company as a whole—a body. An occurrence which took place at the Dinapore railway station on the night of the 19th of last month proves only too clearly how just, how correct, the remarks made on that occasion were. A gentleman and his wife, having been on a visit to Dinapore on the night in question, intended to return home by next morning's train, putting up, in the meantime, with such accommodation as the railway station affords; the wife making herself comfortable in the ladies' waiting-room, while the husband shifted for himself on the platform. The "night" station master, or I should rather say a guard acting as such on that night, an individual who enjoys the reputation of a Don Juan, on hearing that a lady was sleeping in the waiting-room, entered that apartment by a back-door, a stratagem which enabled him to gain access to the room without being seen by the husband. The lady roused from her sleep by the sound of footsteps and the touch of hands, gave the alarm, which brought her husband on the scene. That gentleman having found the gay Lothario in a place and position in which he considered him to have no right to be, reported the matter to the district traffic manager, which in the course of a few hours resulted in the dismissal of the somnambulist from the company's service, brought about by an answer to a telegram from the former gentleman to Mr. Bachelor, the chief traffic manager at Jumalpoore, whose prompt action in the affair I cannot help mentioning as worthy of all praise. Besides the loss of his appointment in the service of the company, the galant suffered a pecuniary penalty of Rs. 200, inflicted upon him in the shape of a fine by the magistrate at Bankipore. I have often expressed my astonishment and wonder at the ways and means employed by people in this country in "making money," from the lowest chupprassie to the highest — (the choice of the word to follow in this place I will leave to the taste and fancy of the reader); and as a matter of no surprise it may safely be said that the police do not only stand behind their countrymen and others in the art of squeezing, but are the very coryphaei of roguery in cases where by simple-minded people they might be supposed to act the part of champions of honesty. Here is the "latest" in tricks invented by the railway police for turning a pice or two besides their pay. Passengers arriving by train have to make their exit by a door at which there stands a kunashuble, a Cerberus, whose duty it is to prevent native travellers leaving the station before their tickets are checked, which being done, he receives the order to let them pass; a duty simple enough in itself, but which he cannot perform without making it the means of a little oppression in the shape of a black mail levied on the poor travellers, or on such of them as he can frighten into complying with his wishes in their hurry to get away, by making them believe that, unless the tax be paid they are likely to be detained on the platform for ever so long, and who rather than be pushed and handed about by him and his confrères say, "Open Sesame," and appease his barking mouth with a cake in the form of a few copper coins. I trust the mentioning of the matter will have the effect of putting a stop to such petty acts of oppression, which are highly calculated to bring a reproach upon the police (if that remains still to be done); and above all, that it may be the means of inducing the European subordinates of the department to take cognisance of this offence and others of a similar nature when brought to their notice, the perpetrators being caught in flagrante, instead of wilfully shutting their eyes or passing things off, in order not to be bothered.

AZIMGHUR, May 6.—The Mohurram is over, i.e., the ten days allotted to the festival, but the rites connected with it will not be concluded until the fortieth day after the moon was seen. To those who have never been present I shall try to convey some notion. A moulvie exhorted the assembly, and from the accompaniments of sighs from the young women, groans from the matrons, gesticulations from the moulvie, and ejaculations from the hoary-headed and those with flowing beards, I am at a loss for a comparison. No Bedlam could equal the noise. In the general uproar the exclamation "hai-re" was to be heard from an aged man, probably lamenting his sins, wearing a kuntape, resembling a nightcap. Shortly after the exhortation commenced a young woman came forward as a candidate for a murreedship, i.e., to renounce the world, whilst the assembled persons worked themselves into such a frenzy that at last they literally danced. The young woman, who could not have had a better opportunity of showing her attractions fell, down exhausted, but after a brief interval she got up and joined in the fandango. All this enthusiasm and extravagance calls together a concourse of people, and is a capital opportunity, a respectable Moslem remarked, of seeing a lot of dancing girls, who always attend. So that, saying nothing of conversion, there is no doubt that many a couple are converted from the errors of a single life to the wholesome doctrine and practice of matrimony by these annual assemblies. If a man who has been beating his breast and lamenting his sins over night approves of a dancing-girl, he makes overtures the next day for her hand, with a view to nikka; and as Mahomedanism encourages polygamy, many a man is thus enabled to make an addition to the inmates of his harem. Mr. A. Macmillan, Assistant Magistrate, has been transferred from Mirzapore to Azimghur, some say vice Mr. Joint Magistrate Powlett, gone on privilege leave, whilst others state as a pucca arrangement.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

SIMLAH, May.—The report of the Bombay Bank Commission is still in the hands of the Government of India, but no orders have yet been issued respecting its publication. It is "under consideration," and receiving the very fullest amount of consideration the importance of its matter and recommendations demands. Neither have any orders yet been passed with respect to the branch of the Bank of Bengal in Bombay. Mr. Cowie, the Bengal Advocate-General, when the case was put before him for opinion, held the branch to be legal and justifiable in every way. The branch did no bona fide banking business; it neither lent money, received money in deposit, nor discounted bills. It was, therefore, nothing more than an agency, and was as little open to sustainable objection as would be the appointment of a private Bombay firm as the Bank of Bengal's agents in that place. The branch, moreover, would be fully justified in purchasing in Bombay bills on Calcutta and the branch bank stations in Bengal, the North-West Provinces, the Central Provinces, Oudh and Burmah; for such purchases would be necessary in order to the remittance to Calcutta and the branch stations of the bills forwarded from those places to Bombay for realisation. Mr. Dickson's contentions were almost precisely similar, that gentleman also holding that so long as the branch did not receive money in deposit it could not be said to do banking business. But Mr. Dickson has never admitted that the Bombay branch purchases bills; it had no occasion to do so; all the money realised by it having been paid into the Bombay treasury towards the provision of Government Abyssinian war requirements. Mr. Dickson admitted that the Bank of Bengal, so long as the old bank of Bombay was supposed to be sound, managed its bill business through that institution. But the old Bank of Bombay had a capital of two millions, whereas the new bank's capital does not exceed £500,000, ergo the Bengal Bank cannot regard the new Bombay Bank with the same degree of confidence it reposed in the old institution, nor even with sufficient confidence to induce it to confide to it its Bombay bill business. Should Mr. Cowie's opinion be considered sound by the Government of India, that Government must hold that the branch of Bombay is not a bank, but an agency. Hence, should Government resolve to have the branch closed, it will have to resort to legislation. Now, a resort to legislation to merely effect the closure of a branch bank is not considered altogether desirable, and is what Government would gladly avoid if possible. But, as far as your correspondent can learn, even legislation will not be left unresorted to, should no other means of effecting the closure or removal of the obnoxious branch present themselves. It should, however, be borne in mind in Bombay that the supposed necessity for legislation rests altogether on the soundness of Mr. Advocate-General Cowie's opinion. It is for those interested in the Bombay Bank to consider whether the purchase of bills in Bombay with Calcutta Bank capital and Calcutta Bank deposits is, or is not, a bit of banking business. It is, at any rate, a means of enhancing Calcutta banking profits. But there is a course other than legislative spoken of. It is that of warning the Bank of Bengal that on the expiration of the present agreement the branch must be withdrawn, at once and for good. As to which course will be chosen, your correspondent, as you may imagine, is completely in the dark for the present.—Times of India Correspondent.

MORAR, May 15.—The more one looks about Morar, the more apparent are its circumscribed limits. This strikes the eye all the more as the new barracks to the south of the station spring one by one into existence. Close on their right flank is a range of rocky hillocks, which most effectually shut off any breeze from that direction, and form in themselves, a centre of heat, which will, of course, be generously shed on the adjacent barracks. These mounds consist of a red stone, and they form the southern boundary of cantonments. Most of them overtop the double storied barracks, in which it may to a certainty be anticipated the temperature will be thus considerably increased. Here, too, are to be built barracks for a regiment of British cavalry, and when these are finished there will be as nice an illustration of the multum in parvo principle as in India one would wish not to see; whilst, in the enclosed atmosphere, the principle of the American ice-jug will be rather unpleasantly reversed. For, whereas that valuable article of domestic use retains the cold by the walls which surround the cool liquid they contain, these barracks with their adjoining wall of incandescent rock will retain the blazing heat of our Indian sun long after he has gone down to his rest on each summer's day. Such is a faithful but by no means exhaustive description of the scrimped locality which has been chosen for two entire regiments of Europeans. On the windward side of the site lie the Sudder Bazaar and the rest of the military buildings. Cholera has now disappeared, and as a variety the signs of famine are paraded before us daily in the shape of numerous bags of bones clad in such rags as render the word dress, in their case, an idle name and a mockery. A relief fund has been opened for these poor starving wretches, and some days ago a meeting of all the inhabitants of Morar was held in the Sudder Bazaar for the promotion of this charitable object. This meeting was addressed by General Chamberlain, the Political Agent, whose appeal to the Baboos was homely and forcible, when he reminded them of the oiled condition of their stomachs compared with the hunger-pinched diaphragms of the poor. I do not know what the Baboos thought when, after all this speechifying, Scindia's name was put on the list of subscribers to the fund for two months at the munificent figure of Rs. 50. Colonel Daly in a late despatch has told us that this Chief dearly loves the praise of Government. Let us hope that Lord Mayo will not fail to signify, in an appropriate manner, his high appreciation of this extravagantly Quixotic act of benevolence on the part of Scindia. He should be held up for the imitation of those stingy screws of Sirdars who at Umballah the other day could only be persuaded to put down thousands in twos and threes for the Lawrence Testimonial.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

RAILWAY CARRIAGES FOR NATIVE LADIES.—It is asserted, says the Pioneer, but we will not vouch for the truth of the report, that Government advise the construction of special railway carriages for the use of native ladies; and that native opinion is to be consulted as to the form and fittings best suited for ensuring that privacy exacted by the customs of the country.

TUCCAVEE ADVANCES.—During the week ended the 17th of April the amount of tuccavee advances sanctioned for digging wells and other irrigation works in the North-Western Provinces amounted to Rs. 14,284. The total amount advanced for this purpose has been Rs. 2,09,599. In the Central Provinces the amount advanced for similar purposes during the week ending the 21st of March was Rs. 11,850.

BARON DOWLEANS.—We observe it is stated that his Majesty the King of Prussia has appointed Baron Dowleans a Knight of the Royal Prussian Order of the Crown, and has transmitted to him the insignia of the order through the North German Consulate in Calcutta, "in consideration of the information afforded to the Prussian Commission at the Paris Exhibition of 1867, with regard to the products and manufactures of India."

ORISSA TEMPLES.—We are not aware that Cole, R.E., was ever at Bhubaneswar, in Orissa, and yet a party of moulders have succeeded in securing casts of the temples there. This we conclude from the fact that the Government of India has just intimated to those in charge of the party that six sets of their photographs and casts are required as soon as possible. Of these, three sets will be forwarded to the Secretary of State, and one to each of the Museums of Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay. Copies may also be supplied to the different local Governments, if required, provided that the cost of reproduction and carriage can be furnished from local funds.

COPPER AT DALTONGUNGEE.—Daltongunge, in the Palamow subdivision of the Chota Nagpore, is not destined for greatness yet awhile. Visions of copper mines were once indulged, but these Dr. Oldham, the Superintendent of the Geological Survey of India, has dispelled. Dr. Oldham has informed the Government of India that he has received a letter from Mr. Hughes reporting that there was no appearance of a regular lode, and that the ore was disseminated irregularly through the gneiss rock. Mr. Oldham regretted to say that this only tended to confirm the opinion at which he had previously arrived, that this copper ore was not likely to offer remunerative returns for any operations on a large scale.

HOOGHLY BRIDGE.—A floating bridge has long been projected for the Hooghly, and the scheme had some time ago reached that stage of progress marked by the appointment of a Commission to inquire into and report upon its merits. The report has appeared, recommending the scheme on a plan slightly modified. It appears from evidence collected that 21,707 passengers daily trust to the ordinary and unsafe boat navigation for transport across the Hooghly, besides 3,712 daily who use the railway ferry. The goods transport averages 40,887 maunds a day—abundant evidence, one would think, for a substantial bridge. The latter, however, adds the Indian Daily News, is so remote a prospect, that the Commission trusts to the floating bridge for testimony as to the weight of the demand for a permanent structure.

CENTRAL PROVINCES.—The reports from the Central Provinces continue favourable, and some works which were to have been undertaken for the relief of the poor in the Nagpore district have been abandoned, partly in consequence of the outbreak of cholera, but chiefly because such works were no longer necessary. The Sanitary Commissioner had been most energetic in his endeavours to check the ravages of the cholera, and by suggesting the desirability of obtaining a plentiful supply of water for cleaning purposes had partially succeeded in Seonce. In Saugor, however, the supply of water was beginning to run short and the pasturage was withering. Prices generally continue favourable. Small-pox was still prevalent in many districts, especially in Saugor, where three hundred and five cases were reported in four tehsils, ninety-three of which had been fatal.—Englishman.

A STRANGE STORY.—A strange case, more romantic than those usually disposed of by Indian judges, has been heard by the Allahabad High Court in its divorce and matrimonial jurisdiction. The plaintiff, Mrs. Kelly, who sought for restitution of conjugal rights, but subsequently for a judicial separation, with alimony, said that the respondent had married her in Ireland in 1855, and, after three weeks, had abandoned her, leaving no trace behind him. About fourteen years after she heard of him in this country, but when she arrived here he would have nothing to say to her. Mr. Kelly, the respondent, said that he had first become acquainted with the petitioner at an inn, in the county of Roscommon, of which her brother was the keeper. Shortly after he moved to another neighbourhood, when her brother told him that there were very scandalous reports abroad respecting his sister, and that he should do something to clear the girl's character. He succeeded in satisfying the brother that there was no foundation for the reports, but the girl's father and her friends would not be satisfied; and eventually, at the peril of his life, compelled him to proceed to church, and go through the marriage ceremony with her. They then kept him locked up with her for a week, but he eventually escaped, and came away to India. The arguments turned on both sides, as to proof of marriage, and the Court postponed the case for six months, awarding for the time Rs. 80 a month alimony to the wife.—Indian Daily News.

MILITARY.—The Pioneer gravely contradicts the rumour that the authorities of the India-office have it in serious contemplation to place all field officers on half-pay who, at the end of July next, have not passed in Hindoostani.—Dr. H. B. Buckle having been appointed to officiate as Deputy Inspector General of Hospitals, the Bengal Government have appointed Surgeon Major D. McDonald, M.D., of the 40th Bengal Native Infantry, and officiating Medical Storekeeper at Umballah, to officiate as Principal Medical Storekeeper to Government at Calcutta.—Major J. Macleod Innes, late of the Bombay Bank Commission, resumed charge of the office of Accountant General in the Public Works Department on April 27th.—A general court-martial is ordered to assemble at Rawul Pindee for the trial of Captain A. B. Chalmers, of the Bengal Army, on certain charges connected with the wife of a gunner of the R.H.A., and a consequent fracas between the captain and the woman's husband.—Major Hughes' Rifled Mountain Battery of Royal Artillery is huttled at Murree for the present, and was inspected lately by Major General Haly, C.B., commanding the Jhelum Division. We hear that Lieutenant Beatty, of the 88th Regiment, has been admitted to the Indian Staff Corps, and posted during his year of probation to the 25th N.I., at Peshawur. This officer has upwards of seven years' service, and experienced in consequence, we believe, some difficulty in obtaining admission into the ranks of the native army. The order which prescribed seven years as the limit within which admission could be obtained bears somewhat harshly on the interests of those officers who were precluded by the state of their health, absence in England, uncertainty as to the ulterior intentions of the Government, and other causes, from making their selection in time; and we are acquainted with more than one instance in which officers who came out from home in expectation of being able to transfer their services to the Indian Government have been unable to do so in consequence of having exceeded the limit described above. This particularly applies in the case of those officers who contracted additional obligations while at home, with a view to a more or less permanent settlement in this country; and such has been the effect of the new furlough rules that, as we are assured, officers who formerly held aloof from the Staff Corps would now gladly avail themselves of its advantages in large numbers if they could.—Delhi Gazette.

RAJPOOTANA.—The Government of India has lately had under its consideration, and has generally approved of, a scheme submitted by Colonel Keatinge for the better administration of affairs in the Rajpootana Agency. One of the chief defects in the existing system is the want of proper provision for exercising a direct and effective control over the proceedings of some of the States. At each of the more important Courts, as is well-known, a political agent resides, whose presence often acts as a wholesome check or stimulus on the durbar; but the minor chiefs, as a rule, are left without any more effectual supervision than what the Governor-General's agent himself can exercise in the intervals of his other duties, or by occasional visits during the cold season, and the result has been that, in more than one instance, the chiefs have profited by their position, and have countenanced outrages or aggressions which would never have occurred if a responsible officer had been stationed on the spot or in the neighbourhood. To remedy this state of things, and also to ensure for the Maharajah of Bhurtpore, who must shortly be invested with the direct government of his principality, the continued support of a British officer in case of need, the following redistribution of the States of Rajpootana has been made amongst the several political agents:—1st. Jeysulmere has been placed under the political agent at Jodhpore. 2nd. Bikaner, under the control of the assistant permanently stationed at Sojjangurh. 3rd. Kishengurh, under the political agent at Jeypore. 4th. Tonk and Shahpoora, under the political agent at Kotah (Harowtee.) 5th. Alwar, Bhurtpore, Dholopore and Kerowlee have been formed into one agency to be designated "the agency for the Eastern States of Rajpootana." The first four changes will cost nothing, but the fifth will involve a charge, in round numbers, of 30,000 rupees on the Imperial Treasury; and this has been recommended to the Financial Department.

RUNNING AMUK.—Yesterday a case came on for hearing before the Howrah authorities which is happily of very rare occurrence. On Monday evening, between seven and eight o'clock, a Mahomedan khalassie, an up-country man, ran amuk in a narrow lane, and before he was arrested had cut down no less than eleven persons, four men, three women, and three children. The man, Sahawut Ally, it appears, was very jealous, and not without cause, of his wife. He assigns her misconduct as the cause of the fury which possessed him, and finding he could get no redress for his grievances from the Howrah authorities, he appears to have determined to revenge himself upon mankind in general. He seized a hoseine tulwar, and rushing out into the narrow lane in which his house is situated, he cut down every soul he met, and as it was some little time before two constables came up, and after a struggle succeeded in mastering him, the list of his victims is unfortunately very heavy:—Suneechar Bibi, seriously wounded; Chundra Bibi, seriously wounded; Dilmunia Bibi, seriously wounded; Rungceah (a girl of twelve), dead; Edia (an infant of six months), dead; Dhumoman (a boy of ten), seriously wounded; Shaikh Islam, seriously wounded; Shaikh Wuzer, cut on the arm; Shaikh Jokhan, cut on the arm; Shaikh Muckdoom Buksh, severe cut on the right hand; Mukocman (a girl of twelve), cut on the forehead. As soon as the miscreant was secured the wounded were removed to the Howrah General Hospital, where, Dr. Bird having been warned beforehand, every attention was shown. Two died shortly after admittance into the hospital, and several of the others are in a very precarious state, as, not content with cutting his victims down, the ruffian hacked at them with his sword, inflicting numerous wounds. Captain Gordon, the superintendent of police, was speedily on the spot, and it is entirely owing to his exertions that the wounded were so promptly attended to.—Englishman, May 12.

Madras.

MILITARY.—The Madras Athenæum understands that Lieutenant-colonel R. Morton, of the Royal Artillery, who has just vacated his appointment of Commissary of Ordnance at Rangoon, consequent on his promotion, is likely to succeed Lieutenant-colonel E. T. Fasken, R.A., who is about proceeding to England on two years' furlough.

GOOTY.—The snort of the iron-horse has now been heard at Gooty, forty-eight miles from Bellary, on the north-west line of railway in Madras. The contractor's first train entered Gooty Station on the morning of the 11th May, and a train was to run daily with railway material to that station after the 20th May. Cholera had unfortunately broken out in the neighbourhood of Gooty; ten deaths occurred on the 9th May, and great fear was entertained of its spreading.

MADRAS UNIVERSITY.—A ripe scholar himself, it is but natural that the Governor of Madras should encourage higher education by every means in his power. Three Bachelor Scholarships, of the value of Rs. 70 each per mensem, tenable for three years at the University of Madras, have been sanctioned by his Excellency in Council, the charge being met from savings under the head of "Education, Science, and Art." Though the number of scholarships has been confined to three, in the meantime his Excellency hopes that some of the wealthy native gentlemen of the presidency will follow the example set by Government, and promote the encouragement of education by the foundation of an additional number of Bachelor Scholarships recommended by the Senate.

THE PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL COMPANY.—A correspondent of the Madras Mail, who formed one of a party proceeding to England from India, by the Brindisi route, makes a complaint regarding the treatment by the Peninsular and Oriental Company of passengers which he had not heard before. Speaking of the rolling and pitching properties of the steamer in which he proceeded to Brindisi from Alexandria, he says:—"I will say this of the Peninsular and Oriental boats that, take them all in all, they are incomparably superior to any rivals of theirs I have ever sailed in. The only pity is that with such ships, and with such a company, they (the directors or officers) should in any way leave room for complaint—at least any reasonable complaint. But they do. For instance, take one fact. They quietly tell passengers who have only booked for Suez, that they have nothing more to do with them, on arriving at that place; and having placed their luggage on deck, leave them to land as they best can, giving them no assistance whatever; indeed, rather the other way, making them feel, as if they intended they should feel, that they deserve very scant treatment at their hands for not having booked all the way to Southampton. This was so marked at Suez, and the number of passengers for that place only was so great, that the subject formed a topic of universal conversation. 'This treatment is small,' to say the least of it, and cannot in any way answer its purpose. If the Peninsular and Oriental Company are afraid of the Brindisi route, let them put one or two of their splendid vessels on that line. That, it seems to me, would be the legitimate way to keep everything in their own hands."

THE NAIKRAS.—It will be remembered that in the beginning of last year an outbreak occurred amongst the Naikras belonging to the Narokote district of the Punch Mehals in this presidency, which necessitated a resort to military force before it could be effectually quelled. With a view to maintain communication with the Naikra districts, and as a safeguard against future disturbances, the Bombay Government applied for an annual grant from the Imperial revenues of Rs. 4,000 as an experimental measure, for five years, for clearing the jungles and improving the cart tracks in these districts. The Government of India has sanctioned the expenditure, on the understanding that it must be debited to the revenues of the Punch Mehals.

CO-OPERATION IN MADRAS.—The directors of the Madras Co-operative Society have submitted to the shareholders a special report containing an outline of its operations for the half-year ending 31st January last, being a little less than six months since actual working was commenced. Notwithstanding the many and serious difficulties the directors have met with, not the least of which were the active competition of the native vendors, and the prejudices of prudent house-wives against the threatened abolition of old-established custom, the society's operations are now being fully understood and appreciated. As the local wholesale market could not be wholly depended upon for articles of fair quality and at remunerative prices, arrangements have been made with reliable agents in the Mofussil, and large supplies are periodically received at the stores, thereby securing to shareholders the full benefit of the operations which the society intended to produce. The rigid adherence to "correct weights and measures" has resulted in the steadily increasing number of purchasers comprising all ranks of society, and the results of the society's operations for such a short period, and its present highly satisfactory position, cannot but be gratifying to the shareholders.—Madras Times.

ALLEGED WAHABEE PLOT AT VELLORE.—We have withheld any notice of the threatened sedition at Vellore for some days, as it has been difficult to ascertain the facts. At one time we feared that an attempt to repeat the tragedy of the 10th of July, 1806, would be made, but were consoled by the absence of any movement of European troops. But all danger has been happily averted, if ever there was much to be apprehended. It appears that last week an East Indian reported that he had overheard a conversation in the bazaar between two Mussulmen, from which he gathered that a rising was contemplated. The result of the first inquiry has not been communicated to us with great accuracy; but, as far as we can learn, meetings had been held at a mosque where sedition had been preached by a Wahabee. The Joint Magistrate and the Deputy Inspector General of Police are now at Vellore prosecuting full inquiry into the matter but we have not yet been able to gather any further particulars.—Madras Athenæum.—A correspondent of the same journal writes:—On Saturday last a Mussulman of Vellore went to the engineer in charge of the range there, and stated that a widely formed plot had been made up by a set of Wahabees for the murder of every European in the station. The day was fixed for the 21st or 30th of the present month. The engineer reported the matter to the C.O. of the station, who re-reported the matter to the Sub-Collector and the head of the Police. Both these gentlemen were in the district at the time, but immediately flew to head-quarters. On Sunday and Monday they carried on their inquiries with closed doors, and on Monday afternoon several warrants were issued. The greater haste in this case proved to be the worst speed. Had a little time been taken approvers who now hold back would easily have come forward. There can be no doubt that hundreds are concerned in the plot, and have been holding meetings about two miles out of Vellore for the past month, and it is much feared that some of the military are concerned in the affair."

THE SCINDE RAILWAY COMPANY AND ITS ASSOCIATED UNDERTAKINGS.

We read with much interest the important report of the proceedings of a meeting of proprietors in these companies, held for the purpose of considering the propriety of the obtaining of an Act of Parliament, empowering the company to amalgamate their several undertakings into one. We cannot well over-congratulate all concerned on the matter. The plan commends itself to common sense; and now that it has been acknowledged and sanctioned, we may hope for a speedy and beneficial change in the hitherto languishing affairs of both the Railway Company and the Flotilla. The scheme for the amalgamation of the several undertakings concerned is by no means a new one. On the contrary, it was a familiar idea to the general body of the proprietors of long standing, and one always entertained as an event which must sooner or later occur, from the fact of the mutuality of interests involved. The precise period when the amalgamation should take place, and the mode in which it should take effect, were the only matters of uncertainty remaining to be settled.

The merits of the proposed amalgamation scheme lie within the compass of a nutshell. Look at it how we may, there seems no solid objection to it discoverable. The Bill which has received the sanction of the proprietors is a Bill purely permissive. The question when or whether the amalgamation shall be carried out, is a matter for future deliberation. But let it not be forgotten that, in terms of the resolution to which the shareholders are now pledged—"it is of the utmost importance that early steps be taken to unite the several sections of railway in the company's hands in one continuous line;" and therefore that the "missing link," the line between Kotree and Mooltan, be added to the system forthwith.

We are aware that during the past months there has entered into the question of the so much-needed "missing link" a new element. Government has proposed to supply it. And it may be safely asserted that, whether the Sind Railway and the association of undertakings therewith connected are or are not entrusted with the construction of the "missing link," that line will be made, because it is an indispensable line. If it be not supplied by private enterprise, it will assuredly sooner or later be made, nevertheless, because it is a necessary line, and it will be made by the Government. Yet nothing could be more injurious to the whole of the system than that either the Government or a separate proprietorship should make it. If the Government were to make it, it would be impossible to speculate as to the time when it would be completed.

The plain proposition now made is that shareholders exchange their shares in the Delhi, the Punjab, the Scinde, and the Indus Steam Flotilla for shares in the Amalgamated Company. By this means the concession of the missing link will be soonest obtained, by which the several sections of the great highway of communication will be united in one continuous system. The project is one fraught with the utmost importance to shareholders in a financial point of view; it will prove of enormous benefit to India generally, and it will conduce largely to the good of the mother country.—The Indian, May 8.

Miscellaneous.

MILITARY.—It is said that Major Rouse, Paymaster of the 3rd Hussars, exchanges with Major Fred. Lukin, of the Bays, on the latter corps going home next cold season.

BISHOP MEURIN.—The Right Rev. Dr. Meurin, Roman Catholic Bishop of Bombay, left for Suez on Wednesday last per the S.S. Magdala. He proceeds to France and Germany, and towards the close of the year will visit Rome. We understand that one of his principal objects is to collect funds towards the cost of the new college on the Esplanade. In addition to the large sum already expended, nearly a lac of rupees are still required for the purpose. Before leaving his residence at the Fort Chapel the Bishop pronounced a solemn benediction on a numerous congregation. From the chapel Dr. Meurin's carriage was accompanied by a large number of gentlemen belonging to his community, and at the Apollo Bunder a crowd of persons in humbler life had congregated. All joined in an affectionate farewell to their departing diocesan.

A SAD MISADVENTURE.—The Poona Observer hears a strange and lamentable story from Belgaum. An officer of the 108th Regiment was out shikaring, a few days ago, and came upon a bear. Apparently missing with his own piece, he turned to his shikari to hand him his spare rifle. The shikari, however, becoming excited, instead of handing his rifle, fired it at the bear himself—with so ill an aim, that the bullet passed through the chest of his master, who fell dangerously wounded, and is now lying in a very critical condition. The curious part of the story is that the bullet (is said to have) passed on into the bear and killed it.

BARODA.—A letter dated Camp, Baroda, May 14th, states that "the cholera has increased to such an extent in the city that it has become necessary on the part of the station authorities to prohibit all intercourse between city and camp. A circular was sent round to-day warning all employes in the Guicowar's service that they must arrange either to reside in camp without having intercourse with the city, or remove to the city limits till further orders. Last night being ukathrey with the Hindoos, they, according to custom, sat up all night looking out for flashes of lightning, of which the more they see the luckier they believe they will be in all agricultural operations and expectations during the present year. The natives have hung strings of cocoanuts and leaves across the streets to prevent and disperse the cholera, as they firmly believe."

THE BANK OF BOMBAY.—The directors of the new Bank of Bombay have decided upon making a second issue of shares in the new bank to such shareholders of the old bank (in liquidation) as are entitled thereto, and who shall make proper application for them before the 30th proximo. A distribution of the assets of the old bank, at the rate of Rs. 50 per share, is to be made on that date, and proprietors wishing to take up their proportionate allotment of reserved shares of the new bank must make their dividend warrants payable to the secretary and treasurer, in part payment of the said shares. This increase of the capital of the new bank will make it a difficult matter for the management to earn satisfactory dividends for the shareholders, especially while the Bank of Bengal continues to be allowed to encroach upon Bombay as it has done too long already. But the removal of the branch of the Bank of Bengal is now only a matter of a few weeks or months at most; and the opinion of the Government of India, notwithstanding Mr. Cowie's pleading, is that justice must be done at once; and with fair play the new bank, even with this accession to its capital, will, we doubt not, find means of employing its funds safely and profitably.—Times of India.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

DEPUTATION ALLOWANCE—UNCOVENANTED SERVICE.

May 1.—No. 308.—The following letter to the officiating accountant-general, Bombay, is published for general information:—

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter No. 3,626a of March 19 last, inquiring, with reference to the letter No. 1,482, addressed to you from this department on the 5th idem, "whether an uncovenanted servant acting for another on a salary of less than Rs. 100 per mensem, should be permitted to draw deputation allowance under the old rules, viz., a moiety of his substantive appointment plus a moiety of the acting appointment."

2. In reply, I am desired to state that the old rules for the grant of acting allowance to uncovenanted servants have been abolished, and that the acting allowance of the substitute of an uncovenanted servant on a salary of even less than Rs. 100 per mensem, should always be regulated, if practicable, by the resolution, No. 122, passed in this department on January 6 last, whenever it is necessary formally to appoint a substitute for the absentee.

3. I am also to point out that the old rules did not, as you apparently suppose, invariably allow the substitute of an uncovenanted servant to draw half of his substantive salary and half the salary of the absentee.

THE NEW FURLOUGH RULES—CHAPLAINS.

May 3.—No. 323.—Read a letter from the Rev. R. Henderson, senior chaplain of the Church of Scotland at Calcutta, No. 20, dated March 4, submitting certain questions with reference to the sections quoted below from the rules of July 31, 1868, for the grant of leave of absence to chaplains:—

"XXV. The term of residence qualifying for pension shall be, in the case of chaplains appointed before Jan. 11, 1854, fifteen years, and, in the case of chaplains appointed on or after that date, seventeen years, but no leave, except privilege leave and subsidiary leave, shall count as residence.

"XXVI. The term of service qualifying for pension shall be, in the case of chaplains appointed before January 11, 1854, eighteen years, and, in the case of chaplains appointed on or after that date, twenty years. Leave of absence in India taken prior to August 25, 1864, shall count as service for pension, and shall not be reckoned as furlough under these rules."

Resolution.—The general questions submitted in the above letter are—

First.—Whether after the periods of residence and service specified in Sections XXV. and XXVI. of the Rules of July, 1868, have been completed, retirement is optional or compulsory.

Second.—Whether a chaplain may retire after completing either the period of residence specified in Section XXV., or the period of service specified in Section XXVI.

Third.—Whether privilege leave and subsidiary leave are the only leaves which can be reckoned as residence for pension.

Fourth.—Whether furlough for three years and all leave taken in India before the 25th August, 1864, can be reckoned as service for pension.

Fifth.—Whether leave taken in India prior to the 25th August, 1864, shall be reckoned as furlough under the Rules of July, 1868.

2. With reference to the first question, the Governor-general in Council observes that after the specified periods of residence and service have been completed, retirement is optional, not compulsory, until the completion of twenty-five years' service, when, under the orders of the Secretary of State, No. 32, dated Feb. 17, 1865, retirement is compulsory, unless a chaplain is specially retained in the service by the Secretary of State.

3. As regards the second question, H.E. in Council observes that by the orders of the late Court of Directors quoted below, chaplains were allowed to retire on pension after completing the specified period of residence without completing the prescribed period of service, but that this indulgence is at variance with the rules in the analogous case of covenanted civil servants, and may be appropriately withdrawn now that various concessions in respect to furlough and furlough allowance have been made to the ecclesiastical service in the Rules of July, 1868. H.E. in Council is accordingly pleased to rule that a chaplain shall not be permitted to retire on pension until he has completed both the period of residence specified in Section XXV. of those Rules, and the period of service specified in Section XXVI.:—Financial despatch from Court of Directors, to Government of India, No. 113, dated Dec. 28, 1855, paragraph 3.—"If a chaplain or assistant chaplain should not avail himself of the privilege of furlough, he may be permitted to retire on the regulated pension after the completion of the required period of Indian residence."

4. The third question is answered in the affirmative.

5. With reference to the fourth question, H.E. in Council observes that for the civil service all periods spent on leave count as service qualifying for pension, and with reference to the withdrawal of the indulgence referred to in paragraph 3 of this resolution, the same rule may be held to apply to chaplains.

6. As regards the fifth question, H.E. in Council observes that on Aug. 25, 1854, it was first ruled that a chaplain's absence on leave in India should not be reckoned as service qualifying for pension, and on Sept. 5, 1855,* it was decided that this rule should not have retrospective effect. The last sentence of Section XXVI. of the Rules of July, 1868, was intended merely to repeat the decision of Sept., 1855, but 1864 was misprinted in it for 1854. As, however, it is now ruled that all periods spent on leave shall be reckoned as service qualifying for pension, H.E. in Council is pleased to direct that for the last sentence of Section XXVI. the following shall be substituted:—

"All periods spent on leave of any description shall be reckoned as service qualifying for pension, and periods spent on leave in India prior to Aug. 25, 1854, shall neither be reckoned as furlough nor as actual service qualifying for furlough."

* Financial Despatch from the Court of Directors to the Government of India, No. 78, dated September 5, 1855, para. 6.

POSTING OF COVENANTED CIVIL SERVANTS.

May 5.—No. 361.—Read the undermentioned papers:—

Resolution, No. 575, passed in this department on January 31 last, ruling that covenanted civil servants posted to the Upper Division of the Bengal Presidency with permission to come to India via Bombay, shall be entitled to a salary of Rs. 400 per mensem from the date of their reporting their arrival at Bombay, and that every other such servant who shall have passed for the service under the new system referred to above, shall be entitled to a salary of Rs. 400 per mensem from the date of his reporting his arrival at the Presidency to which he belongs.

Letter to the Accountant-general, North-Western Provinces, No. 424, dated Jan. 21 last, authorising him "to pass all bills submitted by covenanted civil servants appointed to the North-Western Provinces for travelling between Bombay and Allahabad."

Letter from the Secretary to the Government of Bengal, No. 1,143, dated March 24 last, and enclosure, recommending that covenanted civil servants posted to the Lower Provinces of the Bengal Presidency, who come out to India via Bombay, should be permitted to draw salary from the date of reporting arrival at Bombay, and travelling allowance from Bombay to Calcutta.

Resolution.—On a reconsideration of the orders of Jan. 31, 1868, and January 21, 1869, the Gov. gen. in Council is of opinion that there is no reason for exempting covenanted civil servants proceeding to the North-Western Provinces from the operation of the rule which denies pay and travelling allowance to a covenanted civil servant before he reaches the Presidency to which he is posted. H.E. in Council is accordingly pleased to rule in supersession of the orders of Jan. 31, 1869, and Jan. 21, 1869, that a covenanted civil servant shall be entitled to salary at Rs. 400 per mensem from the date on which he reports his arrival either at the seat of the Government to which he is attached, or at any other station to which he may proceed direct by order of that Government at his own request, and that he shall receive no travelling allowance unless he is subsequently transferred, in which case his travelling allowance will be regulated by the rules for the grant of travelling allowance to officers transferred from one station to another.

Ordered that the foregoing resolution be published in the Gazette of India for general information.

THE FIVE PER CENT. DEBENTURES.

May 4, No. 329.—With reference to the notification of Nov. 4, 1866, No. 11, and to the further notification No. 3,623 of Dec. 21, 1868, the Governor General in Council is pleased to direct that the term of the Five per Cent. Debentures of the issue of 20 lakhs which fell due on Jan. 4, 1869, and were extended for a period of six months to July 4, 1869, shall, at the option of holders, be further extended for one year, and shall bear interest for such extended term at the rate of  $4\frac{1}{2}$  per cent.

In the event of payment in cash being demanded at any time after July 4, 1869, and before July 4, 1870, the debentures will be discharged with interest to July 3, 1869 only, at the rate of 5 per cent.

These debentures will be received at any time during the year of extended currency tendered in payment of taxes and Government dues, and in such cases will carry interest to July 4, 1869, to the date of discharge at the rate of  $4\frac{1}{2}$  per cent.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

PROMOTIONS.—GENERAL LIST.

Adj. Gen.'s Office, Head Quarters, Poona, May 11.—The following Circular Memo., dated Head Quarters, Simla, April 12, is published for information and guidance:—

The following copy of letter from the Sec. to the Govt. of India in the mil. dept., No. 1,068, dated Feb. 23, to the Adj. gen., is published for information:—

"I am directed to acquaint you, for the information of H.E. the C. in C., that the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, in reply to a reference from the Govt. of India in the mil. dept., as to whether a captain and a major were to be promoted on the Indian gradation list, in succession to each colonel made a major general consequent on the formation of the separate list of generals of the Indian artillery, has intimated that the officers of the lower grades on the general list of the Indian army, having already received the promotion due to the casualties among general officers, to which the officers of artillery had succeeded, his Grace the Duke of Argyll sees no ground for making promotions a second time in succession to those officers on their removal to the Imperial list."

WORKSHOPS—SOLDIERS' EXHIBITION.

Poona, May 10.—The C. in C. is pleased to announce that the Soldiers' Industrial Exhibition of 1869 will take place at Poona in the month of September next; and will be conducted under the same rules and regulations which governed the Exhibition of 1867.

His Lordship accordingly desires that regimental committees be at once formed in every corps, British and native, and that the names of the officers composing them be communicated without delay to the secretary to the central committee at Poona, to whom the list of proposed contributions and monthly progress reports must also be transmitted.

The officers of the army are particularly invited to enhance the interest and success of the Exhibition by contributing any art productions of their own, such as sculpture, paintings, drawings, designs, models, or inventions; and space will be gladly given for the exhibition of any curiosities, trophies, or other rare objects they may be willing to lend.

Soldiers may exhibit their pet animals, for whose performances prizes will be given.

The Exhibition will not only be open to articles manufactured in workshops, but to all industrial works being the bona fide production of soldiers, or of their wives or children, as well of native as of British regiments; and the C. in C. desires that with a view to the state of the various regimental schools being brought under his lordship's personal notice, the best specimens of work by each child capable of working be sent for inspection, the contributions being accompanied by a nominal roll of the children contributing, with their respective ages, and the period each may have been attending school.

Special prizes will be awarded to the best exhibitors among soldiers' wives, and for the best specimens of children's industry. These special prizes will be irrespective of other prizes that the same articles may obtain as specimens of their particular class of goods.

A regimental prize, consisting of a piece of plate value three hundred rupees, will be awarded to that regiment or battery which shall pre-eminently distinguish itself at the Exhibition by the variety and quality of its contributions.

A prize of seventy rupees will be given to the author of the best original essay upon the following subject:—

"The Advantages of Military Workshops, and the best system of conducting them." Competition for this prize open to all non-commissioned officers and soldiers in the Bombay army. The essays to be forwarded under seal, by regimental committees, to the secretary central committee.

Extra prizes will be given, if the funds permit, for all articles of good workmanship which are not included under any of the classes specified in the schedule; also for articles that deserve them, where there is unusual amount of competition.

The judges will be selected by H.E. the C. in C., and will be empowered to withhold prize if the articles exhibited fall below the recognised trade standard of merit.

The awards of the judges, with the list of the prize articles, and the names of their makers, will be published in the report of the central committee, copies of which will be forwarded to corps.

In cases where it will be impossible for the judges to pronounce upon the intrinsic superiority of one article over another, the prize will be given to the more moderately priced article.

If the same price be attached to both, the award will be decided by lot. If the funds however permit, a supplementary prize will generally be given.

EXPERIMENTS WITH ARTILLERY FOR INDIA.

Experiments are in progress at Shoeburyness for the purpose of deciding on a muzzle-loading field-gun suitable for India. Four bronze guns on wrought-iron carriages have been manufactured for the trial, at Woolwich, the object being to ascertain if bronze is suitable as a material for field-guns. The advantages of employing this metal are that it can be easily cast, bored, and rifled on the spot where the guns are required. When the gun is worn out, the metal of which it is composed is still valuable, and will fetch a high price in the market; besides which we have a large number of bronze-guns in India which can be recast, or otherwise adapted for use. The question to be solved is whether the bronze-gun possesses the quality of endurance? What will be the state of its bore after it has fired 500 rounds? This must be satisfactorily answered before the material is adopted, and the subject forms one of the chief points in the present investigation.

The principal dimensions of the four 9-pounder guns now submitted to experiment are as follows:—

Nature and Weight.	Rifling.	Length of Rifling. Inches.	Length of Bore. Inches.	Proposed Charge. lb. oz.
No. 366, 8 cwt. ... ..	Woolwich ... ..	59.8 ... ..	63.5 ... ..	1 5
No. 367, 8 cwt. ... ..	Do., modified ... ..	59.8 ... ..	63.5 ... ..	1 5
No. 364, 6 cwt. ... ..	Woolwich ... ..	49.3 ... ..	53.0 ... ..	1 2
No. 363, 6 cwt. ... ..	Do., modified ... ..	49.3 ... ..	53.0 ... ..	1 2

The dimensions common to all the guns are—diameter of bore, 3 inches; number of grooves, 3; width of ditto, 0.8 inch; depth of ditto, 0.11 inch; spiral, one turn in 90 inches. Projectiles: common shell, 9 lb. weight, with two rings of zinc studs 0.75 inches wide, 3.6 inches from centre to centre; diameter over the body of the shell, 2.94 inches. The modified form of Woolwich groove was proposed by a member of the committee, Colonel Maxwell, the superintendent of the Cossipore Foundry. It consists in planing off one of the edges of the groove, by which a more perfect centering action is expected.

The experiments commenced with a trial for velocity, which resulted in showing a slight excess for Nos. 365 and 363, as compared with the other two guns. This corresponded with the recoil, and subsequently with the observed ranges. The guns were next tested for angle of departure or "jump," when it was found that the shot rose about 3.4 inches above the level in a distance of 40 yards; and as it should have fallen about two inches by gravity in this distance, the experiment gave a total of 5.4 inches as the base of the angle subtending the "jump," or, in other words, about 13 minutes; that is to say, when the gun is fired with the axis of the bore perfectly parallel with the ground the shot leaves at an angle of 13 minutes. The recoil takes place before the projectile leaves the piece, and its effect is to throw up the muzzle. This angle, which enters into all calculations with regard to trajectory, &c., having been determined, the guns were fired at all elevations, from 0 to 10 degs., and the ranges and deflections noted in the usual manner. The final result showed a decided superiority in range and deflection in favour of the guns of 8 cwt., No. 365 being the best. The subjoined table shows that the practice with this gun at three elevations falls but little short of the best examples on record:—

Number of rounds.	Elevation.	Ranges.			Mean difference of range. Yards.	Mean error of deflection. Yards.
		Minimum. Yards.	Maximum. Yards.	Mean. Yards.
10 ... ..	2 deg. ... ..	1,055 ... ..	1,109 ... ..	1,083 ... ..	13.9 ... ..	0.38
10 ... ..	5 deg. ... ..	2,057 ... ..	2,123 ... ..	2,098 ... ..	13.5 ... ..	1.62
10 ... ..	10 deg. ... ..	3,268 ... ..	3,382 ... ..	3,334 ... ..	20.4 ... ..	2.16

We trust that these experiments, having now commenced, will go forward rapidly, and that the committee will shortly be in a position to say whether bronze-guns can be depended on in a 3-inch calibre. —Pall Mall Gazette.

Miscellaneous.

SUSPENSION OF AN EAST INDIAN FIRM.—The suspension is announced of Messrs. S. Isaac Campbell and Co., merchants, East India-avenue. The firm have had large transactions, but were understood to be in difficulties some years ago, from which they have never completely recovered. Their name has been prominent lately in connection with the reclamations against the Spanish Government for the capture of the Tornado. The amount of outstanding liabilities is about £140,000, and an unfavourable liquidation seems to be anticipated.

HENDERSON v. HENDERSON.—This case was before the Divorce Court on June 5. The petitioner was originally the widow of an India merchant; but in 1853 she was married to Henderson, who was a medical man at Clifton. Their chief means of subsistence was a small income which had been left to petitioner by her former husband. The respondent behaved ill to her, and committed adultery with one of her servants. In 1861 he went to India for a short time, and on his return he lived with his wife for three days, after which he deserted her altogether. She was obliged to apply to the parochial authorities for relief, and they took proceedings against him for desertion. The justices ordered him to pay the petitioner a weekly sum; but instead of doing so, he absconded, and had not since been heard of. Decree nisi.

BOMBAY, BARODA, AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY COMPANY.—The report of the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway Company has been issued for the six months ending the 31st Dec. last. It states that the gross receipts amounted to £167,658, as compared with £160,384 in the corresponding period of 1867—an increase of £7,274, of which £5,198 arises from coaching, and £2,076 from merchandise traffic. The working expenses were £119,278, against £126,411, showing a decrease of £7,133. The net revenue has been £48,379. 14s. 4d., as compared with £33,972. 6s. 1d. in the corresponding period. The new works, it is stated, are making fair progress, and the completion of the railway to Colaba, Bombay, may be said to be at hand. The reclamation work at Back Bay is all but finished, and the local Government has sanctioned the erection of a temporary station at the Marine Lines. The board hope that the extension may be utilised for the carriage of cotton to the Colaba Cotton Green this season, and that the terminal arrangements at Colaba, the Carnac Bunder, and the Marine Lines will be proceeded with with all possible despatch. Until these are fully carried out the traffic legitimately belonging to the railway cannot be properly developed. An agreement has been entered into with the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Company for the working of the local Mahim, Bandora and Bombay traffic, and for the conveyance of goods by each company over the line of the other, south of Parell Junction, within the island of Bombay. The report also alludes to the diminished merchandise traffic in certain goods, particularly cotton.

WILL OF SIR JAMES EMERSON-TENNENT.—The will of Sir James Emerson-Tennent, Bart., formerly M.P., of 66, Warwick-square, Pimlico, and of Tempo, Ireland, was proved in London by John Pender, Esq., formerly M.P., of Crumpsall House, Manchester; John Pitt Taylor, Esq., of Eccleston-square, Barrister-at-Law; and James Torrens, Esq., of Belfast, the acting executors and trustees. The personality was sworn under £6,000.

FINANCES OF INDIA.—The finance and revenue accounts for India for the year 1867-8 have just been published. The total amount of revenues and receipts was £9,283,991; and the total amount of expenditure, £8,520,692; leaving a surplus of £763,299. The chief items of revenue are: From land, £3,612,612; from opium, £2,356,938. The chief items of expenditure are: Army, £2,780,767; public works, £5,881,257. The estimated surplus for the year 1868-9 is £1,396,793.

PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY.—The half-yearly general meeting of this company was held on Friday, at the offices, Leadenhall-street; Mr. P. D. Hadow, the chairman, presided. The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, said that it was fourteen months up to the 30th of April last since the extended contract for postal service came into operation, but nothing had occurred during the past six months to alter the views he had expressed at the last meeting. The result of their operations had been satisfactory and encouraging, although not to any great extent, except that they had had an entire immunity from casualties. Mr. Gibbons seconded the motion for the adoption of the report. A long discussion ensued, in which Mr. Gliddon, Mr. Baddeley, Mr. J. Jones, Mr. Grant, and other shareholders took part, as to the exercise of more economy and respecting the competition of various steam companies extending along nearly the whole route of the company's steamers. The Chairman replied to the various observations. He said that they worked as economically as possible, and that every new vessel built for the company was constructed and fitted with the latest improvements so as to insure the utmost economy and efficiency. They had applied to the Imperial Government repeatedly to improve the dangerous harbour of Port de Galle, but without effect. The report was unanimously adopted; a dividend of 3 per cent., free of income-tax, was declared for the half year ending the 31st of March last, payable on the 25th inst. The meeting was then made special to elect an auditor in the room of the Earl of Leven and Melville, who had resigned. There were two candidates, Mr. Rait and Mr. Godfrey, but the latter gentleman was elected, and the proceedings concluded with a vote of thanks to the chairman and directors.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, June 8.—THE ABYSSINIAN EXPEDITION.—Mr. CANDLISH moved for a Select Committee to inquire into the causes of the great excess of cost in prosecuting the war with Abyssinia over the estimate submitted to Parliament. He reminded the House that £2,000,000 was first asked for, and that the outside estimate was £3,500,000. This demand was subsequently increased to £5,000,000, and in the end the cost was found to be between eight and a-half and nine millions, or equivalent to £5,000,000 more than the original, and three and a-half millions more than the second and amended estimate. These facts were, he submitted, sufficient to justify the motion, for they showed that very serious mistakes had been made somewhere.—The motion was seconded by Sir S. NORTHGOTE, who observed that the grounds upon which Mr. Candlish had moved were perfectly fair and legitimate, and that if a similar course to that now adopted were taken in other like cases it would conduce materially to economy, and have a beneficial effect on the Executive Government in keeping them up to their duty. The late Government were anxious for an inquiry, because they believe it would show that they had acted with perfect bona-fides in the matter, and according to the information they had received as to the country and the nature of the service to be performed. He hoped that the House would suspend its final judgment until the circumstances of the case had been thoroughly sifted.—Mr. MUNDELLA enlarged upon the gross and lavish expenditure connected with the invasion of Abyssinia, which he contended was not only unnecessary, but beyond all precedent.—In the course of the debate which ensued, and in which Mr. EASTWICK, Sir C. WINGFIELD, Captain BEAUMONT, and Colonel SYKES took part, the latter gentleman stated, as an illustration of the extravagance that had characterised the expedition, that mules could have been bought in the country at £4 per head, while the Government had imported them at £40 per head.—Mr. OTWAY, in consenting on the part of the Government to the appointment of the committee, admitted that a large excess had occurred in the expenditure, and that the subject was one into which a rigid inquiry might with advantage be instituted. The motion for a committee therefore had the full concurrence of the Government.—Mr. F. WALPOLE expressed his surprise at the acerbity of tone exhibited by those on the opposite side in favour of the motion, and gave it as his opinion that when the whole facts were known the verdict of the country would be creditable to the conduct of the late Government.—Sir J. D. ELPHINSTONE urged that the inquiry should be extended so as to embrace the causes which led to the invasion of Abyssinia.—After a few words from Mr. AYRTON and Mr. LUSK the motion was agreed to.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, June 10.—THE MAHARAJAH OF MYSORE.—Sir S. NORTHGOTE asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether it was true that General Haines had resigned the office of guardian to the young Maharajah of Mysore; and, if so, on what grounds. And whether any change was to be made in the arrangements for the guardianship of the young prince.—Mr. GRANT DUFF said: In answer to my right hon. friend's first question, I have to say that it is true that General Haines has resigned his appointment. This we know officially. The cause we do not know officially, but I have reason to believe that General Haines took a view different from that of the Government of India with respect to the nomination of a particular person to be controller of the young Maharajah's household, that he was censured by the Government of India, and that he resigned in consequence. We have received a telegram to say that Colonel Malleison has succeeded him as guardian.

ARMY OF RESERVE.—Lord ELCHO brought on his motion on army reserve, which he explained in a lengthy and elaborate speech, concluding with a resolution declaring the establishment of a sufficient and reliable army of reserve is a matter of urgent necessity. Of all the schemes suggested he preferred Sir H. Grant's. By this the term of enlistment would be for twenty-one years—seven years in active service in the line, seven in the first reserve liable to foreign service if called on, and seven in the second reserve, only liable for home defence; and he calculated that if this scheme, which might be tried alongside of the present system, were set in operation at once, at the end of fourteen years, at an annual cost of a little over half a million for extra pay, the regular army would have a reserve of 130,000 men, of whom half would be available for foreign service. He recommended that a certain number of the militia, according to a roster, should be liable for foreign service; but he laid most stress on an enforcement of the ballot. For the volunteers, he recommended improvement of organisation, the division of England into districts, and more frequent drill in large masses, and he wound up by some general speculations on the possibility of our being called on to go to war at some period for Belgium or Egypt. The motion was seconded by Mr. AKROYD, who expressed great confidence that the ballot would be popular with the working classes, and that the volunteer force was that in which their services would be most readily obtained. After speeches from Colonel LINDSAY, Lord BURY, Colonel NORTH and others, Mr. CARDWELL agreed with many of Lord Elcho's views, but gave an unreserved opposition to the ballot, particularly at the present moment, when recruiting for the army and militia had never been more brisk, and when, the yeomanry being full and the volunteers gradually increasing, there was no necessity for coercive measures. We had ample materials of every kind at hand for an army of reserve. What we wanted was an efficient organisation to combine them. He hoped next session to submit a plan which would establish periods of service—comparatively short, but long enough to cover Indian reliefs—and which would secure a due admixture of young and old soldiers. As to the reserve forces, the country would be divided into manageable districts, in which there would be a staff to take charge of all the forces within it, whether regular or reserve. Various measures which he explained were in contemplation for the improvement of the militia. The yeomanry, it was hoped, would be converted into mounted rifles, and as to the volunteers, inquiries were being made whether further aid could be given them under more stringent conditions of efficiency. Plans were also being considered for the organisation of the staff, and from all these measures Mr. Cardwell expected to put our military power on the most efficient footing—a small army at home in time of peace capable of expansion, and ample reserve force behind to fill it up when necessary.—A lengthened debate terminated in the motion being withdrawn.—In answer to Captain BEAUMONT, Mr. CARDWELL gave some explanations as to the comparative merits of the Moncrieff carriage and iron shields.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FRIDAY, June 11.—PUNJAB TENANCY ACT.—Mr. GRANT-DUFF, in reply to Mr. C. DENISON, said the Government had no information as to the Governor-General of India having it in contemplation to rescind the provisions of this Act.

BONUS COMPENSATION.

The Naval and Military Gazette is surprised and sorry to learn that there should be any difference among certain officers of exalted rank as to the justice of the claims. It is an insult to common understandings to urge that the repayment of the sums subscribed in the subordinate ranks is an equitable return to the numerous disappointed old officers who would have obtained the bonus on retirement. As well might it be pretended that the ends of justice are satisfied when the premia paid on policies of insurance are returned to the holders of policies who have looked forward to a very much larger sum, when the contingency for which they have been providing has arrived. It has been urged that the claimants to the bonus have not accurately stated the amounts they respectively paid to ensure the amount expected on retirement. Possibly not. Men in the "good old days," anterior to the amalgamation, did not keep accurate accounts of their outlay. They paid ungrudgingly what they were called upon to pay, never dreaming they would be asked for a statement of their expenditure, in view to a pitiful reimbursement. This haggling about the relative claims of individuals is merely a device to postpone or get rid of the trouble of a little calculation. It seems to us that the Duke of Argyll could easily set one of the clerks in the India-office to work to settle an average based upon a review of the condition of each officer who looks for compensation. He might take, first, the officers who retired before the amalgamation; then the officers who retired when the mutiny took place, as they then stood; then the officers who retired upon the amalgamation; and finally the officers below the rank of lieutenant-colonel, now in the service, taking them as they stood on the amalgamation, not giving them the benefit of the vacancies caused by the retirements at the amalgamation, provided they retire as majors. With this array before him the Duke of Argyll could tell at a glance what would be sufficient to meet the whole case. We have been informed by those who have been at the trouble to "foot up" the whole cost, that £300,000 would pay all retired officers two-thirds of what they would have received but for the unlucky mutiny. Probably one-half would satisfy the greater portion of the officers. Is it not worth the while of the noble Secretary of State for India to get a receipt in full for the paltry sum of £150,000, and put an end to all the cavil and remonstrance arising out of the denial—or at least the delay—of justice to the Indian officers?

THE ABYSSINIAN INQUIRY.

The Spectator has no doubt that money was wasted in the conduct of the Abyssinian expedition; we always do waste money. No doubt the prices given were exorbitant; no doubt, also, a strict inquiry might elicit odd instances of collusion between owners and go-betweens, transactions in commission not at all to be excused; but the master evil, for which neither Sir Robert Napier nor Sir S. Fitzgerald, nor, in fact, any other person is responsible, is that the mobilisation of our army is out of India inadequately provided for, and that even in India it breaks down before a few hundred miles of sea. Why the State should submit to this form of plunder, why it should not claim the right to take anything it needs for war, as it takes land, say, at 50 per cent. above the prices then ruling, is one of those problems which it would take a history of Great Britain to explain. At all events, we do not take them, and till we do we must be content to pay, and revenge ourselves afterwards by placing the officers who have succeeded, and whom we have honoured for succeeding, virtually on their trial for incapacity. We do not hang great officers now pour encourager les autres, that would be too energetic; we only harass them into their graves by inquiries into their responsibility for the defects of a system which, in spite of its defects, they have made work. It is quite right, this inquiry of Mr. Candlish's—quite right—and one of the meanest right things ever done, besides.

The Standard does not contend that if clear and definite charges of extravagance can be brought against the Bombay Government any persons guilty of recklessness in spending public money ought to escape blame because they did the work well which they were called upon to perform. But no precise allegations are made, and the people who are now calling out for a hostile inquiry into the circumstances under which the Abyssinian force was equipped appear to be going simply on the ground that the total sum spent was very large. That the Standard maintains to be an altogether insufficient reason for casting any suspicion of extravagance upon the Indian Administration. The first estimate of £5,000,000 was merely a guess as to what the cost of preparations which had been set on foot without any reference to their cost might probably amount to. That the actual cost has proved to be a great deal more is a result which we must all regret equally; but for those of us who are not anxious to convert the expedition to the purposes of a party attack there is at all events the consolation of feeling that great as the cost of the Abyssinian campaign undoubtedly was, still it is one upon the whole conduct and results of which we can reflect with unalloyed pleasure.

The Pall Mall Gazette points out that of course it is easy to say that war is and always must be exceedingly wasteful, but it is impossible not to feel that this cannot always have been the case. A very large proportion of the wars which may be almost said to form the staple of history must, from the nature of the case, have been done a good deal cheaper than this Abyssinian campaign; yet before the days of Lord Napier of Magdala there lived and fought a great variety of brave men and victorious generals who certainly spent much less under considerably greater difficulties. It is hard to avoid an uneasy suspicion, when we read of such transactions as took place in Abyssinia, that military life, which surely ought to be a model of severe simplicity, has been deeply affected by the general spirit of the age in which we live, and by what writers half a century ago would have described as the spread of luxury. Is it absolutely impossible to carry on war in a simpler and harder fashion than the modern one, and with a smaller amount of expensive apparatus than our present habits seem to oblige us to use? When we see a man setting out on a sporting expedition with a wonderful equipment culled from all the most expensive gunmakers, fishing-tackle makers, tailors, and other purveyors of sporting materials to be found in London, we do not usually suppose that he means to do so very much more killing than people who make less fuss about it; and may it not be the same with respect to war? No doubt, if we ever had to carry on a great European contest, it would be unsafe to dispense with any help that is to be got from art or science, as our antagonists would be sure to use them to the utmost, but we should have thought it by no means impossible to dispose of a set of savages like the Abyssinians in a more summary way. Sir Stafford Northcote says that the Government found themselves suddenly called upon to provide for "40,000 men and 30,000 animals." It is no use to grumble; but is it to be laid down as a principle that whenever an English army takes the field, even if it goes out to fight against an enemy who is universally known to be utterly unable to look it in the face, it is to be equipped upon this sort of scale, and to have provision for every conceivable want which any portion of it can possibly experience under any circumstances? Is it necessary for an army to carry with it wherever it goes everything which the most highly civilised of mankind have trained themselves to regard as necessities? When we read in Froissart of the way in which the Scotch, or in Mount Stuart Elphinstone and Grant Duff of the way in which the Mahrattas, would sweep over vast tracts of country at the rate of forty and fifty miles a day, it is impossible not to feel that civilisation has its drawbacks as well as its strong side. Of course, a mere raid by predatory cavalry, who support themselves by plunder, is a very different thing from civilised warfare, conducted on the principle of not laying waste the enemy's country, and no rational person would complain of Lord Napier for not commanding such a force as would have followed Sevajee or his successors; but surely some sort of compromise between the two systems must be possible. If one could be found, it would be eminently desirable to adopt it.

THE TREASURY AS A JUDICIAL BODY.

The Economist observes that the present Treasury being a strong body is inclined to do strong things, among which we may now include its revival of the privilege of holding a judicial Court—a privilege which has been in abeyance since the days of Lord Liverpool. It was certainly rather surprising to read in last Monday's law report a notice of a case "before the Lords Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury—present, the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, Right Hon. R. Lowe, James Stansfeld, Esq., Hon. Captain Vivian, the Marquis of Lansdowne"—who are about the last people in the country that anybody would think of as judges, whatever their latent fitness for the duties of the office may be. We cannot say we approve of the revival of the old privilege. There is a clear distinction between administrative and judicial functions, the qualities of mind and training suited for the one being rarely consistent with fitness for the other. For their own sake administrators should keep to matters of policy and expediency; and when a question of a strictly legal character as to past transactions arises, obtain the decision of some independent body. The point discussed arose in the interminable matter of the Banda and Kirwee booty, and might just as well have been referred to a legal body as the great problem of constructive capture decided by Dr. Lushington. It was whether £260,000 India Five per Cent. stock, standing in the names of certain rebel chiefs, was to be divided as part of the prize; and it seems even more strictly a legal point than that of "constructive capture," which involved a very careful study of the reasons of expediency for which prize is granted to soldiers. The Treasury at least does not shrink from work when it accepts the burden of deciding this matter, which it might so well leave in other hands.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE. The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Remedial Uses and Action.

THIS INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of Opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Colic, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

Those exhaustive diseases—Fever, Ague—so common in tropical climates, are rapidly arrested, and the cold stage in a few moments checked by a timely dose, when warmth and a general glow of the system is established, and comfort secured.

As a Sedative, Neurotic, and Antispasmodic, it is unequalled by any other known Medicine, and not to be surpassed in its specific effects.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec., 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered, the patient recovered.

Mrs. Forbes, wife of the Chaplain at Paris.—"I cannot speak too highly of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne; I have not in any single instance been disappointed with the result, even in aggravated cases of Indian Cholera."

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not 'supply a want and fill a place.'"

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

CHLORODYNE, the Great Remedy for CHOLERA.—See Report in the Times, Sept. 6, from the Malta Correspondent, who states, August 24th, that "108 cases and eighty-one deaths occurred at Messina; 50,000 people fled from the town, which is in a most deplorable condition; that Chlorodyne has been found most efficacious as a remedy, and a number of persons are reported to have been saved by its use."

Now as there are various imitations sold under the name of Chlorodyne, containing Indian Hemp, Morphia, &c., ingredients highly adverse to the cure of Cholera, the public are cautioned against the use of any compound under the name of Chlorodyne, unless it bears the name of Dr. J. Collis Browne, who coined the word Chlorodyne to designate his wonderful discovery, which he fully tested for many years in her Majesty's Service before introducing it to the public, the wonderful success of which has given rise to various imitations totally different to genuine Chlorodyne. See the decision of Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood, reported in the Times, July 13th, 1864.

The extraordinary medical reports on the efficacy of Chlorodyne renders it a subject of most vital importance that the public should obtain the genuine, which is now sold under the protection of the Government of Great Britain, authorising a stamp, bearing the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne," without which none is genuine. Sold in bottles, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d., by all Chemists. Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London.

ENGLISH HOMES IN INDIA.

PART I.—THE THREE LOVES. | PART II.—THE WRONG TURNING.

PUBLISHERS' NOTICE.

The writer of these volumes—an accomplished member of a family whose name is conspicuous in Indian story—being now resident in India, they have not had the benefit of her final corrections. It is hoped, however, that this inevitable drawback will detract but little from the pleasure to be afforded by the perusal of the tales, which are, indeed, what they profess to be, stories of English Homes in India, represented as such homes are in different parts of the country and under various social and professional aspects. They endeavour fairly and without exaggeration to illustrate Anglo-Indian life as it is, in its many varying phases, and to bring upon the scene, in their everyday costume, many kinds of Anglo-Indian workmen, from the Resident at a Native Court, to the subaltern officer and the railway employé; and it is believed that all who have visited the countries described will recognise the truth of the portraiture.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, May 25; Agra, May 22; Calcutta, May 21; Madras, May 19. Owing to the departure of the previous mail only three days before, the Bombay editors have not troubled themselves to make up fresh summaries for the one just arrived. In fact, as Sunday came between the despatch of the two mails, there was probably nothing new to write about.

NOR is there much to glean from the papers of the other Presidencies. The first cyclone which passed near Calcutta—on the 16th May—seems to have burst over Narail, about twenty miles to the east of Jessore, doing a large amount of damage. No losses had yet been heard of in the Bay of Bengal.

THE comments of the Indian press on Sir Barnes Peacocke provoked the Chief Justice into a formal vindication of his conduct, delivered in open court. The pith of it will be found elsewhere. If it was needful to take such a step, the Chief Justice has certainly gone far to prove his assailants substantially in the wrong. Nothing can justify the publishing of statements which manifestly distort or conceal the truth; and of that Mr. Tayler was clearly guilty. The Englishman's comments likewise clearly outran the limits of fair criticism, and rendered that journal amenable to law. Nor does it seem that Mr. Tayler was treated with undue rigour or the editor of the Englishman with any real discourtesy. But it is still a question whether Sir Barnes was not too sensitive to the unfair comments of a few journals, and we should say that his last performance had better been left alone.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Delhi Gazette, writing from Peshawar, reports the capture of Herat by Azim Khan, and the concealment of the news by Shere Ali's general, Yakoob Khan.

It is also said that a body of Kakries and Beloochies has attacked Girishk. But the news requires confirmation.

AMONG other items of Bengal news we learn that Mr. J. Shaw Stewart has resigned his seat in the Governor-general's Council, that the railway from Umballa to Loodianah will not be opened till next September, and that teak is being largely planted in Pegu.

FROM Madras we are assured that the story about the Wahabee conspiracy at Vellore has no other foundation than the fact of some dispute on an utterly different question between two sections of native residents. This is not at all unlikely. Plots like spirits are always in the air, waiting to be discovered by people of an imaginative turn.

A different kind of discovery has been made, we hear, by Captain Jennings, of the Madras Army. It is some new way of working punkahs noiselessly and cheaply. We hope that this discovery will not end like the other, in smoke.

BRITISH BURMAH bids fair to open a new field for the cultivation of that invaluable plant, Cinchona. Nearly two hundred plants of the Cinchona Succirubra were safely brought by Captain Seaton from Madras to Plumadoc, a spot standing high among the hills to the north-east of Tonghoo. Of these 168 were alive last February. Proper shelter and constant care in the early stages of growth are indispensable for these plants. The former they have, and the latter will no doubt be forthcoming, as a number of intelligent youths are under training in the Nilgherries as gardeners, two of whom were at once to be sent down to Tonghoo. That the plant will thrive in Burmah seems arguable from the healthy state of two planted by Mr. Leeds in 1865, which have already grown six feet high, and three inches round.

A PAPER on the famine foods of Marwar was lately read before the Royal Asiatic Society of Bengal by Dr. George King. In a country where the yearly rain-fall amounts to three or four inches, and the wells are sometimes 800 feet deep, drought and famine must be frequent visitors. From one cause and another, partly from the cutting down of trees and shrubs, scarcity is becoming chronic in many parts of Marwar. When the bajra and the jawar fall short, the wretched people must either emigrate or try to keep life within them on the sort of food described by Dr. King. There is the Mothee, for instance, a tall rush found on the edge of tanks, the roots of which are ground and made into a dark brown bread, of a sour earthy flavour. Kejra again is made from the bark of the Acacia leucophlœa, has "a bitter astringent taste," by no means pleasant, and on first eating causes "a good deal of griping and discomfort." A better kind of bread is made from Bharoonth, the seed of Achyranthes Aspera. The capsules of the Tribulus lanuginosus, the seed of the Malcecha grass, and the dried seeds of watermelons, cucumbers, and pumpkins, are also made to do duty for bread, while Tilli, or the refuse of the seeds of Sesamum Orientale, is boiled with water into a kind of soup, which the Jodhpore bunneahs sell to eager crowds at seven seers the rupee. As the oil has already been extracted from the seeds, this soup must be about as nourishing as that which the Duke of Norfolk proposed some twenty years ago to make with hot water and "a pinch of currie-powder."

It is understood that Lieut.-general Lord Napier of Magdala will resign the command of the Bombay Army in the autumn. He will probably be succeeded by Lieut.-general Hon. Sir A. A. Spencer, K.C.B., who formerly commanded the Mysore Division of the Madras Army.

WHATEVER the Home Government may feel or purpose doing with regard to the Punjab Tenancy Bill, which was hurried through the Legislative Council of India last autumn, we are assured on good authority that the Bill in question "gives increasing dissatisfaction in the Punjab, and threatens to make our rule there most unpopular." Whether the dissatisfaction extends beyond a class, we are not told; but certain it is that the leading landowners have referred the matter to this country, in the form of a petition which is now on its way to the India-office, accompanied, we believe, by a minute from the pen of Sir Donald Macleod, a staunch opponent of the Bill in its present form. Similar petitions are being sent to the Government of the North-West Provinces against some new Land Improvement Bills, which many persons regard as fraught with ruin to existing institutions. The conception of these dreadful measures is ascribed to the socialistic tendencies of Messrs. Maine and John Strachey; and it is fondly hoped by their opponents that Lord Mayo will have sufficient strength of mind to put down such eccentric proceedings with a high hand. It may be all true, as regards the alleged offenders; but we for our part cannot see any lurking socialism in laws which secure to a certain class of tenants the rights they have long enjoyed, or which enable one of them to dig a well without his landlord's express leave.

THE Maharajah of Jeypore is determined not to lag behind his age. He has lately assembled in his capital a Social Science Congress, in which the leading chiefs and gentry of Jeypore were largely represented. Colonel Keatinge has accepted the post of patron to the new society, which is meant to bind the whole of Rajpootana in the ties of a common brotherhood for the advancement of social, intellectual, and moral culture. The congress has nothing official about it; the Maharajah's relations with it being those of a private citizen, who takes the lead in bountiful subscriptions and promises of powerful support. It starts from the principle of encouraging people to help themselves, instead of leaving everything to the Government. At the first meeting of the Congress £2,000 were subscribed by the natives and Europeans there present. The objects of the society are to promote sanitary reforms of all kinds, to develop agriculture, to diffuse popular education, to encourage the study of mental and physical science in their higher branches, to hold fortnightly meetings for the reading of lectures on pertinent subjects, and to correspond with other societies formed for a like purpose. One of the vice-presidents is Dr. Valentine, the other being the Rajah's Prime Minister, Nawab Mohammed Faiz Ali Khan. The society consists of patrons, vice-patrons, a president, two vice-presidents, two secretaries, and the ordinary members. These last are to be elected by vote, and will continue members so long as they pay up Rs. 10 a-year. A newspaper will be published containing reports of meetings, original essays and correspondence on things in general, but more especially on subjects of local interest.

MR. BLOCHMANN, of the Calcutta Madrassa, has been giving the world a new and rather unwelcome version of the life and character of the great Akbar, in the form of a note to his translation of the Ain-i-Akbari. Elphinstone had taught us to revere in that monarch the wise enlightened ruler, whose own independence of all dogmatic creeds enabled him to enforce throughout his dominions the rule of a religious tolerance at that time unknown in Europe. But this, we are now told, is only partially true. For some years of his reign his practice was at one with his professions. But power corrupted him; his religious eclecticism dwindled into a vicious abnegation of moral duties; he set his subjects an example of licentious living which they were only too ready to follow; and his tolerant professions were belied by his harsh behaviour towards orthodox Mohammedans. He got himself proclaimed as God's vicar, and finally received from his subjects the same sort of worship which the Cæsars of the Roman Empire exacted from theirs. The votaries of the new God solemnly renounced Islam, and swore to sacrifice at need to Shah Akbar "property and life, honour and belief." His Godship also pretended to work miracles, and he was urged, but in vain, to propagate the new faith with the sword. Such is the substance of Mr. Blochmann's note. It is possible that this view may be the correct one; but we cannot help suspecting in it a large admixture of error. It is easy to say, but hard to prove, that Akbar persecuted the Moolvies who plotted against his throne. The story of his moral degeneracy seems at variance with all we know of him and of the virtues displayed by his worthy successors, Jehangheer and Shah Jehan. Even Mr. Blochmann admits that he was temperate himself except in one respect. As for his ever claiming to be God, or knowingly accepting divine honours, we must take leave to reject the notion as a mere misunderstanding of some Oriental phrase. He may have been the conscious founder of what he deemed a purer creed; but his strong good sense must always have saved him from the excesses of a crazy fanatic. And it is idle to talk of his having hastened the downfall of an Empire which his heirs for at least three generations continued to rule with a glory hardly less than his own. It was not his tolerance but Aurungzeb's bigotry which had most to do with the ruin of the Moghul Empire.

THE Friend of India sneers at the age of the India-office secretaries and accountants, and hints that they are well paid for rather light work. Exceptions indeed are to be made, especially in the case of men like Mr. J. W. Kaye, Sir H. Anderson, and General Jameson, to whom nobody grudges their high pay. Our contemporary seems somewhat ignorant of the amount of work done by the objects of his sneers. We could have helped him to happier instances of an equilibrium between work and pay. Messrs. Seecombe and W. Thornton, for example, and General Pears, are about the three hardest workers in the whole office, and they are certainly not among the youngest.

ON Monday the Commons decided that the Select Committee on the Abyssinian War should consist of nineteen members. The names proposed by Mr. Candlish were as follows:—Mr. Baxter, Sir Stafford Northcote, Mr. Grant Duff, Sir John Hay, Mr. Seeley, Mr. Eastwick, Major Anson, Mr. Christopher Denison, Mr. White, Mr. Howes, Sir Patrick O'Brien, Lord Elcho, Capt. Beaumont, Mr. Charles Turner, Mr. Mundella, Sir James Elphinstone, Mr. Holms, Col. Barttelot, and Mr. Candlish. Five of the Committee are to form a quorum, with full power to summon witnesses and obtain documents. Sir S. Northcote expressed some delicacy about sitting in judgment on the acts of his late colleagues and his own; but he left the question in the hands of the House. Ultimately his name and that of Mr. Baxter were formally placed on the Committee; votes have still to be taken for the rest.

THE Hazara despatches were published in last Friday's Gazette. They contain nothing of any consequence which has not already appeared in this journal.

A Post-office notice was issued on Monday last, announcing a reduction in the book post to India via Southampton. On and after the 1st of July the charge will be for a packet under one ounce one penny, and for one under two ounces twopence. Above these weights there is no alteration.

NEUTRALITY OF THE SUEZ CANAL.

It is generally believed that the round of visits which the Pasha of Egypt—we beg his Highness's pardon, the Khediveh—is now paying to the European Courts has much to do with the question of neutralising the Suez Canal. Being confident of seeing the Canal opened in October, he is anxious to secure beforehand a general agreement as to the terms on which it may be used for peaceful purposes by all nations alike. Under a joint guarantee of the great Powers, the Suez Canal might be reserved, under the sole charge of the Egyptian Viceroy, as a neutral highway for all vessels except ships of war; a strict equality of rights and payments being secured beforehand to all who would make use of it under the conditions prescribed. The only Power which might demur to such conditions is France; but as her interests are really the same as those of her neighbours, and as M. Lesseps' shareholders must look to other countries, especially England, for any profits that might ultimately accrue to them, we have little fear of her opposing any reasonable demands, backed by the agreement of other great Powers. What Russia, Prussia, Austria, and Italy think on this question, may almost be taken for granted. The Russian papers are already prophesying a great impetus to Russian trade from the opening of a canal which will give Russian shipping a fair chance as against the French and English. To ourselves, no doubt, the question comes still nearer home. So long as the canal could be counted on as available for the passage of troops and stores between England and India, its permanent neutrality would do away with the need of keeping up a large Mediterranean fleet. In the event of a war between Russia and Turkey, it would be open to the former, as things are, to blockade the Mediterranean mouth of the Canal, in which case we could hardly help trying to force the blockade. From perils and possibilities of this sort the guaranteed neutrality of the Suez Canal would be pretty sure to save us.

"BLACKWOOD" ON LORD LAWRENCE.

THE series of articles in Blackwood on Sir John Lawrence ought to convince the most sceptical of the claims which the late Viceroy of India has established, by a long course of useful and often brilliant deeds, to the lasting admiration of his countrymen.* They set before us a complete and essentially truthful picture of John Lawrence's official career, painted by one whose special acquaintance with his subject betrays itself at every turn.

* Blackwood's Magazine for April, May, and June. Article, Sir John Lawrence. 1869.

Whoever may be the author, who reflects in these papers something of Mr. Kaye's manner and still more of his special knowledge, he has anyhow done his work well. His account of the splendid part played by the then Chief Commissioner of the Punjab, in the movements that led to the capture of Delhi and the preservation of all Upper India, ought for ever to dispel the doubts which envy and detraction have thrown around various passages in that eventful page of Anglo-Indian history. It has been whispered in private circles and repeated in the pages of more than one leading review, that Sir John's greatness was not of his own achieving, that he reaped the credit of other men's labours, that the following out of his own counsels would have brought on the disasters which abler subordinates averted in his name. It has even been asserted that, while others around him were for daring everything rather than yield an inch of British ground, Sir John thought only of retiring across the Indus, and handing Peshawar over to Dost Mohammed. And yet the truth is that so far from dreaming of such a move at the time in question, he refused to let Nicholson join the Movable Column so long as his presence might be needed for the defence of Peshawar. What he did write at a later period was merely in view of a contingency not at all impossible. In the event of a retreat from before Delhi, he reckoned on the need of concentrating our troops at Lahore, and proposed to send all our women and children across the Indus. What better counsel under the circumstances could any one else have given? Sir John was by nature a soldier in the guise of a civilian, and this was but one of many evidences of true military forecast.

Like a true soldier also he urged on General Anson, against the opinion of not a few officers at head-quarters, the need of a prompt advance on Delhi. Luckily, General Anson sided eventually with Sir John. To the latter also was due the readiness shown by native chiefs in furnishing levies and keeping the road clear for our troops. Cut off from all intercourse with Calcutta, he never faltered in carrying out the one great purpose of taking Delhi, if it could by any means be taken. He drained his own provinces of troops at a time of fearful uncertainty, in presence of an impending outbreak in the Punjab itself. He insisted on sending Nicholson, his right-hand man, with the last reinforcements that even he could spare; and he never ceased protesting against any scheme for falling back from Delhi or otherwise delaying its fall. Nobody knew better than he did how much was staked on a single false move, or how much might be won at such a time by deeds of the wildest daring. Early in September the Mohammedans of Hazara were ripe for revolt. A few days later, before our brave troops had stormed the Mogul's stronghold, the wild tribes of Goghaira were actually up in arms. With his usual boldness Sir John sent off all he could spare—one company of British foot and two hundred Sikh horse—to quell a revolt of tens of thousands of armed men. It was just a toss up whether Delhi would have fallen before the whole of the Punjab rose against us. Happily, Nicholson was at Wilson's side, and the salvation of India was dearly purchased with the death of India's noblest hero. To that hero also our author does ample justice, in declaring that but for him Delhi would not have been taken. When is John Nicholson to find a worthy biographer?

How Sir John Lawrence would behave in 1857 was clearly foreshadowed by his deeds in 1848. As Commissioner of Jallundar he had to keep the peace in a Sikh province bordering on a country where Sikhs were once more battling against the British Power. Once in August and again in November he put down two attempts at rebellion within his province. On the latter occasion he himself, in the absence of his military helpmate, took the field with a few hundred native troops, and in thirteen days stamped out a rising which might have set all Jallundar in flames. It was a valuable piece of service admirably performed; but the writer exaggerates its real influence on the Punjab campaign. If Jallundar had risen, the war would simply have taken a somewhat wider range. But it is very doubtful whether any large part of Jallundar would have risen, and Sir John himself seems to have had no fears for the loyalty of the hill population at any rate. His prompt self-reliance however did avert a "formidable" crisis, and one writer at least of Indian history has done all the justice that space allowed him to this brilliant episode in the second Sikh war.

Not a few readers will also thank this writer for the fuller light he has thrown on the differences between Henry and John Lawrence, which led to the latter's appointment as Chief Commissioner of the Punjab. It is clear that both brothers behaved fairly by each other, that Lord Dalhousie naturally sided with the one whose policy he himself preferred; and it is pretty certain that Sir Henry's successor stepped in at the right moment to complete under new conditions the work Sir Henry had begun. The latter's tenderness towards a body of untaxed fiefholders was clearly incompatible with the English principle of taxing all classes alike, as well as with the fiscal needs of a government administered by well-paid English officials. Lord Dalhousie's choice was amply justified by the results. And those results again pointed out Sir John Lawrence as every-way fitted to try his hand at governing on a yet larger scale. If past services are any guarantee for future achievements, no one had so good a claim as the Saviour of India to the post of Viceroy over our Indian Empire.

To this closing scene in Sir John's Indian career the third part of the essay in Blackwood is devoted. We need hardly say that here the author has handled his subject with equal knowledge and discernment. There is now and then perhaps a tendency to praise his hero at the expense of those who went before or worked beside him; but on the whole his estimate fully justifies the admiring verdict which others had already formed on the evidence before them. Sir John's "masterly inaction" in Afghanistan is once more ably defended by a writer who can appreciate all the difficulties of the problem with which the new viceroy had to grapple. To maintain peace and promote well-being at home without loss of due influence abroad was a task by no means easy of accomplishing. But it has been accomplished by Sir John Lawrence, if we choose to look away from one-sided statements to hard facts. By refusing to act as a partisan during the civil wars in Afghanistan, he gave no occasion for Russian interference, no cause for suspicion to the Afghan people. He had long since learned from Dost Mohammed the unwisdom of any attempt to force an English envoy on a reluctant neighbour. He had no great faith in the character or the political capacity of any of the rival claimants to the Throne. And his policy has borne the best fruit in the meeting at Umballa and the trust which every Afghan now feels in British forbearance and good faith. Russia in fact has been checkmated in the cheapest and most honourable way.

With regard to the Bhotan campaign and the Orissa famine, our author says all that can be said in behalf of the late Viceroy. In the former instance he has gone far to show how much of the ultimate success was due to Sir John's good management and firmness in enforcing his demands. On the question of the land tenure in Oude and the Punjaub we see no grounds for doubting the justice of Mr. Kay's conclusions. With equal wisdom and consistency Sir John succeeded in enforcing the ancient rights of occupiers in those two provinces against the excessive claims of the landowners. Of course he was charged with hostility to landlords by those who either could not see the difference between hatred of one class and a desire to act fairly by all, or who failed to consider the rights of the tenant from any other standpoint than that of feudal times.

For a full and fair review of Sir John's Administration we would refer the reader to the articles in question. They will also help him to understand why the late Viceroy was so unpopular with not a few members of a service which had every reason to be proud of its foremost representative, and of the honour which his high position reflected on all his class. Apart from his shy manner and simple habits, he became the mark of that envy which is apt to follow the man who rises by force of merit above his professional compeers. No class in India resented his well-earned promotion more keenly than the members of his own service. Their jealousy fastened on any pretext for turning him to ridicule. The most liberal of men was accused of shabbiness in his social entertainments. His dinners were bad and his wines undrinkable, although he gave special instructions to supply his guests with the best of everything. The reviewer tells a capital story to the point. Some of those who had been loudest in abusing his wines "could not be loud enough in praise" of those they drank shortly afterwards at Lord Mayo's table. "And yet it is a fact that the wines were the same—the remnant of the stock left behind by Sir John." But then there was all the difference between dining with plain Sir John Lawrence, of the Bengal Civil Service, and with an Irish Earl of genial manners and an undoubted pedigree.

A QUERY FOR THE DOCTORS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—A woman, aged twenty-five, healthy and strong, was attacked by diabetes six months ago, and is now a skeleton, and consumed by intense thirst. She is not allowed anything but meat, as almost everything else turns sweet and wrong. Doctors seem to be unable to cure her, but W. P. W., a merchant of Calcutta, tells me his head native was cured of this frightful disease by a native doctor from Benares, but the English doctors were unable to worm the secret out of him. Will any Indian medical man kindly advise me on the subject?—Yours faithfully,

GWALIOR.

Notices of Books.

Researches in the Highlands of Turkey. By the Rev. H. F. Tozer, M.A., F.R.G.S., &c. Two volumes. London: J. Murray. 1869.

The author of these well-filled and well-written volumes carries the reader over a wide space of ground rich alike in classic reminiscences and the charms of noble scenery. It is ground which has not seldom been explored before; but with such a guide as Mr. Tozer we need not murmur at having to renew acquaintance with so many of the scenes which poetry and history have combined to render famous for all time. A crowd of memorable names gleam along the pages in which the author leads us over the highlands that guard the western and northern shores of the "blue Aegean," and the eastern shore of the Adriatic. From Mount Ida and the plains of Troy to Thessalian Pindus and "Suli's Rock," we wander with him over holy ground, almost every foot of which has its special interest for the traveller and the student. And dangerous ground it would be for one less competent than Mr. Tozer to tread as a guide. But his qualifications for the task are evidently great. His classical learning betrays itself in apt illustrations and references to Greek and Latin writers of every age. He has gathered honey from almost every available flower of modern literature in aid of his efforts to set before us the past or present condition of particular places and peoples. A sufficient knowledge of botany, a large amount of artistic culture, and a thorough conversance with the views and discoveries of the latest authorities on questions of ethnology and folklore, give his book a completeness to which the works of ordinary travellers cannot pretend. This is to imply that it is something more than a record of mere travels; a fact which might be regretted in the case of a traveller going over ground comparatively new and unhistorical, or of one who had merely wandered in search of the picturesque. In many such cases too we might easily detect the presence of that borrowed learning which distinguishes the bookmaker from one who has really something of his own to say. How many books of so-called travel have been spawned, for example, from Mr. Murray's too serviceable handbooks! But the present work may fairly claim admission to a much higher category. Not the least of its merits lies in the abundance of illustrative details gathered from many sources, often remote or little known, and put together with the care and skill of a cultivated student. The last three chapters of the second volume will show more particularly what we mean. But in fact the whole book may be regarded as a very full encyclopædia of the countries travelled over; and under the circumstances that is no small praise.

It would be impossible in the space allowed us to describe the varied contents of two thick closely printed volumes. If full of knowledge, they are by no means hard or heavy reading for tastes not spoiled by sipping of smart literature. Readers of Curzon may still enjoy Mr. Tozer's pleasantly written chapters on Mount Athos. Lovers of Homer may turn with profit to the description of Mount Ida and the plains of Troy. There is a very interesting sketch of the Bulgarians, of whose Turanian origin however we are somewhat sceptical. Albania, the country of Byron's Ali Pasha, is briefly described; but several chapters are devoted to Montenegro, its troubled history, its lawless people, and wild mountain scenery. In his remarks on the Eastern question, the author foresees a division of European Turkey between the Slaves to the north and the Greeks on the south of Mount Olympus; Greece thereby recovering her ancient provinces of Epirus and Thessaly, while Macedon and Illyria formed a Slavonic State. The classic regions of Olympus, Tempe, and Ossa are carefully described at some length. A pleasant chapter on Vampires is followed by others that tell us all about Pelion past and present. After further wanderings in Thessaly among Greeks and Wallachs we are brought to South Albania, the ancient Epirus, the scene in modern times of many a fierce fight against the oppressor and of not a few atrocities committed by the strong-handed Ali Pasha. Some excellent chapters on Romaic Ballad-poetry, on modern Greek folklore, and on the classic superstitions that still remain to prove the identity of modern and ancient Hellenes, complete the work, which is further enriched with good appendices and an index.

THE INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.

The Delhi Gazette is given to understand that a communication has been opened between the Inspector General of Hospitals, Indian Army, and the Secretary to Government, Military Department, concerning the order which inflicts such gross injustice on regimental surgeons, in debarring them from the advantages of the Furlough Rules of 1868. Already, as we pointed out in a late issue, one step towards rescinding the order has been made. And we are now more than hopeful that before long the advantages of the new rules will be thrown open as broadly and liberally to regimental medical officers as they are to all others. The case lies in the hands of Dr. Murray and Colonel Norman. The Viceroy of India is not likely to be a stumbling-block in the way of justice—for after all it is a mere matter of justice and nothing more. Nor can we for one moment suppose that the Secretary of State would raise an objection. The only marvel to us is that such an order as No. 1,064, of 1868, should ever have been published. Whence came the mean, splenetic inspiration—casting downright spite and wanton injustice against every regimental surgeon in the Indian army? We hope now however that the order, which has given rise to much bitter feeling against the Indian Government in this country as well as at home, will speedily be abolished, and that the miserable outcry which medical officers are goaded on to raise against the inconsiderate and unjust acts of Government will soon have cause to cease. We say, we hope so. A mere hope it is, indeed, for the history of the Indian Medical Service irrefutably shows that neither boon nor justice has ever been conceded to it with gracious liberality. Such as ever have been gained have been gained only by being wrenched from a reluctant Government. In the present instance, and touching the Government order to which we have referred, we ask only in behalf of regimental surgeons for justice. Render to them that justice and liberality which the New Furlough Rules of 1868 render to every other branch of the Army and Civil Service—simply that, and that alone. Let the Bis dat qui cito dat be for once in a way the guiding star of those who are now engaged in the matter. Let Colonel Norman and Dr. Murray use all their power to blot out speedily the only one blot in the liberal Furlough Rules of 1868, and every regimental surgeon in the Indian Army will thank them for removing the injury with which they have been inflicted by G.O. No. 1,064 of last year.

THE UMBALLA MEETING.

The Oudh Ukhbar, referring to the reception of the Ameer of Cabul at Umballa, says that since the British have ruled in Hindoostan no other chief has received such honours. The grand receptions from Peshawur to Umballa could not have been surpassed;

perhaps on the occasion of the visit of King Humayoon of Delhi, when he was defeated by Shere Shah and Salim Shah, and went to Persia, Shah Abbas, King of Persia, acted so. Enough; if the Ameer Sahib is gratified with the treatment he has received from the English, he has had cause to be so. Moreover, the people of Hindoostan, seeing this generosity on the part of Government, are loud in praise of it. They are as pleased at the reception given to the Ameer as they were at the honours shown to the Sultan of Turkey. If this kind of hospitality is shown to the public, it will be no wonder if the people feel grateful from their hearts to the Government, and that they are more delighted than if a whole purgunnah were given to them; and this feeling is not only prevalent in Hind, but throughout the world. Now let us see what amount of gratitude and thanks the Ameer Sahib will return to the Government for this.

RAILWAYS IN SINDH.

The Friend of India observes that the Sindh Railway Company have taken a great step—great both for their prospects as investors and as regards the future of North-Western India. At an extraordinary meeting of proprietors Mr. W. P. Andrew laid before the company a proposition for the amalgamation of the several undertakings, under Act of Parliament. In a telling speech he showed that by amalgamation the cost of the construction of the Sindh Railway would be reduced by £6,000 a mile; that the heavy permanent charge upon the working expenditure, consequent on the maintenance of nearly twenty-five miles of siding at Kotree, would be got rid of; that the volume of the traffic of Upper India and Central Asia could only be secured by joining the line with the Punjab railways, and that for this the services of the Indus Steam Flotilla were requisite. All the proposition involved to the shareholder was the exchange of shares in the Delhi, the Punjab, and the Sindh companies, and the Indus Steam Flotilla for shares in the amalgamated company, the result of which would, Mr. Andrew believed, greatly improve their individual interests as well as the collective prospects of the whole undertaking. Among the shareholders who took part in the discussion was Mr. George Campbell, the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces, who warmly supported Mr. Andrew. In spite of some refractory shareholders, who appear to have had no distinct conception of the question at issue, the amalgamation measure was carried, along with a resolution that the junction of Kotree and Mooltan should be considered as soon as the Act of Parliament can be obtained. Mr. Andrew is wiser than most in his generation. The Punjab and Sindh must be the basis of all future lines connecting the East with Western Asia and Europe, and only by a strong and united effort will the present railway companies be able to realise the magnificent prospects which their locality holds out to them.

THE STAFF CORPS.

The Madras Times declares that the amalgamation has blotted out the fair picture which an Indian career formerly offered a young man. Its effect was to abolish the Indian service, engineers, artillery, cavalry, and infantry, as a distinct service, and to tag it on to her Majesty's European forces. From the moment it lost its distinctive character it commenced to decline, and, as a consequence, was bound to be doctored by Horse Guard's physicians and other quacks, until now what remains of the old Service is but a skeleton of its former self, with hardly a claim to attractiveness. It is true that Indian officers, with sons old enough to enter the army, would be delighted to gain for them admissions to the Staff Corps, but as a roundabout method exists, and £450 is required to effect their purpose, the young men who are best fitted for Indian service are those, of all others, the most excluded from entering it. India is not such a cheap country now-a-days, or the emoluments of the service so great, that field officers with large families can be expected to pay the price of commissions in the European service as an uncertain step towards the admission of their sons into the Indian Staff Corps; the consequence is that, although a great number of the probationers for the Staff Corps are the sons of Indian officers of the Military or Civil Service, they are the sons of men who have held good appointments in their day, and who can afford, as exceptions to the general rule, to lodge the price of a commission at any moment. This seems hardly fair, for the young men who most urgently seek admission to the Staff Corps, namely, the sons of officers not overburdened with ready money, are those who are virtually debarred from entering it. Among the probationers for the Indian Staff Corps there are very few young men indeed who enter it, as the vulgar expression says, "upon their own hook," and very few who regard it as a service in which they can fight their way unaided. Almost every probationer is the son or the relative of a man who has "interest" in India, and who places him in the Staff Corps as a temporary measure necessary to the attainment of an Indian appointment. For such young men the Indian Staff Corps is but a stepping-stone to civil and political employment, and they will be found to enter it quickly enough upon these terms, but the great number of young officers in European regiments, for whom the regimental appointments in native corps sigh in vain, hold aloof from the Staff Corps as a service offering no attractions whatever.

Bengal.

SIR BARNES PEACOCK ON CONTEMPT OF COURT.

On May 17, the Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Macpherson having taken their seats in the High Court, the former made the following remarks:—"From certain articles extracted from the Madras Times, and published in the Englishman of Thursday last, and from other articles which have since been published in that newspaper relating to the rule nisi issued against the publisher for contempt of Court, considerable misunderstanding appears to exist as to the grounds upon which the rule was issued. From some of the remarks, one might be led to suppose that the only grounds for the rule consisted of certain objectionable comments on the judgment in Mr. Tayler's case, in describing the sentence as 'cruel' instead of 'severe,' and of opening a subscription merely to pay Mr. Tayler's fine. Such misunderstanding naturally tends to injure the reputation of the Court, and to lower the judges in their official capacity in the estimation of the public. The editor of the Englishman, since the rule was discharged, has published his explanation, and also the articles to which I have alluded. I do not complain of his having done so. I merely wish to make my explanation, in order that any misunderstanding which exists may be removed. I consider that explanation is more dignified than silence, whenever the grounds or reasons of a judge for adopting a particular course of action in a public matter are misunderstood by the public. A judge cannot properly enter into a written controversy with a public newspaper. He ought not to be obliged to allow his actions to be misunderstood, nor ought he to be above setting himself right before the public by making an explanation in open Court. I therefore avail myself of the opportunity of this my first appearance on this side of the Court since the rule against the Englishman was discharged, of stating publicly the grounds upon which the rule to show cause was issued, and the reasons which influenced me in adopting that course."

The Chief Justice then read and commented on "certain articles, letters, and notifications" published in the Englishman of the 16th, 21st, 26th, 27th, and 28th April. Having pointed out the evident meaning of the rupee subscription as a protest against a cruel sentence, and an over-exercise of judicial power, Sir Barnes showed that Mr. Tayler was only three whole days in prison.

"I will not discuss the question whether the sentence in Mr. Tayler's case was too severe or not; or whether any portion of the punishment for a contempt of Court in publishing defamatory letters founded on wilful misrepresentations and concealments of facts condemning a judge for acts done in the discharge of his official duty ought to be imprisonment, seeing that a fine may be paid by subscription, and that without some imprisonment the offender may be relieved from all punishment. Courts of Justice only weaken their authority and lower the respect due for the administration of justice if they make orders which can be defeated at pleasure.

"I considered, and still consider, that it was a grave contempt of Court to advertise for subscriptions as a demonstration and as a protest against a sentence denounced as cruel, and to teach the Chief Justice a lesson as to how he should discharge his duties in future (see Rex v. Watson, 2 Term Reports, 199). I looked upon the notifications as an attempt to influence the Chief Justice in the discharge of his duties by teaching him a lesson which he would not forget, if a question should ever again arise as to the responsibility of a publisher of a newspaper for printing letters such as those published by Mr. Tayler. I considered them as an attempt to pervert the course of justice, and to induce the Chief Justice to adopt a different course in future from that which he would be likely to pursue if the lesson should not be given.

"In Lechmere Charlton's case, Lord Cottenham stated that 'every insult offered to a Judge in the exercise of the duties of his office is a contempt; but that when the writing or publication proceeds further, and when, not by inference, but by plain and direct language, a threat is used, the object of which is to induce a judicial officer to depart from the course of his judicial duty, and to adopt a course he would not otherwise pursue, it is a contempt of the very highest order' (1 Mylne and Craig, 339).

"I did not consider that it was fair criticism to denounce the judgment in Mr. Tayler's case as an interference with the liberty of the press, and as an undue interference with the right of the public to appeal to a free press. The notifications of the 27th and 28th of April were published after judgment had been given on the 24th, and after the Chief Justice had declared that Mr. Tayler's letters were not fair criticisms, but slanderous assertions based upon wilful misrepresentations and concealment of the truth; that if they had been fair criticisms both Mr. Tayler and the publisher of the newspaper would have been justified in publishing them, and that the Chief Justice claimed no exemption as regards his public acts from the most rigid scrutiny and the most unsparing criticism; and that all he claimed was that there should be no misrepresentations and no wilful concealment of facts. The notifications were both issued before the public, with the exception of a small minority, had had the means of forming an independent opinion as to the judgment; and the notification of the 28th April was published after Mr. Tayler had declared in his second apology, published in the Englishman on the 27th, that upon reflection he found that the charges made by him against Mr. Justice Dwarkanath Mitter 'were unwarranted and wholly without foundation.'

"The lower the subscription the more likely were subscribers to be attracted from that class of society which acts upon impulse and without due reflection. The notifications were so worded as to enlist subscribers of various kinds, whether they were those who merely sympathised with Mr. Tayler, those who might think the sentence too severe, those who might believe that there was an over-exercise of power, or that the liberties of the press were in danger, or that the right of the public to appeal to it had been unduly interfered with, or those who, without having heard the judgment, or had an opportunity of knowing the grounds upon which it proceeded, might be ready to denounce it upon each and every one of the grounds put forward.

"Do those who contend," asked the Chief Justice, "that the judgment interfered with the liberties and the rights of the press claim the right to send defamatory letters, founded on wilful misrepresentations and concealments of facts, to the press for publication, and the immunity of the publisher from responsibility for publishing such libels? If that is the right claimed, I deny that it exists. Every man who valued his reputation, whatever may be his position in life, must see that such a right would leave him at the mercy of every slanderer. If the right is not claimed to extend to private individuals, and they are to be protected from defamation based upon wilful misrepresentation and concealment of the truth, is the reputation of judges and other public men alone to be open to assaults of this description? . . . If an anonymous correspondent, or even an author who subscribes his name can authorise the publisher of a newspaper to publish without responsibility whatever the author may think fit to write respecting either public or private individuals, however false and defamatory, he has a greater power than either House of Parliament had by the common law." The Chief Justice then showed, from the cases of Stockdale and Hansard and Wellesley v. Duke of Beaufort, that "if the publisher is privileged from being punished for contempt of Court for insulting or defaming the Court with reference to its proceedings in a judicial matter, he has a greater privilege than a member of either House of Parliament."

After quoting some cases to the point, he concluded thus:—"I have made these remarks, not for the purpose of re-opening the matter or casting reflection upon any one, but merely in order that the public may have all the facts before them and be able to form an independent opinion as to my grounds and reasons for adopting the late proceeding. Collisions between courts of justice and the press are always to be regretted; but I felt it necessary, under the circumstances which I have detailed, to vindicate the honour and dignity of the Court and to preserve its reputation. Criticism of the public acts of public men is necessary for the public good. Let the press criticise the public acts and conduct of the judges as severely and unsparingly as they please. But let their criticism be fair and in good faith, and above all let them be founded upon truth, and not based, as Mr. Tayler's letters were, on wilful misrepresentations and concealment. If the press think fit to publish the criticisms and opinions of correspondents based upon misrepresentation, and which defame the characters of public men or private individuals, they cannot do so with impunity, whether their correspondents are anonymous or not, unless they act in good faith and use due care and attention for the purpose of ascertaining whether the criticisms and opinions which they publish are based upon truth or falsehood. If the press act upon these principles, they need not be apprehensive of any process for contempt or of other legal proceedings on account of any criticisms of the public acts of the judges or other public men. All things will then go on smoothly in this respect. It would be well if men would always bear in mind 'that the liberal deviseth liberal things, and by liberal things shall he stand.'"

STATION TALK.

CAMP, INDORE, April 18.—I lead a wandering life, in no way like a vagabond, however, but as one who has a purpose—the good of the public—at heart. With this purpose I have travelled through various native principalities in the Deccan and in the south of India, and marked them with a vigilant eye, noting, not merely the manifold defects that characterise them, but their opposite; and I was glad to find them, without exception, dragging themselves slowly towards civilisation, some of them approaching the British standard of civilisation, too. Having brought to an end my pleasant trip over the most beautiful part of India, I formed the intention of travelling through Central India, where, I was given to understand by you as well as by your friends, reigned wise and politic princes. My way first tended towards Dhar and Dewasa, and some other capitals of petty native chiefs; but, to speak the truth, I was soon enchanted out of them by the cool zephyrs from the southern side. I turned towards that part, and in a day reached Indore, the capital city of his Highness Maharajah Hukar, and for four months I made my home here. At first sight I was so struck with its outward appearance that I considered it above Bombay, its Government above the British, and the reigning prince above human princes; and so strongly did prejudice lay its hold on me that I could not get rid of it for some time. The friends I sought here told me many things, but I denied the truth of what they imparted to me. But this state of my mind soon vanished when I was daily assailed by such news as they told me; then I became more busily and cautiously employed in my search into the truth; and it was the truth I found they spoke. "Alas," I said, "mere outside is but a delusion." The more deeply I went into my inquiries the more surprised with and ashamed I became of my delusion. I was shocked at the injustice, and shrank back at the vile intrigues here practised by men of respect, and who are charged with responsible duties; and I should be wanting in my duties as a well wisher if I did not bring before the public, through the medium of your valuable and wide-spread journal, some striking instances of the tricks played to satiate envy, to get money by illegal means, and to fulfil a thousand other motives of the like nature, by persons who show to his Highness that they are the only loyal and faithful servants of his, and that they only deserve his trust and favour. The Maharajah knows English, which he can speak fairly, he knows Marathi well, a little of Sanscrit, and it is said much of Pharsee too. He is a wise, a mild and a politic prince, and very hard-working indeed. Unlike the other present Maratha princes, he is possessed of superior administrative powers, but like them is surrounded by a community of unlettered and unknowing men, though there dart forth from among them the light of an occasional genius; so that his kingdom may be fairly compared to a sky traversed with a brilliant and rapid meteor which shoots along its face, shedding a refulgent but transitory light which is instantly swallowed up in universal darkness. He has followed the English Government closely, as is shown by the several departments he has established in his kingdom for the public weal. Here are the most useful:—the educational, the medical, the engineering, the judicial, the Geerace, the revenue, the custom, and others. Having so many departments, a natural question arises, "Why should people complain of such a Government?" But, friends, they have their reasons, which my experience no way leads me to doubt. You are acquainted with the sort of officers above described. Such men, you must know, head the several departments of this kingdom with one or two exceptions; and what result is to be expected from such an ill-combination but misrule in the respective departments?—Indu Prakash Correspondent.

MOULMEIN, May 9.—The S. W. Monsoon has fairly set in on us. Almost daily we have fine refreshing showers of rain. This is of course a most agreeable change after the hot dusty days lately experienced. Sickness in town has diminished sensibly, and trade is looking up slightly. Trade here always revives a little at the commencement of the rains. Rumours are afloat that soon there will be many ships coming both from Calcutta and Bombay for timber for railway purposes. At one time we were rather alarmed to learn that Australia had entered the timber market to compete with its jaroo wood against our teak for all purposes for which teak had hitherto been employed, but after a while the alarm considerably subsided, as it was remembered that teak had carried off the palm on many occasions against the opposition of many hard-grained woods, whose only recommendation was the close graining and texture of the timber. Some however are not quite so sanguine that jaroo timber will stand no chance with teak, for if the immunity that teak enjoys from the ravages of insects depends on the presence of a bitter essential oil in the wood, it is almost certain that the tree yielding the jaroo timber, being one of the myrtaceae, might also, on account of some one of the essential oils for which the myrtaceae are so famous, give a timber that, while close-grained and hard, will, like teak, successfully resist the ravages of insects. Anyhow, our merchants are getting down timber and sawing it up rapidly against the arrival of the anticipated indents from your side of India. It is to be hoped anticipations such as these will not be disappointed, for poor Moulmein will badly feel any further decline in her timber trade. Our rice trade has little prospect of a rise. Rangoon, we are informed, has not been able to meet the demands made on her for the grain, and has, if I am not mistaken, asked for assistance from us. Well, if the French at Saigon had not got so much ahead of us in the China rice trade, we should have had enough to cheer us and make us more hopeful regarding our trading prospects. But what with Saigon for a great rival in this line and the disgraceful conduct of some of our foresters in the Shan forests, we are in a sad state altogether. It is to be hoped that at no distant date our degeneration, our general poverty, and our immense latent resources will attract the notice of the Supreme Government, and lead to the adoption of some better and more liberal measures. The Vaccination Report for 1867-8 has been placed before the public. From it we learn that but questionable results have been achieved by the officers entrusted with the performance of vaccine operations among the people. There is a decided falling off in the numbers vaccinated. In Hensadah, in the year previous, 351 cases were operated on, in the year under report only sixty, and of these sixty twelve were unsuccessful. In Rangoon town the same falling off has occurred, and but for the cases from the district the return would have showed badly. As matters stand, 3,787 were successfully operated on, and these cost the Government Rs. 1,800. We surely could not give the natives a better proof of our goodwill towards them, or of our humanity.

Departmental officials are at present very busy writing out histories of their several departments. These are for the annual report on this province, I am told, and will form appendices to it. We are determined to do things on a grand scale here: histories of the police, post-offices, telegraphs, prisons; histories political, financial, judicial, administrative, from the earliest times to the present. Advantage is to be taken of all available information, documentary or oral, to render the historical narratives as complete as possible, and where statistics are necessary, if correct figures be not obtainable, approximate ones are to be given. We may well look out for a monster Blue-book on Burmah this day twelve months. We are not aware if anything is being done towards making accurate surveys of the country between this and Tavoy, and if the road that was talked of, some six months ago, to connect us with the Southern provinces has been taken in hand. You can have no idea, at least you can hardly have an idea, of the amount of palaver there is always here of this and that about to be done. So far back as 1830, when Mr. Maingay was our Commissioner, matters were put in train to induce Shan and Chinese merchants to visit us; to-day in 1869 we are as far off as ever from achieving our object. But of this more hereafter. The other day a brutal murder was perpetrated in Mopoon by a ticket-of-leave life convict originally from Bengal; the victim was a Burmese woman, who was living with him. The man has been tried and is to be hanged in a few days. We have a good many of these ticket-of-leave life convicts in town—seventeen hundred or more, if I mistake not; it would be conferring a real benefit on the public to hand them over to Colonel Man at Port Blair. We have lost the oldest member of the British Burmah Bar; Mr. Donald Macleod died a week ago of apoplexy; he was the Government Advocate at Rangoon. It is rumoured the Inspector General of Prisons goes home on sick certificate, and that the Superintendent of the Central Jail here goes to fill his place. Dr. Donnelly has great claims on Government for a suitable recognition of past services.—Englishman Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S COUNCIL.—We observe that the Hon. M. J. Shaw Stewart has been permitted to resign his seat in the Council of the Governor-General.

APPOINTMENT.—Mr. E. G. Man, barrister, is talked of as the successor of the late Mr. McLeod in the post of Government Advocate at Rangoon.

TUCCAVEE ADVANCES.—During the week ending the 28th March the sum of Rs. 7,035 was given as Tuccavee advances for wells and other irrigation works in the Central Provinces.

SUBATHOO.—The mine in Subathoo, it is stated, has been yielding, independently of the lead, a good proportion of silver. The result of the late diggings is, lead to silver as 20 to 3.

THE DELHI MEMORIAL MONUMENT.—We are glad to see the "Memorial Monument" on "the Ridge" assuming a tangible form; it is progressing cheerily, keeping pace, in fact, with the Clock Tower opposite the Institute.

DELHI RAILWAY.—Owing to the difficulty in procuring carriage for the transport of materials, &c., arising from the late scarcity, the opening of the section of the Delhi Railway from Umballa to Loodiana will not take place before September.

RUMOURED CAPTURE OF HERAT.—A correspondent, writing from Peshawur on the 14th May, says that a kossid arrived there from Cabul on the 13th, with news that Herat had actually been taken by Auzim Khan, and that the news of the fall of Herat was kept secret by Sirdar Yakoob Khan.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.—A railway official, on his return from Simlah, where it seems he had not been kindly dealt with by a young lady, attempted suicide in Subathoo. Two cuts across the throat, which, though alarming to the young man's friends, were found quite amenable to the treatment of the doctors.—Delhi Gazette.

DELHI.—The excessive heat and the fruit season combined have, we are sorry to learn, had the usual effect of creating a good deal of sickness in the city, and amongst the European residents outside; but as there is nothing in the shape of an epidemic, we hope to report more favourably ere long.—Mofussilite, May 20.

CALCUTTA RACES.—The Calcutta Derby sweep will this year be the magnificent prize of Rs. 55,000, with second and third prizes of Rs. 20,000 and 10,000. The drawers of winning horses will have some difficulty in possessing themselves in patience until the event comes off.

WELL-TIMED COURTESY.—The Maharajah Sindiah has again shown in a marked manner his loyalty for the British Government. On the occasion of a recent outbreak of cholera in the Morar cantonment his Highness promptly placed one of his large garden residences at the disposal of the general commanding, whereby a considerable number of soldiers and their officers were spared the discomfort of living in tents at a hot season of the year, and in all human probability lives were saved. The special thanks of Government have been communicated to the Maharajah for this act of kindness.

THE HEALTH OF THE JUBBULPORE DISTRICT.—We hear that from the 1st to the 15th May the number of cases of small-pox and cholera in the district was as follows:—Small-pox, about 1,150 cases, of which some 200 terminated fatally. The number of cholera cases was about 1,000, and the number of deaths from this cause about 700.—Chronicle, May 19.

CONVERTS TO BRAHMOISM.—The Calcutta Brahma Somaj announces the receipt of a telegram, "with reply prepaid, twenty words," from a native in Mangalore, declaring the intention of "Myself and above five thousand members of my class to embrace Brahmoism, for we are Shudras and enlightened Hindus such as Brahmins do not admit us in their society and in consequence we are left to live and die without learning and religion. Will you come down to this place or send your missionaries for our assistance. We will bear all costs that may be incurred by you for this purpose."

THE LATEST SYMPTOMS OF RUSSOPHOBIA.—The Jubbulpore Chronicle is led to understand that a number of Russian gentlemen are studying to prepare themselves for the next examination in the Civil Service, and that it is most likely they will all succeed in passing. All the expenses are being defrayed by the Russian Government, who it seems takes a great interest in the Civil Service of India, and appears to expect that the experience which these Russian gentlemen will acquire in the art of governing the people of Hindustan will eventually prove eminently useful, and amply repay all the expenditure now incurred.

LUCKNOW MILITARY PRISON.—We are sorry to hear that some of the prisoners in the Military Prison are misbehaving themselves and showing signs of mutiny, and in order to suppress this state of affairs and secure the warders, the latter have been supplied with bludgeons for safety by the prison authorities. The other day a corporal had a rather narrow escape from a cannon ball being thrown at him by one of the prisoners, who, we hear, is likely to expiate his crime by being brought to the triangle. This punishment will doubtless deter other ruffians from similarly misbehaving themselves, and we may therefore hope to hear no more of such cases recurring for the future.—Lucknow Times, May 19.

COTTON IN BURMAH.—The experimental introduction of Hingunghat cotton seed into British Burmah has met with rather varied success. In Cheduba, the soil of which is about the same as that of Sea Island, which produces the finest cottons in the world, the seed failed utterly. The district officers complain that the seed must have been too old. Throughout the Tenasserim division the results were as unsatisfactory. The seed sown in the Agri-Horticultural Garden was, however, fresh, and received a good deal of attention. The Secretary gathered about 35lbs. of cotton, and anticipated that the plants could yield 60lbs. before the setting in of the South-West Monsoon. The greatest attention should be paid to the selection of the seed with which these experiments are conducted.

COTTON IN THE NORTH-WESTERN PROVINCES.—The North-Western Provinces Gazette announces a still further diminution in the production of cotton in these provinces. In 1867-68 1,300,000 acres were sown with cotton; last year only 890,000. In 1867-68 726,439 maunds were obtained; last year only 551,723. The Lieutenant-Governor considers it very desirable that the Hingunghat staple should be naturalised in the Doab and Bundelkand. It appears that with the upper and middle classes of natives English cotton-cloths have quite driven cloth of native manufacture out of the field; but that for a material at once very cheap and very strong, no English article has yet appeared to compete in popularity with the lower classes with the native garrah, guzee, and adhutars.—Pioneer.

THE BOMBAY AGENCY OF THE BANK OF BENGAL.—Well-informed rumour has it that, notwithstanding all that may be or has been urged in its justification, the branch of the Bank of Bengal at Bombay will have to be closed. It is almost certain that Sir Charles Jackson and his colleagues in the Bank Commission have reported unfavourably as regards the continuance of the branch, and to the purport that its existence is substantially an infraction of the equitable rights of the Bank of Bombay, and an aggression on the territory of that institution. In short, the belief in well-informed quarters is that the Government of India will endeavour to induce the Bengal Bank directorate to withdraw the branch, as it were, of their own accord, and that in case of the directorate declining to do so other measures will be resorted to.

A BURMESE FESTIVAL.—The Rangoon Times describes a curious Burmese festival called the "Nga Thoot I'wai," the fish-liberating feast which occurs on every year. The Burmese believe that it is highly meritorious to save all kinds of life, and during the month of April they go about through the bazaars and buy up all the live fish they can find. The fish are preserved in fresh water until the time comes to set them free. Fowls, ducks, goats, cows, turtles and other animals are also purchased. These are all put into carts, decorated with peacock's feathers and all sorts of ornaments, and are driven in procession with banners and music to a large lake in the neighbourhood of Rangoon. Here the fish are consigned to their native element, and the other animals, if they have survived the fright, are made over to the phoongyees, who turn them loose into the jungle, where in all probability their former masters will soon recapture them.

TWO SIDES TO THE PICTURE.—Commenting on the Court Journal's highflown description of the Nawab of Bengal "moving grandly through British society," and "bearing with him in placid silence the memory of past greatness," the Friend of India thinks that the English public might improve their knowledge of Indian history as well as obtain many delightful reminiscences of the "dear Nawab's" progenitors, if they would peruse the literary remains of the late Mr. Holwell.

DEATH OF A LOAFER IN LUCKNOW.—A poor European in destitute circumstances was found dead by the police, in the streets of Lucknow, the cause being attributable partly to drink and partly to the effects of the sun, in which he was discovered lying exposed in the hottest part of the day. The unfortunate man was of the Roman Catholic faith, but the priest refused to bury him because, at the post mortem examination, the doctor said that he had died of coup de soleil brought on by drink and exposure. The man's name was C. Clifford, and was supposed to have been a remarkably smart printer and a man of some parts, and very respectably connected. Many endeavoured to take him in hand and reform him, but he seemed to have been past reformation, and if it had not been for the kindness of the Rev. Mr. Ellis this poor wretch would have received no Christian burial.—Lucknow Times.

COTTON.—The arrangements made by the Great Indian Peninsula Railway have been so well managed that the Cotton Commissioner now reports "the cotton is loaded and carried off as fast as it arrives, and the arrangements of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Company are in this respect everything that could be desired." Considering that only a few years ago the collection of cotton at the different stations increased to such an extent that it was necessary to keep up an extra establishment of clerks, police guards, and fire engines at each large station, which can now be dispensed with, we cordially agree with Mr. Carnac's testimony to the energy and perseverance of the officers of the Traffic Department. At the same time, it must not be forgotten that the large increase in the proportion of fully pressed to half pressed bales has given more facilities for forwarding the cotton. From November, 1863, to the 1st January, 1869, 21,214 fully pressed bales, 37,531 half pressed bales, and 32,537 dokras were forwarded by the railway, whilst for the same period of 1867-68 the quantities were 1,063, 2,276 and 28,549 respectively. The Governor-general has expressed his entire approval of the arrangements initiated by the Cotton Commissioner.

THE BENGAL VOLUNTEERS.—"Anglo-Indian" states, and with truth, that the promises made to the Volunteer Yeomanry and Militia raised in 1857 were never fulfilled, and such conduct on the part of the Government has been a barrier to the formation of Volunteer corps in many parts of the country. A large majority of those who served the arduous service they had to go through during the troublous time of the Mutiny have to the present moment—eleven years—not had their services acknowledged by even the presentation of a medal! while pampered native policemen and others, whose lukewarmness, if not antagonism, was well known, have received tangible rewards for their loyalty and assistance. The bestowal of waste lands rent free in healthy localities to all who had served Government in the time of their need would have been a graceful gift, and it is not yet too late for the Government to show their sense of the services then rendered by finding out all survivors of that gallant band that did their duty at Agra, Meerut, at Lucknow, in Rohilkund, and other places, and bestowing on them rewards which shall enable them to live comfortably in their various stations. We shall be glad to be favoured by "Anglo-Indian" or any other writer with some account of the formation and subsequent achievements of those early Volunteers.—Indian Volunteer, May 18.

THE CROPS IN BENGAL.—The reports from Bhaugulpore, Patna, and Chota Nagpore up to the end of April appear in the Supplement to the Calcutta Gazette. That from Bhaugulpore states that there is no prospect of distress in any part, that the agricultural classes are well to do, and that the late rains have proved generally beneficial to the growing crops. The report from Patna however presents anything but an encouraging aspect. Water is becoming scarce everywhere, and hardly any pasture remained for the cattle. The ground was too hard for the people to sow the Bhadaï crop, which would cause the distress to prevail over a longer period, and the produce of the late harvest is not being brought into the markets. Applications for assistance at the relief depots increased daily, upwards of four thousand persons being daily employed in the Sudder district alone, at the works on the Gunduck six thousand five hundred, and an increasing number at the other works in Sarun and Tirhoot. In Chumparun, on the contrary, the works failed to attract the people, but in Shahabad the canal works and the relief works have given ample employment to all comers. Grain has to be largely imported, and exportation has ceased. Since this report was written rain has fallen in some parts, though almost too late to be of any material benefit. From Chota Nagpore the reports continue favourable, and a seasonable rain fall had come in time for the early sowings.

THE UNIVERSITY LAW PROFESSORSHIP.—The year allowed by the late Prosunno Coomar Tagore for the establishment of a University Law Professorship bearing his name has nearly expired, and the Senate will be called on in a few weeks to elect a professor. The emoluments are £1,000 a-year, and the lectures are to be published at the expense of the testator's estate. The Government ought to take advantage of the foundation of this chair to transfer to the University, which will have rooms ready for the purpose next year—the law classes now confined to one affiliated institution, the Presidency College. At present all the other colleges in and near Calcutta are at a disadvantage. It is proposed to adopt a similar step in Madras. We commend the financial aspect of the question to the Government of India. The faculty of law has laid before the Syndicate the following scheme for the chair. During the next three years a course to be delivered annually on the subjects enumerated in the following programme:—First year: Jurisprudence, Civil Government, Public Establishments, Personal Rights, Rights of Property, Tenure of Land under the Perpetual Settlement, &c., Law of Landlord and Tenant. Second year: Law of Contracts, Gifts, Sales, Mortgages, Registration of Assurances, General Principles of Mercantile Law, Civil Remedies, Principles of Equity, Law of Evidence. Third year: Marriage, Divorce, Guardianship, Law of Inheritance according to Hindoo, Mahomedan, and English Law, Wills, Indian Succession Act, Representation in case of Death. The lectures to be delivered by the professor twice a week, from 15th January to 15th May, and from 15th June to 31st August. The professor to be appointed for a term of three years, and the office to be vacated in the event of the professor being compelled to leave India, or of his being incapacitated from continuing the course of lectures. This scheme will soon be discussed by the Senate.—Friend of India.

SIMLAH.—Dr. De Renzy, who appears to be a most energetic sanitary commissioner, has overhauled Simlah and sent in a report that is far from flattering to that station's character as a sanitarium. The population of Simlah in "the season" is estimated at 1,200 Europeans and 18,000 natives, among whom the death-rate is about twenty-four per thousand. Since Lieutenant Ross built the first house, just fifty years ago, 290 houses have been erected for Europeans, and yield an annual rental of Rs. 235,600. The deaths of children make up as much as 41 per cent. of the whole mortality. The most unhealthy months for Europeans are June and July. The principal source of water supply is a natural spring at Combermere-bridge and a tunnel work under Jako, which discharges in the cold weather as much as 4,000 gallons a day. The houses are much scattered, at greater or less distances from these sources, and have to depend upon small springs which are generally found in the water courses; and as the springs are commonly much lower than the houses they are contaminated with a considerable amount of filth. For instance, in the reservoir from which the United Service Club is supplied, Dr. De Renzy found a large heap of "fecal matter, bones, old shoes, empty sardine boxes and preserved soup tins," while the soil about the spring was composed of decayed leaves and the excremental accumulations of years deposited from the Club. This is by no means an uncommon instance. The springs at Peterhoff, from which the Viceroy is supplied, are, if possible, still more disgusting. The covering of the spring is so constructed that the bhcesties cannot draw water without the filth which adheres to their feet being washed into the water, while the ground sloping down to the spring is thickly strewn with dung, a good deal of which finds its way into the water. The two best springs at Combermere and the Roman Catholic Orphanage yield water which, on analysis, are ranked as low as eleventh and sixteenth class waters. Dr. De Renzy recommends a thorough cleansing of all the reservoirs, that they should be arched with masonry to protect the water from light and other deteriorating influences, that they should be provided with self-acting stop-cocks, and that they should be enlarged so as to prevent the waste of water in the cold weather. Dr. De Renzy has however the courage to advocate two radical measures which have the merit of boldness and thoroughness. They are the selection of a gathering ground for the water supply on Jako, from which it could be distributed among the houses by means of earthenware pipes, and the construction of all houses designed for European residences with flat roofs and tanks for the storage of rain water. This is the case in Venice, and it has been carried out with signal success in Gibraltar. Dr. De Renzy adds:—"The same plan is followed by all prudent persons in the West Indies, and I have lately heard of an eminent Judge of the High Court in Calcutta, who ascribes his good health during a residence of many years in that unwholesome city to his arrangements for securing a supply of rain water for drinking and culinary use."

AFGHAN HORSEDEALERS.

Once upon a time a party of these men, conveying about one hundred and fifty horses and ponies southward, rested a few days in a certain Central Indian station famous for the "horsy" and hog-hunting proclivities of its European inhabitants. It was known that the Afghans had a batch of mixed horses in which were some good ones, and accordingly a Captain Z., who was notorious as a judge of a good horse, was in great request by more diffident gentlemen who feared to trust themselves unguided into the hands of the strangers. A few country-bred horses were purchased, under the Captain's advice, at fair prices, but the Captain himself became enamoured of a magnificent "gulf Arab" stallion, for which a large price was asked. The horse was young, and only half broken, and was kept carefully blindfolded by a native cloth tied round his head. The Captain examined his teeth. No deception there. Passed his hand down his legs. Clean as a whistle. Punched his sides. No organs to mend. Peeped under the bandage. Eyes bloodshot, but apparently all right. The horse apparently full of fire, lashing out right and left, but a splendid animal. At the request of the Captain, an Afghan mounted him barebacked, when it was perceived the horse had magnificent action, rather high, perhaps, but our Captain considered that hardly a fault. "Take off the bandage," cried the Captain, more and more pleased. "I dare not. He would run away with me," answered the dealer. "Well, take it off, and I'll ride him myself," quoth the Captain. "My lord, excuse me, this is a two thousand rupee horse, he is only half broken. The ground is rough, and he would injure himself. Suppose he hurts his knees on those stones, how can I sell him then?" "Well, put him at that ditch, and let me see if he can jump?" "Yes, my lord."

Putting the horse to a canter, the 'Afghan brought him up to the ditch. As he did so, he laid his hand on the animal's crupper. There was no mistake about his jumping, for he cleared the ditch at a bound and ten feet beyond it. "What will you take for him?" was the next question of the enamoured Captain, and after much haggling and bargaining, it was finally agreed that the captain should give 500 rupees in ready money, and a one thousand rupee horse, a Bombay Arab, not quite up to his weight, for this blindfolded paragon. There was, of course, no question of warranty, considering the character and nationality of the dealer. The same evening, the horse, still blindfold, was transferred to the Captain's stables, and next morning the Afghans were gone. That night at mess, the happy purchaser, a rare occurrence with him, boasted loudly of his purchase. He would not take Rs. 3,000 for him, &c., &c., and now that the horse was his own he would ride him next morning, broken or unbroken, without the blindfold. The morning came, and the horse was brought round saddled at gun fire for his master, the syce keeping on the bandage which he had feared, for the sake of his own limbs, to remove. The Captain mounted. "Take off the cloth," he said, setting himself firmly in his seat in the expectation of a "to do," but the horse submitted quietly, to the owner's surprise. There was no time to remark on the subject, however. "The Bobbery Pack" met at daylight outside the station, and to the meet the Captain betook himself, wondering at the magnificent action of his steed when put to a trot. "A splendid horse! Never saw a finer! By jove." You got a bargain! These, and such like exclamations, greeted the delighted owner in the glooming as he joined the meet. The sun was just rising when a "Jack" was found, and away went the hunt, helter, skelter over a fine level "maidan," the Captain leading, and having it all his own way. Presently a tolerably deep nullah loomed ahead. "Now for a jump," muttered the captain, cramming his steed to it. What was his horror to find the horse never rose, but ran into it. Horse and man tumbled into the bottom in a nasty heap, and were with difficulty extricated. "Hanged if I don't think the brute is blind," said the captain, shaking himself, and proceeding to take a look at his quivering steed's optics; and no doubt of it; the horse was blind, stone blind, only it required a searching examination to detect it. "Oh, what an infernal do—never was so done in my life," muttered the enraged victim; and yet he jumped all right yesterday. Stay, what a fool I was. I see the trick." Mounting again, the captain put his steed into a canter on some level ground, laid his hand on the animal's crupper, when the horse at once made a bound of some fifteen feet. The knowing captain was done, and by the simple agents of a trick and some ginger. He never offered to give advice in horseflesh again or evermore dealt with an Afghan, that we are aware of.—Madras Times.

Miscellaneous.

ABOLITION OF THE MINT.—We learn that on the recommendation of the Government of India the Madras Mint is to be abolished, notwithstanding the appeal made by the Chamber of Commerce for its continuance.

SAINT THOMAS'S MOUNT.—The heat at this station is reported to be intense. Two men of the Royal Artillery fell victims to sun-stroke last week, one on Tuesday and the other on Friday last.—Madras Times, May 20.

THE SURF.—A high surf prevailed yesterday. The usual signal was hoisted, but, notwithstanding this, some masulah boatmen were bold enough to put out to sea. At eleven in the forenoon two boats, while making up to the shipping in the roadstead, came to grief, being dashed to pieces by the waves.—Ibid.

VELLORE.—The Commander-in-Chief having perused, doubtless with some surprise, the recent sensational editorial paragraphs in the Athenaeum, implying that a mutiny of the native corps at Vellore had been providentially prevented, at once called upon the military authorities in that station for full particulars, and the authorities replied that up to Saturday they had heard nothing about the alleged disaffection.—Madras Mail, May 17.

EUROPEANS FROM AUSTRALIA.—The President of the Vagrancy Committee wrote on the 14th of April to the Chief Secretary to Government, stating that several Europeans who had lately arrived from Melbourne in charge of horses, and who were now in the Strangers' Home at Royapooram, had represented to the committee that they were induced to come to Madras by assurances regarding the facility of finding employment here, which they now find to be entirely unfounded; they state that there are many men (situated like themselves) at Melbourne and other colonial towns who have been led to entertain equally false expectations and are prepared to take the earliest opportunity of coming to Madras, and they have begged the committee to cause it to be notified as widely as possible in the colonies that there is no employment here for Europeans, and that the condition of a European without means or employment is far harder in India than it is in Australia. The president said that the Government would not fail to be struck with the fact that these men have in their distress and disappointment spontaneously sought to save others from the mistake into which they themselves have been betrayed, and the committee desired to express their earnest hope that the Right Honorable the Governor in Council would be pleased to address such representations as he might think fit to the Colonial Governments in view to their warning persons intending to emigrate to this country of the utter hopelessness of such a step. A copy of this communication has been forwarded to the colonial authorities in Australia in order that action may be taken in the matter.

THE MILITARY MALE ORPHAN ASYLUM.—The eightieth anniversary of this institution was held last evening, when the Right Hon. the Governor presided, and a large number of ladies and gentlemen were present to witness the proceedings. The hall was tastefully decorated, and the whole place wore an exceedingly neat appearance. The band of the school which was in attendance played "God Save the Queen" on the arrival of the Governor. The proceedings were begun by the boys singing the song "He learned to use his hands." The Principal then read the report, from which we learn that on the 30th ult. there were 264 lads in the Asylum, as compared with 301 on the same date last year. This diminution was rendered necessary by the fact that on the approaching amalgamation of the Asylum with the Lawrence Asylum at Ootacamund, only 250 boys can be received from Madras. The telegraph class was in full work throughout the year, and the conduct and intelligence of the boys had secured the approbation of the telegraph authorities. Two boys had entered the medical department, six were employed in the Government bakery, and four were engaged at the School of Arts learning pottery and carpentry. Dr. Hunter had continued to take a very lively interest in the welfare of the orphans. Several lads had been apprenticed to the Asylum Press, while others have been employed by tradesmen at the presidency. With a few exceptions all their clothing has been made by the boys themselves, and a Government contract for making sheets had been satisfactorily completed, upwards of 18,000 sheets having been hemmed solely by the boys with the aid of sewing machines, of which there were seven in the tailor's shop. The school had been recently examined by the Government inspector, when the average of marks gained was 64 per cent.—the highest rate ever attained. Mr. Fowler reports that the classes seemed to him, on the whole, in a most satisfactory condition. The boys were willing and intelligent. The sulkiness, formerly one of the worst features in the school, it was most satisfactory to find no traces of, and in Mr. Fowler's opinion the governors will hand over their charge to the Lawrence Asylum in a generally satisfactory condition. The infant school continued to prosper, and 700 volumes had been added to the school and hospital libraries, which were largely used by the boys. The conduct of the boys was most satisfactory, and there had been very little sickness; only one death had occurred during the year. The receipts amounted to Rs. 51,813, and the expenses to Rs. 45,022, leaving a balance at credit of Rs. 6,791. The asylum press had contributed during the year Rs. 10,000 to the funded capital, which now amounts to nearly five lacs, nearly the whole of which came from the press. The average cost of each boy has been Rs. 13-1 per mensem.—Madras Times, May 20.

THE GHEE ORDEAL.—Certain Brahmins on the Malabar coast recently addressed a petition to Lord Napier, "in consequence of a prevailing and now intolerable evil, owing to an unfortunate misconception on the part of the Madras Government in relation to a certain ancient and religious custom on the coast of Malabar. That this misconception (the result of misrepresentation) is the source of considerable anxiety to the as yet unaccused amongst the Brahmins of the Malabar coast, inasmuch as it has been, and is, the unflinching occasion of courage to malicious defamers and of untold misery to the innocent of their order, who, for want of their hallowed and immemorial test in cases of adultery, are unjustly doomed for the rest of their years to sufferings equivalent to those entailed by the combined miseries of transportation for life and excommunication from the Churches of Rome or England. That the misconception adverted to is the erroneous belief that the 'Ghee-test' (for adultery) of the Brahmins of the Malabar coast is compulsory, which it is not, and, in the first place, a mode of torture, and, in the next, that it is wholly unconnected with their religion. With respect to the alleged torture, your memorialists must firstly be allowed to state and to engage to prove that while the 'Ghee-test' is of greater holiness, it is certainly no more a torture and decidedly less long in healing than the Vishnool brand, so frequently received to this day by your lordship's Vishnoolite or 'Vyshnavass' Hindu subjects in Coimbatore, Combaconum, Tanjore, Mangalore, and throughout the Madras Presidency, and even in the city of Madras itself, in the immediate vicinity of your lordship. And, furthermore, secondly, your memorialists beg leave to point out and to assure your lordship, that the blessed observance of the 'Ghee-test' above-mentioned is as fully a rite, and fully as religious as the exceedingly far more painful rite of circumcision that is permitted to Jews and to Mahomedans in the British dominions, and in every part of Europe. That time, thus far, has been unable to reconcile the population of the Malabar coast to European ideas, respecting the abolition of the said ancient and religious custom; that the intense longing for its renewal is daily more vehemently felt; that, however the feeling may be despised in countries of a higher civilisation, its existence is here cherished by Hindu minds as at once holy and pregnant with usefulness. And, under such circumstances, your memorialists would deferentially submit a slight burn at the worst cannot for a moment be compared with the mental torture that at present awaits the accused in time as a prelude of the torments of eternity, not to dwell on the sorrow, too powerful for utterance, thus unavoidably occasioned to our families by the exclusion perchance of a dear friend, or haply a beloved member, alike from the enjoyment of domestic happiness and from all temporal and eternal felicity." The following endorsement was passed on this extraordinary petition:—"The opinion of his Excellency the Governor in Council with respect to the Ghee ordeal is the same as that of his predecessors in office. He would regard the re-establishment of this observance as equally injurious in its social consequences as it would be repugnant to true humanity and civilisation. He cannot credit the allegation in the petition that the request made possesses the sympathy of the enlightened Prince who now rules in Travancore."—Madras Times.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

RULES FOR THE CONDUCT OF (MILITARY) BUSINESS DURING THE ABSENCE OF THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL AND COUNCIL.

May 10.—No. 519.—With reference to G.G.O. No. 338, dated April 15, 1864, prescribing rules for the conduct of business in the military department during the absence of the Governor general and the Council from the Presidency, it is notified, for information and guidance, that reports and correspondence on the subjects hereafter specified should be addressed by all Governments and departments to the Officiating Secretary at Calcutta, viz.:—

1. Applications for furlough to Europe, save for furlough on urgent private affairs, which should be sent to the Secretary to Government with the Governor general.

2. Reports of departure on furlough and of return to duty, with certificates of permission to return, &c.

3. Grant of sick leave to Europe to officers of the Bengal Presidency when such leave is given from another Presidency.

4. Applications to retire from the service.

5. Estates of deceased officers and soldiers.

6. Claims to medals, or application for medals, or for decorations to replace those lost or stolen.

7. Applications for advances for building purposes.

8. All ordinary returns and periodical or other documents which are required for mere record, except such as the Secretary to Government with the Governor general may specially intimate, are to be sent to him.

The above orders are not intended in any way to supersede those laid down in G.G.O. No. 338 of 1864, viz., that, save in emergent cases requiring the immediate orders of the Governor general by telegraph, the Governments of Madras, Bengal, and the Chief Commissioner of British Burmah should address all correspondence to the Officiating Secretary at the Presidency, and that heads of departments in Calcutta should also address that officer in all cases.

OFFICIAL EXPENDITURE.

May 12.—No. 146.—Read the following resolution by the Government of India in the financial department, No. 1,772, dated March, 1869:—

Resolution.—Now that the arrangements have been made for carrying out the financial budget for 1869-70, and that specific orders regarding the allotments for each head of the service have been issued to each local government and administration, and to each Imperial department, the Government of India desires to impress on all concerned in general terms, the importance of strictly restraining the expenditure within the limits of the budget allotments.

It will have been apparent to all executive authorities that the Government of India is determined to have at least an equilibrium between income and ordinary expenditure; that this equilibrium has been obtained in the present budget with some difficulty, and only with the aid of an income-tax. It will hence be further manifest that the equilibrium can only be preserved by means of the restriction of expenditure according to the limitation laid down. If the allotments shall be all exceeded, the consequent inconvenience will be grave indeed. The Government of India will of course do all in its power to prevent any such excess occurring, but it confidently relies on the zealous exertions of all executive authorities for the same end. It believes that such reliance cannot be misplaced, remembering the comparatively close correspondence during the present year and the past year between the amounts budgeted for, and the amounts ultimately audited and adjusted for civil and military departments. The attention heretofore bestowed on this important matter should not only be sustained, but if possible, increased. Whatever degree of discretion may be properly left to the local authorities in respect to details, there should be the most complete understanding that the totals of the budget allotments must not on any account be exceeded. On the contrary, there should rather be savings under each budget head by the rigid enforcement of economy. For all this the departmental or other authorities are really responsible. The department of audit and account will do their best to check irregularity of expenditure, but real economy and substantive check must mainly depend on the efforts of those who are in administrative charge.

Resolution.—The Gov. gen. in Council, in circulating to the public works department the foregoing resolution, desires to direct the earnest attention of all officers concerned to the absolute necessity of keeping the expenditure strictly within the limit of the Budget grant, and at the same time to point out that, the main divisions of the grant being virtually separate grants, excess over one cannot be compensated by a saving on the other.

It will be the special duty of the controllers of public works accounts to watch the expenditure of the year, and to bring to the notice of the accountant general of the department any deviations from the established practice in the allotment of funds to works in excess of the grants.

The Gov. gen. in Council further deems it necessary to add that, in case of any excess of outlay on public works taking place in any year without the special sanction of the Government of India, such excess will be viewed by H.E. in Council as evincing a direct and wilful disregard of the distinct orders of the Supreme Government; and this Government will in every such case consider the propriety of making a retrenchment equal to the amount of the excess expenditure from the grant of the succeeding year in which the excess may be brought to light.

EDUCATIONAL.—The following gentlemen to be members of the local committee of public instruction at Chittagong:—Messrs. Falcon, Marshall, and Pereira.

Lieut. Mascall, R.E., asst. engr., 2nd div., Baree Doab Canal, has passed the lower standard in Hindustani.

RAILWAY MAGISTRATES.—Under the provisions of section 3, regulation XVI. of 1810, the Hon. the Lieut. Governor has invested the magistrates of Etawah and Allypore with concurrent powers of a joint magistrate at the railway stations in the Mynpoore and Muttra districts noted opposite their names, for the trial of cases connected with the railway:—Magistrate of Etawah: Baden, Shekhabad, in the district of Mynpoore. Magistrate of Allypore: Burlun, Juleysur-road, in the district of Muttra.

ARTILLERY ESTABLISHMENTS.—In conformity with instructions received from England, and with the sanction of Government, the C. in C. in India is pleased to notify that the batteries of men in charge of heavy batteries and mountain batteries royal artillery will be changed every three years, in order that thorough instruction in the different descriptions of arms may fall to the lot of every garrison battery, with the occasional relief of each battery at the hill stations where the mountain batteries are placed.

LEAVE IN ANTICIPATION OF FURLOUGH.—It having come to the knowledge of the C. in C. that in some instances applicants for furlough on private affairs have proceeded to the port of embarkation in anticipation of their furlough being sanctioned by Government, attention is drawn to para. 3 of G.O. No. 34 of 1869, and with reference thereto H.E. directs that officers shall not be permitted to avail themselves of preparatory leave on private affairs until they shall have been officially informed that their furlough has been granted by the Government of India.

EXTRA TRAVELLING LEAVE.—The Secretary to the Calcutta Council, addressing the Accountant-general, Madras, writes:—"I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter No. 6,813 of March 17, inquiring whether the seven days in addition to travelling allowed by the order of this department, No. 1,313, dated March 16, 1865, to a covenanted civil servant or a military officer in civil employ, transferred from one station to another, should be spent by the transferred officer at his old or his new station, and in reply to state that it is unnecessary to prescribe a rule on the subject."

COMMAND ALLOWANCE, NATIVE ARTILLERY.—In order to assimilate the practice throughout India the Right Hon. the Governor-general in Council orders that henceforth the command allowance for the Eurasian and all native batteries of artillery shall be Rs. 150 a month. The sum is to be held to include command, horse, and stationery allowance, as well as the allowance for repair of arms and accoutrements. The allowance is only to be drawn by the officer actually exercising the command, exception being made when the permanent commandant may be absent on privilege leave.

DEPOT ESTABLISHMENTS.—The Secretary of State for India, at the suggestion of the Field Marshal Commanding in Chief, has approved of the depot establishment of infantry regiments serving in India being fixed at two captains and three lieutenants. In recommending the change his Royal Highness observed that many young officers now enter the British army with the object of being transferred to the staff corps, and for that purpose are anxious to join their regiments in India instead of the depots at home, in view of qualifying themselves as probationers at as early a period as possible.

TRAVELLING ALLOWANCE TO CHAPLAINS.—It is notified to the Madras Government, in regard to the rate of travelling allowance for chaplains appointed to the station of Ootacamund, Coonor, and Wellington, that the allowance is 8, not 12 annas per mile. At the same time it is explained that the first of the rules regarding travelling allowance to chaplains which were published in notification No. 1,653, dated Aug. 7, 1868, relates to the case of a chaplain whose appointment is changed, whether temporarily or permanently; and the third of the rules to a chaplain temporarily leaving his head-quarters on duty without having station changed; and that, consequently, the phrase in the third rule, "a chaplain sent to officiate at other stations," must be understood to mean, not a chaplain transferred to an officiating appointment, but a chaplain sent to duty at a neighbouring station without relinquishing the charge of his own.

EMBARKATION RETURNS.—Very serious inconvenience having been occasioned by the non-receipt of embarkation reports of drafts of time-expired men and invalids by officers commanding regiments and batteries, the C. in C. in India directs that officers commanding embarkation depots will forward to such commanding officers a report of the embarkation, not only of detachments but of individuals belonging to their command, accompanied by a nominal list, with regimental numbers attached, of the men referred to. The instructions are rendered necessary in order to enable commanding officers to correct the rolls of their corps immediately after the embarkation of detachments, and to send the requisite advices home with reference to savings' bank deposits, &c., in accordance with the repeated orders of H.R.H. the P.M. C. in C. This order applies to all embarkation depots in India. Their Excellencies the Commanders in Chief of Madras and Bombay are requested to issue any subsidiary orders in their respective commands which may be necessary for the exact fulfilment of these instructions.

STORES—ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT.—In continuation of G.O. No. 197 of 1868, and with the sanction of Government, the following extract of War Office Circular No. 16, dated Jan. 1, 1868, "Changes in Material," Article 1515, is published for general information:—"It is to be distinctly understood that no article of store becomes obsolete by the mere introduction of a later pattern. The condemnation of stores as obsolete will always be followed by their withdrawal, upon specific orders to that effect, but until withdrawn they are to be available for issue, irrespective of any distinguishing mark they may bear, or any preference which may be expressed for any particular pattern."

SERVICES OF WARRANT OFFICERS.—It being desirable to have on record, for purposes of reference, the field and departmental services of all warrant officers as well as sergeants on the unattached list, H.E. the Governor-general in Council is pleased to direct that heads of departments shall, as soon as practicable, forward to the officer in charge of the Adjutant-general's Office at Simla, rolls in the annexed form, showing in detail the services of each individual, and affording such documentary proof as may be forthcoming of any distinguished or special services that may have been performed by him. In rendering these returns, great care should be taken that the information afforded is so complete as to enable H.E. the C. in C. to contrast the claims of those who, from time to time, may be brought forward for advancement on account of special merit, long departmental service, or distinguished conduct in the field. After the 1st January of each year, supplementary rolls will be sent to the Adjutant-general by departments, of those individuals who may have joined the department during the previous year, giving particulars of any special services performed by those whose rolls are already on record.

SPECIFICATIONS OF INVENTIONS.—The undermentioned specifications of inventions have been filed, under the provisions of Act XV. of 1859, at the office of the Secretary to the Government of India in the Home Department. Copies have been sent to one of the secretaries to each of the Governments of Bengal, Fort St. George, Bombay, and the North Western Provinces:—No. 407: Mr. Alexander Braid, of Stoke-upon-Trent, in the county of Staffordshire, England, for an improved railway chair. No. 415: Mr. G. Dubern, of No. 29, Mott's-lane, Calcutta, gentleman, for improved punkahs and machinery for working them. No. 425: Mr. William Ogden Giles, of New York, United States of America, assignee of Mr. M. Sautter, of Paris, in the Empire of France, for improvements in preparing fibre from bamboo or cane for the manufacture of textile fabrics.

TROOP-SHIPS.—The following Horse Guards G.O., No. 5 of 1869, is published for the information and guidance of commanding officers of troops embarking on board H.M.'s troop-ships:—"To obviate the inconvenience which has arisen from time to time in consequence of officers commanding troops embarked in H.M.'s troop-ships making reports to the Quartermaster-general unknown to the captain of the vessel, containing complaints or suggestions in respect to the arrangements made for the accommodation of the troops on board, H.R.H. the Field Marshal C. in C. directs that, in future, whenever a commanding officer of troops on board one of H.M.'s troop-ships considers it desirable to make any complaint or suggestion, he should in the first place communicate with the captain of the ship, after which, should it still be expedient to make any representation to head quarters, he should furnish the captain with a copy of his report before leaving the vessel; handing the original immediately on landing to the officer commanding at the port of disembarkation, for transmission by him, at once, to the Quartermaster-general, Horse Guards. H.R.H., while always glad to receive any suggestions from commanding officers which may tend to the benefit of troops on board ship, feels assured that it is hardly necessary to point out to them how desirable it is that they should avoid making frivolous complaints, which only cause bad feeling as well as unnecessary correspondence and loss of valuable time. H.R.H. takes this opportunity of reminding commanding officers of the importance of making themselves thoroughly acquainted with those parts of the regulations which relate to duties on board ship."

CIVIL LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—The following gentlemen obtained leave of absence in May last:—Mr. DaCosta, a judge of the Calcutta Court of Small Causes, for 2 mo. Dr. Meredith, protector of labourers in Upper Assam, 30 days' prep. leave, to enable him to appear before the Presidency Standing Medical Committee. #### GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

NEW MILITARY FURLOUGH RULES.

Bombay Castle, May 3.—Letter from the Secretary to the Government of India, mil. dept., No. 1,469, of Jan. 30, to the adjt. general:—

In requesting you to move H.E. the C. in C. to cause the decision of H.R.H. the Field Marshal C. in C., submitted with your No. 73c, dated 4th inst., in regard to the application of the term "temporary leave of absence" (in para. 2 of the Secretary of State's No. 254 (G.G.O. No. 797 of Aug. 19, 1869), dated July 16, 1868), to be published in H.E.'s gen. orders, I am desired to suggest that, in order to prevent any misapprehension, it should be at the same time pointed out that the "furlough to Europe" reckons as service for the rank of col. under the five years' rule only when the major and brevet lieut. col. holds a qualifying staff appt., and not when he is in com. of a regt.

Letter from the mil. secy. Horse Guards, dated Nov. 17, 1868, to the C. in C. in India:—

Having submitted to the Field Marshal C. in C. your letter of Sept. 26 last, I am directed to intimate to your Excellency that H.R.H. considers that the term "temporary leave of absence," used in the Secretary of State's despatch quoted by you should be held to include "furlough to Europe," in calculating the service for colonel of a major and brevet lieut. col. holding a qualifying staff appt.

CONSULAR APPOINTMENT.—(FOREIGN-OFFICE, June 12).—The Queen has been pleased to approve of Mr. Francis Machel Cartwright as Consul at Madras for the North German Confederation.

BOMBAY MUNICIPALITY BONDS.—Messrs. Crawford, Colvin and Co. have given notice that they have received the usual remittance to provide for the half-yearly interest on bonds of the Bombay municipality, due on the 30th inst.

FRASER GUNS FOR INDIA.—In pursuance of the approval at Shoeburyness, on the 12th inst., of the Woolwich gun, a War-office order has been received at Woolwich arsenal for the manufacture, before the end of the financial year, of fifty 9-inch Fraser guns for the Indian service.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The biddings of £325,000 in bills on India took place on Wednesday, the 16th inst., at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £210,300; and to Madras, £114,700. The minimum price was fixed, as before, at 1s. 10½d. Tenders at 1s. 11d. will receive about 76 per cent. The result shows a considerable increase in the demand for means of remittance.

THE ASSAM COMPANY.—The report of the Assam Company for the year ending the 31st December last has been issued. It states that the estimated result of the year's operations exhibits a trifling profit, and that the estimates for 1869 are sufficiently favourable to justify the directors in proposing an interim dividend of 2½ per cent. on the paid-up capital.

JUDGE ADVOCATE-GENERAL IN INDIA.—We understand that Mr. W. G. Romaine, Secretary of the Admiralty, has accepted the appointment of Judge Advocate-General in India, offered to him recently by the Duke of Argyll. Mr. Romaine was Deputy Judge-Advocate in the Crimea, and at the end of the war was appointed Secretary of the Admiralty by Sir Charles Wood.

M. DE TASSY.—According to the Opinion Nationale of Paris, M. Garcin de Tassy, whose work on Mohammedan Festivals we lately noticed, has just been made a member of the Royal Danish Scientific Society, as a tribute to those philological labours by which he was the first to establish the scientific study of the modern languages of India. By such a choice, says the same journal, the Royal Danish Society has reaped equal honour and advantage.

DEBT OF INDIA.—A statement prepared in the Public Debt-office at Calcutta shows that in the last half of the year 1868 notes of the registered debt of India were presented for interest at the Treasuries of India as follows:—By Europeans, Rs. 25,77,74,500; and by natives, Rs. 11,74,23,300. The proportions are 69 per cent. held by Europeans, and 31 per cent. held by natives. These proportions may be assumed to obtain in regard to the whole Rs. 47,07,52,600, the amount of notes presented and not presented. The enfaced notes held in London, Rs. 15,75,19,400 are assumed to be held by Europeans.

ARRIVAL OF TROOPS.—The sailing Indiaman Windsor Castle, Commander C. Douglas, R.N.R., belonging to Messrs. Green and Co., of Blackwall, arrived at Spithead on Saturday, from Bombay, bringing to England troops from India, under contract with the Indian Government, as follows:—Captain Stockwell, 2nd Battalion 10th Infantry, in military command; Captain Rimington, B.S.C., and Mrs. Rimington; Lieutenant Malcolm, 2nd Battalion 10th Infantry; Assistant-Surgeon J. Waters, 82nd Infantry; Assistant-Surgeon Anderson, R.A., 121 non commissioned officers and men from various corps, time-expired and invalided men, with sixteen wives and thirty-six children. The troops were disembarked on Monday morning, and the Windsor Castle immediately afterwards sailed for London.

THE VISIT OF THE VICEROY OF EGYPT.—His Highness Ismail Pasha, Viceroy of Egypt, was to arrive at Buckingham Palace about five o'clock on Tuesday afternoon, and would reside there during his visit to this country. To-day there will be a State concert at the Palace, and their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales and other members of the Royal Family will be present at it. On Thursday his Highness the Viceroy will proceed to Windsor on a visit to her Majesty the Queen, and will remain at Windsor Castle for the night. On Friday he will return to Buckingham Palace, and in the evening will dine with the Prince and Princess of Wales at Marlborough-house. On Saturday the Viceroy will be present at the review of the household troops, to be held in the presence of her Majesty and the Court, in Windsor Great Park. Next Monday there will be a breakfast at Buckingham Palace, and the Viceroy will dine in the evening with the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland, at Stafford-house. On Tuesday, the 29th inst., there will be a grand fête given at the Crystal Palace, by Royal command, in honour of his Highness the Viceroy; the musical festival arranged for the occasion will be conducted by Sir Michael Costa, and the evening will close with a great pyrotechnic display. On the following day, Wednesday, the 30th, the Viceroy will attend Frances Countess Waldegrave's ball at Strawberry-hill, at which the Prince and Princess of Wales will be present. Lieutenant-colonel Cavendish and Lord Alfred Paget went to Dover, by command of the Queen, to meet his Highness the Viceroy of Egypt, and attend on him during his visit.

SOLDIERS' DAUGHTERS' HOME.—The general meeting of subscribers and friends was held on Friday afternoon, on the grounds of the institution, under the presidency of Lieutenant-General Sir J. Hooper Grant. The military element was well represented, the company present including Lieutenant-General Walker, Lieutenant-General Sir George Lawrence, Major-General Boileau, Major-General Beatty, Major-General Tremereere, General Sir William Codrington, Major-General Sir Arthur Lawrence, Colonel Hoff, Colonel Adams, Colonel Grant, and Colonel Western. A large number of ladies attended. The thirteenth annual report, which gives a highly satisfactory account of the progress of the charity, states that twenty-seven girls have been admitted during the past year, and that thirty-two have left during the same period; of whom seventeen went to service, one found employment as assistant in Lady Suffolk's school, twelve were transferred to the Royal Patriotic Asylum, Wandsworth, and two were withdrawn by their parents. Eight girls were elected into the Home on May 26, and no less than sixteen girls have become entitled to rewards for two years' continuous service with good conduct, three of them for the third time, three for the second time, and ten for the first time. The number of girls who have received rewards up to the present is forty-four, being about one in every three who have gone to service, and the total number of rewards granted is sixty-eight. Upwards of sixty boys from the Duke of York's School were permitted to be present at the interesting proceedings, and to join in play with their sisters and cousins. The band of the school played a selection of airs during the afternoon.

PRONJE v. MATHEWS.—In this case, which was argued on the 28th April, 1869, and during several days, Vice-Chancellor Malins, on June 12, delivered judgment. The case was very complicated, but the facts were briefly these:—In 1829 the plaintiff, a Frenchman, married Harriet Shean, an English woman, domiciled in Paris, and on the occasion of the marriage a settlement was made according to the French law. In 1830 Harriet Pronje eloped with a person named Demailly, and came to London. In 1832 she gave birth to a child, which was registered as Leon Pronje. The husband followed her to London, and induced her to return with him to Paris. She subsequently lived with Dr. Chevrot, with whom she went to India, taking with her Leon Pronje, and engaged in the provision trade, where she amassed a considerable amount of money. In 1841 Leon Pronje went to Paris, and in 1852 married a person named Julie Chalot or Simon. In January, 1853, she gave birth to a daughter. Leon Pronje and his wife or mistress went to Calcutta, where he died in 1856. Mrs. Pronje, his mother, then took charge of his child, and maintained her till her death, in 1865. She had acquired considerable wealth, and remitted £3,000 to the defendant Mathew, with directions to him to settle it upon Leon Pronje's daughter. A settlement was accordingly prepared and approved; but before its execution Madame Pronje died. The husband of Madame Pronje, who had obtained possession of the other part of his wife's personal estate, then filed this bill to set aside this settlement, on the ground that it was at variance with his own marriage settlement, and void by the French law. An immense mass of evidence was adduced as to the French law. The Vice-Chancellor, after going over the facts and considering the evidence, dismissed the bill with costs.

OUDE AND ROHILKUND RAILWAY.—The half-yearly general meeting of this company was held on June 16th, at the City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street; Mr. W. Dent in the chair. The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the directors' report, stated that the company's system of lines in the provinces of Oude and Benares was now definitively settled, and in Rohilkund the only point remaining to be determined was the extension of the main line beyond Mooradabad to form a junction with the Punjab and Delhi Railway, either at Meerut or Saharanpore. The main line extended from Benares through Jaunpore, Fyzabad, Bareilly, and Chundowsee to Mooradabad, with branches from Nawabgunge to Byram Ghat, to Cawnpore (the present open section), Bareilly to Nynce Tal, and Chundowsee to Allyghur. With reference to Allyghur, the board had always been aware of its great importance, and though from the first it formed a part of their original design for railway accommodation for Rohilkund, the Government did not include it in the first contract of the company; subsequently, however, it was conceded on precisely the same terms as the other lines, and the board had executed a contract for it. With regard to bridges for crossing the River Ganges, a great portion of the trade of Oude and Rohilkund crossed the Ganges, which lay between their system and the railways leading to Bengal, to Bombay, and to the Punjab. The annual traffic at the several ferries was as follows:—From the Bareilly and adjoining district, 108,000 tons of goods and produce and 845,000 persons; from the Mooradabad district, 103,000 tons and 326,800 persons; and from another district, 112,000 tons and 470,000 persons. With such an extensive and established trade it was clear, whatever might be the value of their main through line, that, to accommodate the traffic mentioned and make the system remunerative, it was essential that the river should be bridged over and junctions effected with the East Indian Railway, and with the Delhi and Punjab Railway. The progress made in the engineering operations might be considered satisfactory. By the end of the year the whole of the permanent way materials for a length of 300 miles of line would reach India; and the agent there having matured his arrangements for the conveyance of the materials to convenient points on the company's lines, the works would proceed rapidly. He then referred to the Nulhatee line, and did not doubt that the Government would see fit to accede to the proposal made by the company's agent with respect to it. The line gave the superior accommodation of a railway in substitution for an ordinary road, and at the same outlay as the Government would have to incur for the repair and maintenance of an ordinary road. The directors proposed, with the sanction of the meeting, to pay one year's interest at 5 per cent. on the Nulhatee capital of £50,000, which was excluded from the guarantee. Mr. Pender seconded the motion for the adoption of the report. A long discussion ensued, in which Mr. Maxwell, Mr. Franklin, and Mr. Robinson took part. The report was adopted, the retiring directors and auditors were re-elected, and the directors were authorised to pay out of the accumulated funds one year's interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum to the 30th June on the capital of the Nulhatee line.

A CURIOUS DISPUTE.—In the Exchequer Court, on the 14th inst., the case of Harvey v. Oxenham was heard. This was an action to try the right to certain articles of household furniture. The plaintiff was the second son and administrator of the estate and effects of John Inglis Harvey, who died on the 17th February last, intestate, when about sixty-four years of age; and the defendants were Messrs. Oxenham, the well-known auctioneers in Oxford-street. The deceased was formerly accountant-general at Calcutta, with a salary of £5,000 a-year; but some time before his death he had been living in this country, in receipt of his annual pension of £1,000. He was separated from his wife, and, according to the plaintiff's case, he had formed an improper connection with a Mrs. Clark, who resided at Brompton, and was the wife of a singer at music-halls. In February, Mr. Harvey and Mrs. Clark were living in separate houses, within a few doors of each other, in the Fulham-road. On the occasion of his death, Mrs. Clark was present, and the deceased's brother also. A day or two after the death Mr. Clark went to a broker and sold him the furniture in his wife's house for £90, giving a receipt for the money, in which he said the goods were his own, and that there was no lien upon them. Immediately afterwards Smith had them removed to the premises of Messrs. Oxenham, who advanced £90 upon them, and they were now in their possession. The plaintiff claimed the goods as the property of the deceased, and as regarded many of them put in invoices showing that they had been sold to him. It was stated that deceased had lavished vast sums of money upon Mrs. Clark, and it appeared that he left no real estate, and his personal estate was not sufficient to cover his debts. The defence was that the property consisted either of goods purchased by Mr. Harvey and given to Mrs. Clark or of goods purchased by herself. Mrs. Clark said she lived at Abingdon, and was the wife of Mr. Wyndham Clark. In 1863, a long time before she was married, she met Mr. Harvey at the Cumberland Ball, in St. James's Hall. Mr. Clark was then with her. From that time Mr. Harvey visited her nearly every day. In 1864 she went to Brighton, where Mr. Clark had taken the Canterbury Hall, and Mr. Harvey visited her there. Towards the end of the year she returned to London. In cross-examination, Mrs. Clark said she met Mr. Harvey about a year before she married. She denied that she had any illicit connection with the "old gentleman" after her marriage. Mr. Harvey gave some of the property to her husband to prevent him travelling, not to induce him to marry her. The presents to her were for former favours. She indignantly denied that old Harvey gave £300 to Clark to induce him to consent to have her transferred to him. What did he give Clark £300 for?—He was very fond of my husband's singing of Scotch songs, and he did not want him to travel about the country. Witness added—In December, 1863, Mr. Harvey might have addressed me in a letter as "My own dearest darling." I have written to him for money. I have had money from him a great many times, but I do not know how much altogether. I have no idea how much I got from the old gentleman. I did not get thousands of pounds from him. Mr. Harvey presented me with diamonds on my birthdays and wedding days, and sometimes I pledged portions of them. I do not know whether they were worth £7,000, £6,000, £5,000, or £4,000. I do not know their value. I suppose he gave them out of respect for me—nothing else. He was fond of my husband's musical powers.—The husband of the witness was in court, but was not called, and his absence from the box was severely animadverted upon by Huddleston in reply. The jury found a verdict for the plaintiff, damages £112, to be reduced to a nominal sum if the goods were returned.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FRIDAY, June 18.—ACCOUNTS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.—SIR STAFFORD NORTHCOTE asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether it was the intention of the Government to submit the home accounts of the Government of India, which had just been delivered, to the Committee of public accounts.—MR. GRANT DUFF: Having regard to the 7th and 8th paragraphs of the report of the Committee on public accounts for 1868, and considering that the arrangement with respect to salary and duties of our auditor, which that committee pronounced to be "not free from objection," no longer exists, we do not think that any useful purpose would be served by again this year submitting the home accounts of the Government of India to the Committee on public accounts. We do not accordingly propose to take the initiative in submitting them, but if my right hon. friend, after reconsidering the matter, thinks it desirable to move that they should be so submitted, we shall make no objection whatever to his proposal.

PETITIONS PRESENTED DURING LAST WEEK.—By Mr. J. G. Talbot, from Lieut.-Colonel John Charles McCaskill, praying for relief from losses incurred in consequence of the amalgamation of the Indian and the Royal army; by Mr. Neville-Grenville, from Major Hall, late of the Indian army, for compensation; by Sir H. Croft, from Captain Rannie, late 32nd Regiment Bengal Native Infantry, praying for compensation for loss of bonus on retirement, consequent on the amalgamation of the Indian armies; by Mr. Graves, from Lieut.-Colonel Phillips, Indian army, for compensation; by Mr. Beresford Hope, from Mr. Pixley, complaining of the system of retirement bonus in the East Indian army; by Sir J. Hay, from Colonel James Campbell, late Madras army, for consideration of claims; by Sir H. Selwin-Ibbetson, from Lieutenant James Nodding, late 4th Bombay Rifles, praying for consideration of claims of bonus on retirement; also by Colonel North, from Lieut.-Colonel Sale, late 9th Bengal Native Infantry, by Colonel Wright, from Major William Landon Jones, and by Mr. Grove, from Lieut.-Colonel Daniell, retired list, Bengal army, with similar prayer; by Sir J. Bailey, from Colonel G. Carr (retired list, Madras army), praying for the refunding of certain money paid on account of the Indian army purchase system, now abolished; by Colonel Bartelot, from Lieut.-Colonel Borthwick, for compensation for loss of bonus on retirement consequent on the amalgamation of the Indian army; by Mr. Amphlett, from Major Fergusson, late of the Madras army, with similar prayer; by Mr. Raikes, from Lieut.-Colonel Snow, of the Indian army, praying for redress for grievances inflicted by recent army regulations.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, June 21.—THE AUDITOR GENERAL OF INDIAN ACCOUNTS.—In reply to Sir S. NORTHCOTE, Mr. GRANT-DUFF explained that the business formerly transacted by the Auditor-general of Indian accounts, acting under the Secretary of State in Council, had been transferred to the head of the Financial Department, and he now simply audited the whole of the accounts of the Government of India under Act of Parliament, receiving a full salary of £1,000.

FISHERIES IN INDIA.—In reply to Sir S. NORTHCOTE, Mr. GRANT-DUFF said the Government were taking steps to preserve the fisheries in those rivers of India and Burmah where irrigation works had been constructed. Dr. Day, the author of "The Fisheries of Malabar," had been appointed to examine into the whole of that important subject. A despatch had just been sent out to the Governor-general directing him to give every encouragement to those officers who showed an intelligent interest in the fisheries.

ROYAL HORSE ARTILLERY.—MR. WALSH asked the Secretary of State for War whether it was the fact that certain batteries of the C Brigade, Royal Horse Artillery, were under orders for Ireland out of their turn of service, preparatory to the brigade being sent to India in 1871; and, if that was the case, on what principle the C Brigade, which returned from India in 1865-6, was selected for foreign service in preference to B Brigade, which returned to England in 1861.—MR. CARDWELL said the question of the hon. gentleman correctly stated what it was proposed to do in reference to the reliefs to which it related. When the two armies were amalgamated it was foreseen that unless some special arrangement were made with respect to the rule for reliefs, the Royal Horse Artillery and the whole of the artillery belonging to the old British establishment would be in India, and its place supplied by Indian Artillery. The subject was considered by the Indian department of the Horse Guards, and the arrangement come to under which present reliefs were about to be made. Those reliefs being over, the ordinary arrangements would arise and reliefs be carried out in accordance with the ordinary rules.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.

URGENT NECESSITY.—These preparations afford the best and cheapest means of removing all ordinary surgical and medical maladies, both in this country and in the Colonies. In the latter the Pills and Ointment are invaluable; for none but the careless would be without an antidote to the accidental injuries, and the many ailments to which the settler must be more or less exposed when at a distance from all professional aid. Sprains, cuts, burns, skin diseases, ulcers, abscesses, and varicose veins are readily cured by Holloway's Ointment. The Pills, too, furnish a perfect pharmacopoeia for subduing all internal derangements of the viscera, from simple irritation of the stomach to confirmed liver disease, or the more disastrous dysentery.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, June 1; Agra, May 29; Calcutta, May 28; Madras, May 26.

While England has been enjoying an unusually cold spring, and people are still asking if we are to have anything like an average summer, India seems to have been visited by unusually severe heat. From all parts of Northern and Central India, even from the Himalayas, come complaints of the trying weather. In the North-West plains and Oudh the thermometer exceeds an average of 100 daily. At Kamptee and other places in Central India several Europeans have died of heat apoplexy. Cholera also has not been idle, having struck down several officers and a number of men in various stations. Allahabad however is reported to have once more got rid of the plague.

THE new member of the Bombay Legislative Council, in the room of the late Maharajah of Edur, is Venayakrao Appasahib, younger brother of the Chief of Koorundwar, in the South Mahratta country. He is said to be an intelligent young man of much promise, and some acquaintance with English. His family attained distinction as soldiers under the Peishwahs.

SHERE ALI is already trying to turn his recent experiences in British India to serviceable account. What will come of his attempt to reform the Afghan army on English models we dare not prophesy. But he has evidently been struck by the contrast between a standing army under one head and a heterogeneous collection of armed retainers paid and governed by a number of feudal chiefs. His aim is to do away with this system of military farming by taking from the chiefs their military jagheers and the powers that accompany them, and bringing all their troops under his direct control. Of course the chiefs are to be compensated in money for the loss of their old privileges. But it remains to see whether they will yield the question with a good grace, and, in the event of their resistance, whether he will succeed in carrying his point. If he succeeds, we shall know that Afghanistan has gained a strong ruler; but what if he fails? The moral effect of his alliance with British India will however carry him some way on the road to success, and he is not a man to be frightened by shadows. He has already begun drilling his troops in the English fashion, with the help of some native officers who accompanied him back to Kabul. His son, Yakoob Khan, who acted as Regent for him, has been enjoined, we hear, to extend his knowledge of English; and his youngest son, our guest at Umballa, is beginning to read English for an hour or two daily.

MR. GIBBS, of the Malta and Alexandria Telegraph, has finished at Bombay the arrangements for laying the Red Sea cable between that place and Suez. After a careful inspection of the coast from Bombay to Mahim, he has recommended the landing of the cable in Back Bay, whence it will be carried underground to the fort. In November the Great Eastern will leave England for Bombay, and, once there, will immediately begin paying out the cable to Aden. It is therefore possible that in April, 1870, Suez and Aden will be once more linked by a telegraph line, and that the great want of cheap, safe, and speedy intercourse by telegraph between England and India will then at length be made good. This section of the line complete, no time will be lost in extending the telegraphic chain to China and Australia by way of Gallat.

THE Minister of the Sultan of Zanzibar landed at Bombay on the 22nd May, in order to plead with the Bombay Government for the remission of the 40,000 crowns his master had pledged himself to pay yearly to Muscat. The request on his part is not so unreasonable as at first sight it seems. Neither the Sultan's brother nor any of his family now occupies the Throne of Muscat, and why then should the Sultan of Zanzibar pay to a stranger and a usurper the money which was meant to compensate one branch of Syud Said's family for the fairer heritage that devolved on the other? Lord Canning expressly assigned that reason for the payment of the yearly sum, which was "not to be understood as a recognition of the dependence of Zanzibar upon Muscat." Obviously the money, if due at all under present circumstances, should be paid to the family of the expelled Imam, not to his successor on the Throne. Sultan Majid can lie under no obligation to Azan-bin-Ghez. On the contrary, no one could have blamed him if he had flatly refused to pay the subsidy without further words about it.

COLONEL HAINES has resigned the post of guardian and tutor to the young Maharajah of Mysore. He was appointed, it seems, by Sir Stafford Northcote against the opinion of Sir John Lawrence, and regarded himself as independent of the Chief Commissioner. The latter however seems to have asserted his rightful jurisdiction, and the dispute has ended in the resignation of Colonel Haines. As the Indian Government supported the Commissioner, and the Colonel refused to accept the wiser alternative of yielding to necessity, no one but himself is answerable for the consequences. The State may have lost the services of a good officer, but it was not to be expected that Mr. Bowring would tolerate pretensions fatal to his own authority.

LORD MAYO has already had to deal with a similar question to that which his predecessor decided in the case of the Nawab of Tonk. Maharana Gung Deo, chief of Alirajpore, a State to the east of Guzerat, having proved his utter incapacity to rule his own subjects, the Viceroy sequestered his territory, which has been placed under the charge of a British political officer.

For some time to come Alirajpore will enjoy the blessings of British rule. It will be governed in trust for the rightful heir of the dethroned prince, whom epilepsy, spirits, and opium have reduced to a state of hopeless imbecility. The accounts of receipts and expenditure will be kept distinct from those of the Indian Government, and the surplus revenue will be credited to the fief. In due time, when the next heir shall have reached years of discretion, the Government will be made over to him on fair conditions. Annexation being out of fashion, we are glad to see successive viceroys alive to the duty of enforcing the rights of the paramount power against offending feudatories.

"A NEGLECTED WIFE" asks us in another column whether Indian officers serving in India can be compelled to provide for the maintenance of their families at home. Her own experience seems to indicate an answer in the negative. She is not the only sufferer from a neglect so cruel, but her case seems to be one of peculiar hardship. For no apparent reason she and her four children have been left for years without a penny from a husband who is now drawing, we believe, close on a thousand a-year in a station not far from Dinapore. It is possible of course that he may have his reasons for conduct to us unaccountable; but at any rate he should be asked to show good cause for the seeming barbarity, or take his choice between atoning for the wrong and paying with the loss of his commission for further obstinacy. We believe that the authorities in India have more than once called upon him for explanations, which have hitherto evaporated in idle promises. It is hard to draw a line between an officer's military and civil relations, but many a smaller offence against social decencies has been visited from time to time with military censure.

ALTHOUGH the threatened famine has passed away without doing its worst, the distress in parts of India has not been trifling. In Central India the Taccavee advances for April were Rs. 21,750. In parts of Rajpore the peasantry were beginning to live on jungle fruits and roots. In the Hissar district of the Punjab 24,626 persons received direct relief and 3,533 were employed on relief works during the last week but one of April. This indeed shows 10,730 fewer than a month before. Cattle were still dying for want of fodder, and in some villages the people could not plough their lands for want of bullocks. The price of grain however was falling slightly. In the Kurnaul District 68,730 people were still receiving relief, besides 10,000 employed on public works. Some villages abound with "poor children little better than skeletons," and women whose husbands have gone away in search of work. In Rohtuk the number of people relieved had risen from 8,247 in the middle of April to 46,635 on the 2nd May. In Sirsa also there had been an increase on a smaller scale. From Lahore the harvest is reported under the average, but the cattle are healthy and fodder plentiful. From other districts the reports are generally more favourable. In the North-West Provinces as much as Rs. 221,819-0-6 had been laid out on Taccavee advances between January and May. The chiefs of Bundelkum, especially the Maharajah of Punnah, have emulated the Jey-pore Rajah and Sindia in their efforts to relieve distress. Besides remitting grain duties and revenue payments, they have spent large sums on relief works. The Punnah chief has been specially thanked for his good deeds by Lord Mayo.

CALCUTTA is debating a very nice question in hydrodynamics. If the Hooghly were to be embanked from some point near Calcutta down to the sea, how would the capital itself fare in the event of a cyclone attended by a storm-wave? It is clear that such an embankment would save the country below Calcutta from periodical floods. But what if the volume of water thus confined should rise higher and stronger in its upward course and overwhelm Calcutta itself? Such was the doubt first started by Colonel Beadle, and to an unscientific person the doubt looks formidable enough. Colonel Short however believes that the contraction of the waterway would not increase the height of the wave or the distance it would otherwise travel. On the other hand, the Astronomer Royal of England justifies the view taken by Colonel Beadle. Pointing to the quickened pace and greater volume of the tide in the Thames as compared with what it must have been at the building of old London Bridge, he thinks that the proposed embankment of the Hooghly would largely increase the force and height of the storm-wave, if it lasted for any time. Archdeacon Pratt of Calcutta goes beyond the Professor in the preciseness of his calculations. Carry out the embankment, he argues, and under conditions similar to those of 1864, you will get at Calcutta a wave twenty-nine feet high. What that would do for a city on a plain but a few feet above the river level, it is easy to guess. The disaster might not happen, any more than the engulfing of St. Petersburg, which depends on a number of unlikely contingencies; but the mere possibility was probably enough, let alone the expense, to induce the Governor-general to insist on further inquiries of the most careful nature, before he can give his sanction to the scheme still strongly advocated by the Public Works Department.

MR. FORSYTH, in a letter to the Times, has called attention to the delay in adjudicating appeals brought from India before the Privy Council. There must, he says, be nearly three hundred appeals from Bengal alone waiting for transmission to England. But the number actually heard in England during the past year forms but a fraction of the whole. In February, 1869, out of thirty-nine appeals set down for hearing twenty-two were remanets from the previous November. In June there were again thirty-nine appeals, of which seventeen were remanets from February. Next November the same state of things may certainly be expected. It is not the fault of the Privy Council, which does its best, but is simply over-worked, and sits only about three times a-year. Hence it takes years to settle a case which might be finished off in a few months. Mr. Forsyth forbears to specify the "obvious remedy," but trusts that his remarks will draw the attention of the proper authorities to the evil he has pointed out.

It is rumoured that a fresh batch of honours is about to be conferred on those officers who distinguished themselves in the late Hazara Campaign, but whose services have not as yet been specially acknowledged.

WE have the pleasure to announce that a successor to Dr. Hall in the Librarianship at the India-office has at length been appointed in the person of Dr. Reinhold Rost, a gentleman amply qualified for the post alike by his scholarship and his personal manners. The two things are not always found together, and we might have had cause for thankfulness in getting hold of a mere scholar. How much more thankful then should we feel for the twofold blessing! The new Librarian, if a German in birth and intellect, has lived among us for twenty-two years. Too old on his first arrival to enter the Civil Service, he became Oriental lecturer in 1850 at St. Augustine's College, Canterbury. Next year, at the request of the Imperial Academy of St. Petersburg, he made a descriptive catalogue of certain Indian MSS., forwarded to him for that purpose. Since 1863 Dr. Rost has been secretary to the Royal Asiatic Society. He has also for many years been a corresponding member of the Literary Society of Madras and the Ethnological Society of Paris. Since Mr. J. Crawford's death he is the only honorary member in this country of the Royal Institute of the Hague. In the absence of a duly qualified Englishman like the late Professor Wilson, we must own that a better choice could not easily have been made. With this selection, and the building of a library fit to hold plenty of books and students, will have dawned, we hope, a new era in the history of Oriental scholarship in England.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

WEDNESDAY, June 30, 1869.

SNAKE-WORSHIP IN WESTERN AND SOUTHERN INDIA.

WHATEVER we may think of the theories advanced by Mr. Fergusson with regard to the origin and former prevalence of Serpent-worship, there is no doubt that the India of to-day affords some curious examples of the superstition illustrated in the sculptures of the Amravati Tope. An interesting paper on this subject was lately read before the Bombay branch of the Royal Asiatic Society by one of its native members, Rao Sahib Vishwanath Narayan Mandlik. It begins with a description of the festival called Nagapanchami, held in honour of the snakes. On the fifth day of the lunar month Srāvana, which answers to parts of our August and September, "each family brings an earthen representation of a serpent, or paints a family of five, seven, or nine serpents with ground sandal-wood or turmeric." Beside this painting or image, a lamp is generally kept burning throughout the day. Milk and other kinds of food are also set before the sacred object. In the afternoon people flock to certain places where the Naga or snake is supposed to dwell, and make their offerings to the snake-charmers, who go about with live serpents from place to place and house to house. In the evening the worshippers offer flowers, food, and incense to the image or painting, and keep watch all night before the lighted lamps. It is the women of the family who chiefly go through these ceremonies, at the end of which the women and children crowd round one of their party, who discourses about the supposed origin of Serpent-worship. The story goes that a peasant in ploughing killed a brood of young snakes; the mother in her rage bit him and all his family to death, except one girl, who was spared because she had made offerings to the sacred image of the Naga. She was even won by the girl's prayers to restore her family to life. From that time forth the Nagapanchami was duly celebrated on the fifth of the month Srāvana, and the worship spread from village to village. We may note by the way that the story fails to answer its professed purpose, for the very cause adduced to account for the girl's escape shows that Serpent-worship had already grown into a popular practice.

In the Vrātārāja are minute directions for keeping this feast of snakes. The Naga should be made of "plenty of silver or gold, or even of wood or earth." Pictures of the "five serpents" are to be painted with turmeric or sandalwood. The five Nagas must be worshipped in the proper manner, "with fried rice and the five nectars," with oleander flowers, with roses, jessamine, and lotus; with sandalwood also and incense. Then the Brahmans are to be feasted with ghee, boiled milk, sugar, and balls of sweetened flour. To the Vyāsa or officiating priest must be given clothes, a cow, and a golden Naga, or serpent. This serpent-worship is not confined to one part of Western India. It is kept up by Hindoos of all sects and classes. In the native States there are grand processions of elephants, horses, soldiers, in honour of the day. For the school-children of Sattara and Kolapore it is a special holiday. They draw on their boards, with chalk, rude outlines of Nagas, which they proceed to worship with flowers and food, before going home for their own pleasure. Dancing, singing, and other sports are carried on in the afternoon, often near an anthill or hollow tree. In one of the Sattara towns live snakes are caught and duly worshipped with food and flowers, and on the next day are turned loose again in the jungles.

In various parts of the Deccan there are temples to the Serpent-God. Canara however in Southern India seems to be the Delphi of modern serpent-worship. Stone images of Nagas are there kept under the shade of the sacred Pipal tree. An incarnation of one of the nine great Nagas is worshipped all over the district. The town of Subrahmanya, fifty-five miles S.E. of Mangalore, is sacred to the serpent-god. Lepers and epileptics are brought thither for cure. Barren women offer vows and roll in the remains of the food on which the Brahmans have feasted. A priestess dances before the temple and foretells the future to credulous votaries. A particular class of Brahmans call themselves Nagapatri, and claim for themselves all kinds of honours on pretence of being themselves the living temples of the divine Naga.

After going over the records of serpent-worship from the age of the Vedas to the present time, the native gentleman with the long name concludes that "spiritual beings were at one time and are still invoked and worshipped under the name of Sarpadevatas." The earth itself was called Sarparajni, the serpent-queen. Sarpas or serpents are used to typify the sun's annual motion through the ecliptic. Presently the Nagas also come on the stage; the Puranas describe their incarnation, and claim for them near kindred with Vishnu and Siva. In the Mahabharata Nagas and Sarpas are used indiscriminately to represent the same things. In later times Snake-worship and Lingam-worship have evidently got mixed up together; or shall we say that both are merely modernised and corrupt developments of the same old symbolic sun-worship which survives in another form among the modern Parsees, and of which some traces are to be found even in the rites of modern Christendom? One thing so far seems clear, that the snake-worship of India must be traced primarily to an Aryan, not, as Mr. Fergusson argues, a Turanian source.

THE INDUS VALLEY RAILWAY.

WE are not surprised to find Mr. W. P. Andrew renewing with unabated energy his periodical appeal to the head of the India Office on behalf of his old client, the Missing Link. His latest effort has taken the form of a letter to the Duke of Argyll, bristling with arguments backed up by useful appendices, and illustrated by two good maps.* Going as it must do over a good deal of old ground, it takes up by the way not a little fresh matter, in the shape of the latest arguments and authorities bearing on a question of first importance to the future of British India. We cannot be surprised, we repeat, at Mr. Andrew's persistent advocacy of a scheme whose merits it seems impossible to deny. It hardly needs even a glance at the map to demonstrate the need of linking the Punjab with the mouths of the Indus by means of a railway from Kotree or Hyderabad to Mooltan. Our only wonder is that an enterprise for which there is evidently so much to say still remains to carry out. Hardly a recent authority worth mentioning, including Sir B. Frere and Lord Lawrence, but has clearly pronounced in favour of such a scheme. The Punjab Government in 1868 declared in the plainest terms that the Indus Valley Railway was indispensable, alike commercially and politically, to the well-being of our frontier province—the Punjab. Nothing, in the words of their minute, “could well add so immensely to our strength here, as the knowledge that troops could, upon occasion, be conveyed in two days from the seaboard to Lahore, and thence in another day to the extreme frontier.” For this reason, and in order to place the trade of the Punjab on an equal footing with that of Bengal itself, Sir D. Macleod strongly urged the construction of the line without delay. A simultaneous beginning might, he thought, be made from both ends, so that in four years a large part of it would be available for traffic. The whole work, he reckoned, would be finished in six years, at the rate of a million a-year.

It is needless to dwell on the military advantages of the Indus Valley line. Every one knows that the Punjab forms the front line of defence for British India, and that the Valley of the Indus offers the nearest and easiest road from Peshawar and Lahore to the sea which flows nearest the Gulf of Aden. In other words, the shortest road from England to India passes up the Valley of the Indus. A railway once made from Kotree to Mooltan, Bombay itself would yield to Kurrachee as the connecting port between Suez and Lahore. Between such a line and its projected rival, the line by Baroda to Delhi, there can be no comparison in point of length, the latter being two-fifths the longer. The former, argues Lord Lawrence, “will mainly run through British territory and benefit our subjects; while the railway through Rajpootana will pass through independent States.” The former also would have the manifest advantage of “running parallel with the Western Frontier,” and so guarding the approach to India by the Bolan Pass.

On commercial grounds too the Indus Valley must bear away the palm from Rajpootana. By all means let the latter line be constructed also in its proper turn. It is good for many reasons to open up that large tract of country to modern enterprise and the influence of Western ideas. But it seems absurd to set its just claims in any sort of competition with those of the Indus Valley. The greater distance, the comparative poverty of Rajpootana, the cheaper construction and working of the Sindh line, the growing capabilities of Kurrachee, long since foreseen by Sir Charles Napier, all tell in favour of the Indus Valley as the natural outlet for the trade of the Punjab and the countries lying beyond it.

Bombay has a future of its own, to which the rise of Kurrachee can make no material difference. Calcutta is already alarmed at the thought of what will happen when the completion of the railway through Central India diverts no small portion of the traffic that now finds its way to the mouth of the Hooghly. But Kurrachee is always 200 miles nearer Aden, and during the south-west monsoon is practically 700 miles nearer than Bombay. In eleven years the vessels that enter and leave Kurrachee have increased in number from 106 to 341, and in tonnage from 48,000 to 223,000. In twenty-two years, from 1843, its import trade by sea rose in value from £122,000 to £4,750,000, and the exports from about £1,000 to nearly three millions. In 1864-65 it exported nearly twenty-five million pounds of cotton and eighteen million of sheep's wool. “When it is considered”—wrote Sir B. Frere in 1866—“that 450 miles of railway from Kotree to Mooltan, along an alluvial country, without a hill a hundred feet high throughout its whole course, would connect twenty millions of cultivating and trading people with their nearest sea-port, it seems to me superfluous to attempt to prove that such a railroad must pay.” From the official statements of Sir John Lawrence, Sir Bartle Frere, and their subordinates, there seems hardly any limit to the amount of produce which Central Asia, the Punjab, Bhawalpore, and Sindh, could send down to Kurrachee for exportation, if the means of transport were made equal to the occasion. Of the utter inadequacy of the present means no one acquainted with them can have any reasonable doubt. There is the Indus, of course, which at first sight seems a noble waterway from Mittan-Khote to the sea. But a broad river, with a shallow shifting bed, and a current in some places of eight or nine miles an hour, can never answer the conditions of a cheap, easy, certain, and efficient highway from Kotree to Mooltan. With all the improvements made in the Indus steam flotilla, the voyage down from Mooltan to Kotree still takes an average of nearly ten days, which must be doubled, and sometimes even trebled, for a voyage up the river. If the Ganges proved inadequate without the help of a railway, such help is even more requisite for the Indus. Regarding the question of an Indus Valley line on its own merits, as a work both of imperial and local usefulness, apart from all special tenderness for a rival Presidency or a rival railway, we would strongly deprecate any further delay in according to a province of Western India the justice it would long since have received had the seat of imperial Government lain near the Indus or the Ravee instead of the Hooghly.

It is possible however that some part of the delay has been owing to the difficulty of deciding along which bank of the Indus the railway ought to run. Which of three rival schemes should the Government prefer—a line crossing from Kotree to Hyderabad up the left bank of the river to Bhawalpore and Mooltan, a line up the right bank to Sukkur and thence across the Indus to Mooltan, or a line up the right bank to Dera Ghazi Khan and thence eastward over the Indus and the Chenab to Mooltan? Between the first and last there is, we believe, no real comparison. The local traffic on either bank being about equal, the line which is easiest to make, cheapest to maintain, and safest to travel over, is evidently the line by the left bank. That is even the best commercially, as it would tap the rich districts of Upper Sindh and Bhawalpore, whereas the other would pass through the long wastes of the Derajat. It is the best strategically, as the river would guard it from the attacks of wild tribes across the frontier. And it is clearly the best for engineering purposes, as the line on the right bank would pass between the water-shed of the adjacent hills and the river into which their torrents periodically disgorge themselves. Moreover, between Sukkur and Kusmore some eighty miles of country are annually flooded far and wide, while the line marked out by Mr. Brunton, late chief engineer in charge of the Indus Valley Survey, would be “secure from inundation floods throughout its length, except at Hillanee, near the northern boundary of the Hyderabad Collectorate.” Some of these objections have equal bearing on the scheme for carrying the railway up the right bank to Sukkur, and thence across the river from Roree to Mooltan. Between Kotree and Sukkur many parts of the line would be overswept by yearly floods; a road with steep gradients would have to be made through the Lukkee Hills; bridges must be thrown over three broad streams, besides ever so many smaller ones; and six miles of embankment would have to be thrown up between Futtahpore and Rookan. Between the advantages of a bridge from Kotree to Hyderabad and of one from Sukkur to Roree, there is little to choose, but the cost of the latter, owing to the breadth of the stream and the height required for the arches, would be far the greater. On the left bank of the Indus the ground is everywhere higher than on the right, and nowhere falls below the flood level of the river. For all these reasons we are inclined to agree with Mr. Brunton and Sir H. Durand in preferring the line by the left bank, which seems also the natural direction for a railway continuing the line already made from Lahore to Mooltan.

The main line once finished, it would be easy to carry out various branches from Sukkur, as a new centre, to Shikarpore, Dadur, Mittankhote, Larkhana, and Schwan. Whichever bank is chosen, no more time should be lost in making up for the shortcomings of the Indus waterway, and so developing the real capabilities of the through traffic from Peshawar, Lahore, and Umritsir. It is said that Lord Mayo has already broached a great scheme of railway extension for all India. Be that as it may, we may trust to his shrewdness to fight in favour of the enterprise so long and ably championed by Mr. W. P. Andrew, and to his fair dealing, to place the completion of his great design in the hands of that gentleman to carry out.

DESERTION OF OFFICERS' WIVES AND FAMILIES.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—I should esteem it a great favour if you or any of your numerous Indian subscribers could give me any information on the following subject, as it is one of great importance, not only to myself, but to others placed in the same unfortunate and helpless condition :—

Can Indian officers serving in India, and leaving their families in England, be compelled in any way to provide for their maintenance ?

I should not have appealed to you unless every other means had failed, but having applied personally at the India-office, besides also writing to H.E. the Commander-in-Chief, and obtained no redress beyond that the matter should be inquired into, I am driven to place the matter before the public, in hopes that some one in authority may take an interest in these cases, and draw attention to them in the House of Commons.

I may state that mine is by no means a solitary instance of the sort, as the Indian Army agents can testify to, and it does seem hard that our husbands, who are drawing handsome pay (mine, £950 per annum), should be able to leave us destitute in England, and contribute nothing whatever to our support or that of our children.—I enclose my name and address, and subscribe myself,

A NEGLECTED WIFE, WITH FOUR CHILDREN.

BONUS COMPENSATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—I wish to point out through your columns the injustice of that condition in Lord Cranborne's despatch on Bonus Compensation which directs that the difference of pay gained by an officer on promotion shall be placed to his debit, but allows of no consideration on the credit side for the undertaking of extra duties and responsibilities consequent on such promotion. Why are these additional responsibilities to be considered as worth nothing when they come to be valued in the compensation scale, when it is well known that it is on this account that an officer gets an increase to his pay on promotion ? It is to be hoped that on the re-discussion of the question in Parliament the Secretary of State may be willing to withdraw this illiberal condition, for as long as it is in force any attempt to get even a modicum of compensation will not only be useless, but will only add insult to injury. To give you my case as an instance, had it not been for the amalgamation I should have received about £3,000 from my regiment ; my actual payments to officers purchased out came to nearly £500, but on applying even for this sum I was informed that I was not entitled to anything, and not so much as a statement of any kind was furnished to show how this to me happy result had been arrived at, and this in the face of the general order which required that a credit and debit statement was to be provided in each case.—Yours, &c.,

VICTIM.

[The best thing for "Victim" to do, if he has not already done it, is to send in a petition to Parliament, and sign the memorial which Colonel Sykes will shortly present.—ED. A. I. M.]

AN ANSWER TO "GWALIOR."

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Referring to the letter from "Gwalior," in Allen's Indian Mail of this day's date, I beg to inform you that I have for the last thirty years studied Indian medicine, and have some remedies which I think would be of service to the patient alluded to, and would be happy to forward them for trial if he will allow me to do so.—I am, Sir, yours truly, HULDEE BILDEE.

THE INDIAN COUNCIL—PENSIONS.

The Times of India remarks that the proposition embodied in the Government Bill to do away with pensions to retiring members of the Council of India seems to meet with a general disapprobation among those who are interested in the matter. It is felt that it is one of those little pieces of economy which, without effecting any great saving, seriously diminishes the value of a very important and responsible post, and is likely to give rise to some practical inconveniences. There is no doubt that, as the Duke of Argyll said, there will always be found plenty of men to accept the posts on the conditions proposed ; but this is not exactly the right way of looking at the question. A great nation does not deal with its public servants precisely on this principle, nor would it be found conducive to the public welfare to pare down salaries to the minimum point at which able men would accept them. A score of men would be found who would undertake the post of Viceroy of India for half the remuneration at present given, and would on an average be found, perhaps, fully equal to the ordinary article as imported ; but who would say that on this account it would be wise to make a reduction in the precise sum at which Viceregal abilities could be secured ? It is not so much whether twelve hundred a year will attract a good supply of able men to the Council, but whether a retiring pension should not be added as rendering the remuneration more suitable to the posts, and making such posts acceptable to a larger class of men than would otherwise be inclined to undertake them. If the Council were to be wholly composed of retired Indian officials of high rank, it might be that a pension would be no particular object, as the majority of these retire with something like two thousand a year, besides what they may have saved during their Indian career ; but there are several instances in the present Council, irrespective of the old Company's directors, where no such pension is enjoyed, and where a very able man is spending the last of his proper working years in the no light toil of committee work, without any previous provision, as far as Government is concerned, having been made for the time when he shall rest from his labours. It is true that these cases are limited in number, but if a commercial element is to be introduced into the Council, as it might well be, to a small extent, an additional roll of possible cases in which a pension would be a matter of consideration is made in the list of Counsellors. Of course, on an average it would be the acute and successful merchant who would be alone summoned to take part in its deliberations, but it is quite possible that it might be desirable to call in the services of one who had not amassed riches sufficient to justify his acceptance of a post of £1,200 a-year, which he must necessarily give up at the end of ten years, having previously cut himself loose from all his commercial connections before taking his seat at the Board. As long as it is politic to maintain a Council of India to assist the Secretary of State in the conduct of our affairs, so long is it the highest policy to obtain the very best counsellors that the age can produce for the purpose ; and it is bad economy for the sake of a few thousands a-year to let the niggardliness of the provision offered stand in the way of securing any talent that may be desirable. We fully agree with the Duke of Argyll that twelve hundred a-year is a sufficient temptation as far as annual salary is concerned, but the withdrawal of the pension will, we think, prove a mistake, both as preventing the acceptance of the post, in a certain few cases in which the addition of a pension of £500 a-year would secure very desirable assistance, and in partially marring the efficiency of the Council in its practical operations.

THE WAHABIES.

The Englishman remarks that the report of the discovery of a Wahabi centre at Vellore has excited considerable surprise, and in some quarters, indeed, not a little incredulity. This arises, no doubt, from the fact that, as far as is known, no apparent connection exists between the Wahabis of Northern India and those of Madras. Yet when we consider how strong and how comparatively united is the Mahomedan element in the Deccan and Southern India, we should, instead of doubting the truth of the discovery, be inclined the rather to wonder that it was not made sooner. That the Wahabis of Madras have a common object with those of Northern India is no reason that they should have a common agency. Indeed, taking all things into consideration, we should be prepared to find that a common agency would be the very thing they would avoid, since any accident, like the discoveries at Patna, for instance, would at once cripple both sections of the conspiracy, and paralyse the whole Wahabi organisation of India. It may therefore very possibly be, that since the attention of the authorities has been drawn to the matter, some clue to a correspondence between the sections will be found, but the Southern agency will have to be tracked and rooted up independently of whatever may be done in Upper India. We regret, therefore, the more the haste of the Vellore authorities to make a haul. A little patience, a little forbearance and watchful care, would very likely have placed them in possession of the means of following up their discovery. By pouncing so swiftly on their prey, they may indeed kill the conspiracy at Vellore, but it will in this case die without a sign, and the secret of the general organisation in Madras will die with it. In Northern India the various Governments have been gradually brought into accord with the views of the Supreme Government, and local jealousies have given way to the determination of the Viceroy to sift the matter to the bottom. That such jealousies existed may seem to the outside public somewhat inconceivable, but when it is remembered that the tendency of late years has been to form distinct services in the different Lieutenant-Governorships, the fact is easily comprehended. If Lord Mayo had not wisely insisted that those who held the thread should unravel the secret of the labyrinth, we should have had the police of each province endeavouring to search the portion of the maze within their respective jurisdictions. A disjointed investigation is sure to fail. The Viceroy has carried his point, but the self-love of the services has caused much unnecessary delay. If report speaks truly the police are once more on the track, and this time with no further chance of being checked in their career. Traced link by link from the Megna to the Sutlej, the conspiracy will now be followed across the Punjab to Peshawur. The supplies have already been stopped at their sources as a result of the measures taken in Bengal, and now the last stage between the passes and the plains will be destroyed, and the fanatics in the Mahabun isolated. With no means to maintain themselves, with no recruits to keep up their strength, the position of the colony must speedily become desperate, and it may not improbably happen that the steady determined hunting down of this conspiracy, stage by stage, will accomplish that which the Umbeylah campaign failed to do—the destruction of the Wahabi colony at Sittana. This will no doubt be a success on which the police may congratulate themselves, but the question arises whether this is all that is required.

NATIVE CIVIL SERVANTS.

The Indian Daily News thinks that the natives have fairly won an entrance through the door that we have opened for admittance into the Civil Service. They have accepted the terms of the competition, and have won it. Objection is made that they have succeeded by means not creditable, or at least by means that afford no guarantee of efficiency in the discharge of the duties which they will be required to perform. It is said that they have obtained success thus far by "cramming." Possibly there has been some cramming in their case, as there is undoubtedly also amongst the English competitors, if we are to believe the revelations made from time to time respecting them and by them. But we have, notwithstanding this fact, a Civil Service of which, in post prandial phraseology, any nation might be proud. This result is not attained by cramming, but it spite of it; for if anything is calculated to bring out the qualities of a man of any nationality, placing him in a position of responsibility is just the thing to do it. This will doubtless be admitted; but it will be said that the natives lack the very qualities which make Englishmen act so well under a sense of responsibility. This may be correct, for the simple reason that for centuries the natives of India have been a subject people, and it should not be forgotten that a nation requires to be educated to freedom as well as other things; and no one will surely contend that the best school of freedom is one of perpetual serfdom. It may be safely left to the course of events to show how far the natives may be fitted for the offices they seek. If they show themselves capable, there are advantages in giving to them a portion of the administration, though it does not follow that the result of this will be the immediate termination of our rule. It may be taken as a fact that the de facto rulers of the world are capable men, and the time is not so out of joint as that the capable men will be displaced by the incapable, even though some of the latter participate in the administration. Of course, if the natives show that equality which our correspondent denies them to possess, or that superiority which they may claim hereafter as the result of competition, we must give way. But we can conceive a difficulty in any one holding the opinions of our correspondent being seriously afraid for the stability of our rule. Those who have shown themselves capable of entering the service will have to show themselves capable also of performing the duties of it if they are to be retained in the service which governs a nation.

THE CYCLONE OF MAY 16.—The cyclone which passed to the east of Calcutta on the evening of the 16th instant seems to have burst with full violence upon Dacca towards midnight. The cyclone blew from east-south-east veering round to east-north-east, and finally, as its force began to diminish, to south-east and south-south-east. Incalculable damage has been done to the town and the boats on the river, in spite of the warnings which the manjhees had received early in the afternoon. One estimate makes two lakhs worth of merchandise to have been lost on the river alone. General Nuthall lost baggage, servants, and boats. It is apprehended that the loss of life was considerable.—Friend of India.—At Koolnah and among the Sunderbuns the cyclone seems to have been very severe. Mr. Rainey in the Englishman describes the destruction of property as enormous, but he does not anticipate that it will be followed by actual distress, unless towards the south, from which details have not been received. Mr. Rainey's bungalow was destroyed while they were sitting down to dinner, and they escaped with some difficulty to another building, in which they found shelter for the night. It was remarked that the waters of the storm wave, which in the preceding cyclone were quite fresh and sweet, were on this occasion very brackish, also that no thunder was heard nor lightning seen. At Dacca, however, the lightning appears to have been vivid. The steamer Putna, with two flats, and the Port Canning Company's vessel Water Lily, managed to ride out the storm in the Roopsee with safety.

Bengal.

STATION TALK.

MORAR, May 23.—Cholera still hangs about, and some casualties have occurred within the week. Heat apoplexy, too, has claimed several victims amongst the European soldiers and native inhabitants. Under these dispiriting circumstances it is not to be wondered at that no attempt is to be made beyond that of the usual parade of troops to celebrate the Queen's birthday. This morning the Agra letter bag has been sent by the Postmaster of Gwalior on a migratory excursion, and has carried with it, of course, the Delhi Gazette of the 22nd. The Post-office at Gwalior requires overhauling. The Bombay post is always detained there for hours. It arrives usually before nine in the morning, and letters are delivered here, at about five miles distance, six or seven hours afterwards. I have never heard any excuse for this; but the detention of the overland mail bags has been partially explained by an assertion that the Morar bags are opened for the extraction of the Political Agent's letters. This, if true, is manifestly wrong, and is no more to be justified than is the intrusion of visitors into Post-offices during the sorting of letters, incoming or outgoing—a practice which I know was very commonly in vogue with a few last year at Morar, and was permitted by the Postmaster on account of the rank and position of the intruders. Setting aside the prying and indelicate character of such a proceeding, it involves delay in delivery of their letters to the residents, occasionally, perhaps, the loss of letters, &c.; and so for the selfishness of two or three the many are made to suffer.

LUCKNOW, May 22.—Although the doings of 1857 appear to us now as a troubled dream of the past, there are events occurring every now and then which vividly recall to us its stern realities. Occasionally a murderer is apprehended, and we are treated with a report of the revolting details enacted years ago. It is a pleasure therefore for me to report of merit so long unrewarded now substantially acknowledged, for actions performed during that eventful period; more so when the subject is a native of the country, whom many unthinking ones are prone to regard as utterly bad, and wholly wanting in those nobler emotions and actions which we Englishmen consider ourselves as alone possessing. Meer Baz Khan, a police officer, was this morning decorated with the Second Class Order of Merit for distinguished services during the Mutiny, the details of which I have not ascertained, but may yet report; and quite as acceptable, he received all arrear allowances appertaining thereto, and amounting to some 1,200 rupees or thereabouts. Among other officers, the General commanding honoured the ceremony with his presence, and, no less conspicuous, there were present three ladies.

JUBBULPORE, May 24.—There have been a few locusts at Jubbulpore subsequently to the appearance of the swarm at Allahabad. Probably they availed themselves of a free trip by the East India Railway. They are of a yellow colour, and unlike those which visited the Central Provinces a few years back, and which were of a lobster appearance. Another officer of H.M.'s 2-12th has died at Jubbulpore, Captain Medhurst; he had been suffering for a very long time, and had just returned from England, whither he went on leave last year for the benefit of his health. This is the fifth officer that the regiment has buried at Jubbulpore. The men of the corps are keeping in excellent health, doubtless materially owing to their having been excused from all drill while the weather continues so hot. The last popular reading given at Jubbulpore was not so successful as the first; the best thing of the night was Lieutenant Reed's reading, the merits of which are in every one's mouth. But the heat of the theatre was terrific, and these entertainments will have to be shelved until the weather gets cooler. It seems to be the normal state of the Jubbulpore Post-office for one rogue to be always attached to it. Last year one of its employes was taken up for having stolen a large number of letters, and he received his due. One would have supposed that the punishment of a native clerk of this very office, who got seven years (because the law allowed of no more) in 1862 for a similar offence, would have been an adequate warning, but the conviction of a second offender even has had no avail, for only a week ago another native clerk was apprehended, and has been committed to the Jubbulpore sessions (coming off tomorrow), for abstracting currency notes and a Bank of Bengal order from two registered covers, and to my utter astonishment I learnt this morning that a local pleader has a complaint against this office for non-delivery of a registered cover to the person to whom he addressed it. In the case of the man who is about to be tried by the Session's Court, I believe the postal authorities are deserving of the credit of having detected the tampering with the registered covers in question, and of seizing the thief, though that is a point for the Court to decide; but how much more satisfactory would it be if such cases never occurred. The office, or rather the department, will be ready with reasons such as small pay, which precludes the possibility of securing eligible men; but it would be worth knowing if the registration department of a Post-office cannot be put solely under the postmaster, and no one else allowed to meddle in it, so that the public may know exactly whom to hold responsible when registered covers go astray; or if some more secure system can be introduced, it is the business of the department to suggest it. The management of that portion of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway which falls within the contract made with the late Mr. Walker has been intrusted to Mr. Pearson by the Deputy Commissioner of Jubbulpore, who has taken over charge of the estate of the deceased, pending a reply from Mrs. Walker, who is in England, as to whether she will administer to her late husband's estate. Mr. Pearson's energy and special fitness for conducting railway works will be a sufficient guarantee to the public that the death of Mr. Walker shall not interfere with public interests, which involves in this case the completion of the railway from Bombay to Jubbulpore without the delay of a single day. Major Thomson, a deputy commissioner in these provinces, it is said, will go home by the ensuing winter, and possibly for good. Lieutenant W. S. Brooke, Cantonment Magistrate of Jubbulpore, Officiating Deputy Commissioner of Seonie, will, on the return from leave shortly of Colonel Dennys, the permanent incumbent of Seonie, go as Deputy Commissioner of Seroncha; but it is idle to talk of any officer in these provinces being a permanent incumbent. There are few things which possess less of a permanent character than the civil incumbencies in the Central Provinces, and for all I can say Colonel Dennys may have to try the air of Seroncha when he comes out.

ALLAHABAD, May 25.—I am sorry to announce the death of a young officer, Mr. Haythorne, who was only lately appointed to officiate as Sub-evident of Police here. He was laid up with small-pox, from which he had very nearly recovered, when heat apoplexy carried him off. This morning the Chief Justice occupied the Bench in a criminal case; Private Waterhouse was tried for murdering Private Taylor at Meerut; on the jury were five civilians, and the remainder were officers of the regiment to which the man belonged. So far as previous conduct was concerned the evidence was in favour of the prisoner, but it left no doubt of the murder having been committed by him. The jury brought in a verdict of "guilty," and the unfortunate man was sentenced to death. Waterhouse, I am told, was not defended until Mr. Gaspar took up the defence at the last moment. When the sentence was passed the prisoner turned a shade paler, but appeared otherwise composed.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

SIR W. MITCHELL.—The Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces leaves Allahabad for Nynce Tal about the 15th June.

MORADABAD.—The Pioneer announces the death, from abscess of the liver, of Mr. Manderson, Collector of Moradabad.

LADY MAYO, it is reported from Simla, purposed proceeding on an eight days' visit to Narkunda, in the interior of the hills, immediately after the leave of the 24th May.

AN OLD INHABITANT.—Among the obituary notices of the Calcutta papers is one of the death of a Mr. Isaac Hubbard, aged eighty-one years, sixty of which had been passed in India.

RAILWAYS.—The Government of India is said to have sanctioned a branch railway from Shegaon to Khangaon, the latter being one of the great cotton marts of Central India.

CHOLERA AT LUCKNOW.—Cholera of a virulent type having made its appearance near Lucknow, pickets of mounted policemen are stationed on the road to prevent the infection being brought into the city. One or two fatal cases have occurred in the city already.

AKYAB.—It is reported from Burmah that the defalcations in the Bank of Bengal at Akyab amount to upwards of Rs. 80,000. Six men who took "French leave" with the cashier have been apprehended, but the cashier himself has hitherto managed to escape the police. He is said to be on his way to Upper Burmah.

MURDER IN PLAY.—The Oudh Ukhbar reports that in the Gondah district some children were at play. One acted the part of a commissioner, another that of a deputy-commissioner, and a third that of a soldier; a fourth boy was made to play the part of a criminal for the occasion. He was tried, convicted, condemned to death, and actually hanged.

LOCUSTS IN THE LAHORE AND SHAHPUR DISTRICTS.—Large flights of locusts have been observed in the Lahore and Shahpur districts. The crops having been cut, these insects can do little harm at present, but we imagine measures would be taken to destroy the eggs which may have been deposited on the halting grounds.

SUBORDINATE EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.—It will be good news to the Subordinate Executive Service of Bengal that the Government is about to consider a scheme for the improvement of the service. The different grades are underpaid and there are no prizes. The hardship is the more apparent when the executive is contrasted with the now fairly paid judicial service.—Friend of India.

LAWRENCE MEMORIAL FUND.—We are happy to see that the Lawrence Memorial Fund is rapidly progressing. The amount of donations already recorded is Rs. 23,790. The Maharajah of Cashmere has given the sum of Rs. 3,000; the Maharajah of Puttialla Rs. 2,000; and the Nawab of Rampore Rs. 1,100. These are evidences of the estimation in which our late Viceroy was held among the native Princes.—Indian Volunteer Gazette.

CIVIL.—Captain Doveton, Conservator of Forests, Central Provinces, is, we regret to hear, compelled through ill-health to proceed on furlough to Europe; Mr. Jacob will officiate for him as a temporary measure.—Central India Times, May 22.

MR. FURNIVALL.—The services of Mr. Furnivall, district engineer on the Delhi Railway, have been temporarily placed, says the Pioneer, at the disposal of the Government of India. Mr. Furnivall has been deputed to make a survey of the country between Delhi and Rewarree, with a view to the ultimate construction of a line of railway which will tap the district rich in salt in the neighbourhood of Goorgaon.

THE NEW DIVORCE COURTS.—The Divorce Court in the N.W.P. seems likely to be popular. Half-a-dozen petitions have already been filed. At a recent sitting Mr. Justice Turner frankly admitted his inexperience in that kind of work, and said that he should require very strict proof of all matters at issue so as to insure the decrees of the Court being respected in England.—Indian Public Opinion, May 25.

THE BORNEO PIRATES.—We hear from Sarawak that the celebrated Lanun pirates have again made their appearance after a suspension of several years. They have already succeeded in capturing ten trading prahus and killing eight men, besides wounding several others. The Assistant Resident at Bintulu had succeeded in capturing one of the pirate vessels, and had killed the whole of the crew with the exception of two boys.—Englishman.

BURNT TO DEATH.—A gloom has lately been thrown over Meeran Meer and Lahore by the death of the wife of Lieutenant F. Mascall, R.E., from the effects of a deplorable accident. About a fortnight ago, on returning from an evening party, the muslim slave of her dress caught fire from a candle on her table, and in a moment the whole dress was in flames. Assistance was given as speedily as possible, but not before the unfortunate lady had been terribly burnt, and from the effects she gradually sank and died.

BURMAH.—The Rangoon papers state that the King of Burmah has again played us false, and that he is obstructing the opening of Captain Slade's mixed court. If this be correct, and we have reason to think that it is so, the duty of Government is clear. The establishment of the court was freely conceded under treaty, and his Majesty must be made to see that treaties made with the British Government are binding. And it should be done at once, for Captain Sladen must have the greatest difficulty in maintaining the dignity of our Government in his present position.

THE WEATHER IN UPPER INDIA.—The heat during the past few days has been very great, not worse, however, than has been experienced in other stations, where the range of the thermometer has scarcely been under 100 deg. We are, therefore, not so badly off as our neighbours, and we should be thankful for the almost total immunity we enjoy at present from sickness.—Mofussilite, May 25.—The heat in Lucknow for the last few days has become really unbearable; on Wednesday, under the punkah, we had the thermometer at 103 deg., and outside 106 deg. at twelve o'clock at night.—Lucknow Times, May 22.

COAL IN CENTRAL INDIA.—Mr. Mark Fryer, the Government Coal Engineer, has recently been up here (says the Central India Times) to consult about his coal undertakings. He has got two European brace-head men, and five sets of borers to prove the Chanda coal-fields. The experiment of burning Chanda coal on the G.I.P. Railway was not well reported on, but another larger experiment is to be made under better supervision. Meantime ten tons of Chanda coal are on their way to Jubbulpore for trial on the East India Railway engines, which are suited for India coals, whereas the G.I.P. Railway fire-boxes, &c., are only adapted for English coal.

FAMINE IN CENTRAL INDIA.—Mr. Nicholls, Assistant Commissioner, who has been on a rapid tour of inspection over the distressed tracts to the north of Jubbulpore, has brought back some woful accounts of the condition of the famine-stricken people. It appears many of these have come from Myhere and Rewah, native States, from which our Government would be justified in demanding money in aid of the operations set on foot by us to keep these thousands from death. If Lord Cranbourne, who admires the native style of Government, wants to learn something more of it he should study the moral to which this tale of woe points.—Jubbulpore Chronicle.

IRON IN BURMAH.—In his late survey of British Burmah Mr. Theobald found many traces of the great iron manufactures which were formerly carried on. Near Kiungalay, on an affluent of the Keenee, and to the eastward near Shaw-bando and other spots, heaps of slag and the burnt furnace walls on the banks of the streams proved the former activity of the manufacture. The ore is still plentiful in the district, and fuel is abundant. The decay of the trade must be partly attributed to former political disturbances, and partly to the introduction of English iron and steel. It is however a branch of local industry which does not call for any attempt at its revival, as any very general clearing of the "Eng" forest over the arid tract in which the ore occurs would be injuriously felt in its climatal influence. The "Eng" is of no ordinary value to the cultivator. Its large smooth leaves condense moisture admirably, and towards the small hours of the morning shower clear drops of water into the earth below.

GEOLOGY.—The Geological Survey of British Burmah during the season 1868-69 has, we learn from the Englishman, comprised that part of Pegu lying east of the Irrawaddy and north of the Naweng Choung. The country presents but few features of geological interest. There was at one time a considerable manufacture of iron and salt, but both have been almost abandoned, although there is still an abundance of ore and various saline springs scattered throughout the district. There is said to be one hot spring in the bed of the Bale Choung, near its mouth, but the surveyor was unable to ascertain its temperature, owing to its being, at the time of his visit, covered with a sandbank.

PUNJAB BIBLE SOCIETY.—The Punjab Bible Society reports the completion of a great work—the publication of the New Testament in the Goornukhee character and the Punjabi dialect, in an edition of 3,000 copies, besides 4,000 copies each of the four Gospels, the Acts, and Epistle to the Romans. Many of the society's Bibles and tracts, in English and Oriental languages, are bought freely at its railway stations and colporteurs. Every soldier is supplied with a Bible along with his kit, but may purchase a "reference" edition. The Bible Society's Pearl 8vo. edition, bound in morocco with circular edges, is the greatest favourite with the men. The Punjab Auxiliary Bible Society is one of the fruits of the Missionary Conference held at Lahore during the Christmas week of 1862.

THE NIZAM'S DOMINIONS.—The Hyderabad correspondent of the Englishman writes:—"The report in the city now is that Sir Salar Jung intends to form a Council of Regency, with the aid of some half-a-dozen noblemen. The plan appears good, but it is doubtful whether it will succeed when it is remembered how general is the dislike to the Minister, and how many are ready to intrigue against him. In Berar the season is said to be the hottest experienced for at least five years." From the same source we learn "letters from Berar mention the departure of many European officers on furlough. The result is a very large increase to the work of the few remaining officials. It is said that one of these has to fulfil the duties of no less than eight different posts. The exodus is not to be wondered at when it is remembered how trying is the climate of Berar, the thermometer sometimes marking 112 degrees in a double-fly tent."

BHOOTAN.—The solution of the difficulty arising from the wise refusal of the Bengal Government to pay the treaty allowance to Bhootan, in consequence of the disturbed state of the country, and on account of their recusancy in failing to apply for it at the proper time and place, and also their supposed contumacy in closing the Buxa pass, has now been found. The conduct of the Bhootas has been satisfactorily explained; no disrespect was intended to the Government of Bengal, but the distracted state of the country prevented their chiefs from sending an envoy of proper rank, while the closing of the pass was due to the private feud of two neighbouring Jungpens. Under these circumstances the treaty allowance can be paid without compromising Government, and provision has been made for a Bhootah envoy residing permanently at Darjeeling. The Bengal Government has been firm in refusing to restore any of the territories taken from Bhootan in 1864.

THE HEAT AT AGRA.—The heat continues to be intense. We have heard of two other deaths caused by apoplexy, one that of a member of the Great American Circus Troupe, the other of Mr. Freander, of the Inland Customs Department; the former died at Agra, the latter in the railway train at Etawah. Several natives have been struck down by the hot blasts now prevailing. For the past week dust storms of more or less force have passed over; the one on Sunday last was a veritable simoom, accompanied by thunder, causing darkness sufficient to render the use of lights at 5 p.m. a necessity. The weatherwise console themselves and their more discontented neighbours by the belief and the assurance that the approaching monsoons are to be all that one can desire. The troops continue to be as well as can be expected under the circumstance, and if unremitting care and attention can possibly avert extraordinary sickness, we hope to have it to say the men have passed this trying time remarkably well. Punkhas and thermantidotes are going day and night incessantly. Thermometer in a house well protected, 98 degrees!—Delhi Gazette.

OPIMUM.—It would seem as if the Government of India had attached more importance to the Imperial edict in China forbidding the cultivation of opium than that edict deserves. We do not suppose, however, that it is too late for the Government of India to view the edict in a correct light should it turn out that they were wrong in the first instance, and probably no loss would be entailed upon the revenue in consequence. Not so, however, with opium merchants and speculators, if the China Overland Trade Report is to be believed; it says with reference to this matter:—"It appears that in India considerably more importance than it deserves has been attached to the Imperial edict which has been issued prohibiting the cultivation of opium in China. Telegraphic advices bring the news that this intelligence had the effect of raising the price of opium very considerably in Bombay. The circumstance is much to be regretted, as there can be no question that it will be productive of serious loss to those who have taken a mistaken view of the subject. Whatever the object may have been in issuing this edict, there can be no doubt whatever of its effect. It will simply be used by the provincial authorities, as, in fact, it is in all probability designed to be used, as a means of extorting a heavy mulct from all those engaged in the cultivation. This plan of raising revenue is perfectly well understood by the natives of China, who will not look upon the edict as designed for any other object; while it is equally certain that the viceroys and their subordinates will regard it in the same manner. That this view of the matter is correct is evidenced by the fact that the issue of the proclamation, though it caused a temporary rise, has ultimately had no appreciable effect here, and that the native dealers attach little or no importance to it."

KIDNAPPING IN NATIVE STATES.—On the requisition of the Secretary of State the Government of India has called for reports from the political officers and local Governments on the kidnapping of children for immoral purposes in the native States. The notorious career of the woman Gujra, a favourite mistress of the Dholepore Rana, who for some time past has been driving a trade in supplying the Zenanas of the Dholepore chiefs, and even that of the Rana himself, has given a great deal of trouble to Government. Captain Walter, of Bhurtpore, has been instructed to investigate all the charges against this woman, and to deport her to Agra under Section 3 of the Penal Code and Act 1 of 1849. Whether or not the woman be a British subject, if only evidence of complicity in crimes of kidnapping committed on British soil be forthcoming against her, her extradition under the recent treaty will be demanded. Should however such evidence not be forthcoming, and also in the event of the evidence elicited not being sufficient for legal conviction, yet strong enough to leave a suspicion of her complicity in these crimes, she will be authoritatively removed from Dholepore, and her establishment broken up and dispersed. The Governor General has also resolved that "the discredit attaching to the Dholepore Raj from the presence of such a woman should be pointed out in strong language, and the Rana should be at the same time informed that, if these disclosures are true, the continuance of such a state of things is what the Government will not for a moment permit." We rejoice to find that the Duke of Argyll has thus dealt with a case which has proved such a scandal to our Government. The political officers have long been cognisant of the pernicious influence exercised by this woman upon the Dholepore Rana, but what good was there in representing the case in the days of a policy of non-interference? And now an officer of the high character of Captain Walter is asked to report "whether he was aware of the existence, at Dholepore, of the practices now brought to light." As if the iniquity had not been reported, alike by political officers and the police. A year ago we called attention to it in a review of the police report of the North-Western Provinces.

MILITARY.—Up to date of latest reports which have reached the Government of India, the number of military Europeans attacked by cholera at Allahabad was sixty-seven, of whom forty-nine had died. The native troops seem not to be so liable to the malady—the native soldier cases at Allahabad having been only seventeen, of which only three proved fatal. The 103rd Foot at Jubbulpore have had five cases, all fatal; the Artillery at Morar have had eighteen cases, fourteen fatal. At Seetapore, Oude, there had been some cases, but only three deaths; and one or two native soldiers have succumbed at Dinapore.—We (Englishman) hear that the steamer sent round from Calcutta on 17th April, to transport the 7th Native Infantry from Chuttuck to Dacca, had not arrived at the beginning of May. The commanding officer, finding from the hospital reports that the regiment was likely to suffer, hired a number of country boats and set out on a voyage to meet the steamer.—A contemporary hears, but does not vouch for the truth of the statement, that a large number of Indian officers are to be allowed furlough to Europe, and that it is in this very lame manner the Secretary of State proposes to get rid, at least temporarily, of superfluous Indian officers. The plan is a very simple one, but does not meet the requirements of the case.—Cholera has, we are glad to learn, entirely disappeared from the 58th Regiment.—We regret to learn of the death, at Jubbulpore, of Captain F. E. Medhurst, of her Majesty's 2-12th Regiment.—We regret to observe that Captain Twyford, Deputy Commissioner of Raepore, died of cholera on the 19th April.—General Bouchier, C.B., and Staff arrived at Debroogurh by river steamer on the 15th May. The General narrowly escaped being wrecked. The steamer and flat were both dismantled by the recent hurricane, or cyclone, which extended over a large portion of the Bay of Bengal, and were both left behind, complete wrecks. The upper storey of the flat was quite destroyed, but her anchors held fast, otherwise the consequences would have been much more serious.—The Delhi Gazette understands that a correspondence has been opened between the Inspector-General of Hospitals, Indian Army, and the Secretary to Government, Military Department, concerning the order which inflicts such gross injustice on regimental surgeons, in debarring from them the advantages of the Furlough Rules of 1868. Already one step towards rescinding the order has been made, and our contemporary is now more than hopeful that before long the advantages of the new rules will be thrown open as broadly and liberally to regimental medical officers as they are to all others. The case lies in the hands of Dr. Murray and Colonel Norman.—Colonel Mowbray

Thomson, of Cawnpore celebrity, has arrived at Debroogurh and assumed command of the station and of the 42nd Assam Light Infantry.—Major George Chesney, R.E., has arrived in Simla, and has taken over charge of the office of Accountant-General of the Department of Public Works.

STATION TALK.

COONOR, May 17.—You will be surprised to receive growls from this Capua of Southern India, but the fact is the weather is much too warm of late and there is a nasty wind blowing, and several people are fancying their livers are slightly out of order and that the hills are getting unpleasantly steep; so instead of enjoying their brief holiday in dolce far niente as usual, they look out for something to find fault with, and when people begin that sort of thing the Post-office is certain not to escape. I have got another grievance, there is no money-order office here. The place is choke full of people, officials of all grades, planters, permanent residents; there are hotels and boarding-houses, a weekly market multitudinously attended, even shops, Bombay merchants, and European stores, and yet there is no means of getting money nearer than Ootacamund—no branch bank, no Government treasury, not even a money-order office. Fancy having to send twelve miles to get a cheque cashed, especially if it is a large one! Fancy the chances of the cash getting lost on its way home! A money-order office at this place would assuredly pay itself, and even if it did not, Government ought to establish one on grounds of public morality. If this place is a paradise for ladies and gentlemen, and spite of my liver I fully admit that so it is, it must be a very purgatory for horses. If Coonoor pony-phatons had been known in the days of the heathen mythology, Sisyphus would have been turned into a pony and harnessed to one for ever, a far worse punishment than that commonplace makeshift of the stone in omne volubilis ævum. To a humane and sympathising spectator it is as tiring as the treadmill to watch the poor brutes staggering down or toiling up the hills, such beastly screws, too, as most of them are! If the mantle of Colonel Martin had descended upon the shoulders of any other prophet, and that prophet had found his way to Coonoor, I guess there would be a chance of a "row in the pig market." It is, or seems, an odd thing that pilgrims from the north of India, on their way to Ramaiswaram, have a great fancy for passing over these hills. Can you tell me why? The Neilgherries are not upon any natural line of route between Benares and Ramaiswaram, and, as far as I know, there are no "holy sites" up here.

WELLINGTON, May 21.—I observe that some gentleman from Bengal, evidently in a perilous condition as to his liver, has been finding fault with the Neilgherries in general and Wellington in particular as dull, stale, flat (!) and unprofitable, awfully slow, inhospitable and "serious." I cannot say I seem to see it. It is true there is not much gambling or illegal flirtations or other Simla recreations going on, but the people appear to enjoy themselves very tolerably in their own harmless way. For example, we had a ball here last night, some ninety people present, and in spite of a somewhat rainy, thundery, and lightningy, night, by no means a bad one. The want of a pandal or awning to shelter the walk from the carriages up the steps, caused considerable damage to light drapery through the agency of rain, and sundry exquisitely formed toes delicately but alas too lightly, chaussées for the occasion got unpleasantly wet; and herein I may remark upon the truth of the maxim, that virtue is its own reward. It is self-evident that those fair creatures who duly fulfilled the object of their creation and turned those light fantastic toes afore-said vigorously to their legitimate account, speedily danced themselves dry, while it is painful to reflect on the possible dangers incurred by the damp wall, flowers, of colds, rheumatics, bronchitis, and other such horrors. Of the previous ball at Ooty you have already been informed, and probably (though I have not seen it) you have ere this got the account of the cricket match played at Wellington, between Ooty and Bangalore, at which Bangalore "licked," as we used to say at school. I am sorry to say that our respected Chief met with an accident a day or two ago which might have proved a serious one; his horse reared bolt on end, and the Chief fell on a heap of stones left by the wayside for road mending. I am happy to say that no serious injury was sustained, and his Excellency will, it is hoped, be all right again in a day or two. The return cricket match comes off to-day and to-morrow.—Athenæum.

Miscellaneous.

MILITARY.—The 2nd (Queen's Bays) Dragoon Guards, the Bangalore Herald hears, commence volunteering in June, and will proceed to England during the latter part of the year, being relieved by the 15th Hussars in the Bombay Presidency. The cavalry regiments in the Madras Presidency remain as at present.

A PEDESTRIAN FEAT.—Mr. Napier, late a commissioned officer in her Majesty's army, has succeeded in doing what very few people can do in Bangalore—that is, creating a sensation. That gentleman has undertaken to walk one hundred miles in twenty-four consecutive hours, and yesterday (Monday) evening at six o'clock he began. Twenty of the native police, four European constables, and one inspector were on the ground; and, notwithstanding the rain, a good many people were present.—Bangalore Herald.

SNAKES IN MALABAR.—Although Government has sanctioned a reward of four annas being paid for "all large poisonous snakes killed," it does not appear, says the collector of the district, that much progress has been made in their extermination. In the last three years, says Mr. Thomas, six hundred and sixteen persons have died from snake-bites, and he urges his officials to exert themselves in the humane task of saving life by taking away the lives of these venomous reptiles. We think that Government might aid this object by increasing the reward. There are not many persons who would like to risk an encounter with a cobra even for four annas!

THE CAPITAL.—In Madras the "position" is much the same as when we last summarised our news. The weather is still just as hot if not hotter, the place is as quiet and the prospects of rain are as distant as ever. Altogether we are in the most delightful state of stagnation; even the Vellore business, which caused some little excitement, has been discovered to be nothing except what is a chronic ailment, a slight feeling of discontent among a few natives; so we have once more subsided into a state of peace and quietness, and the anxious ones amongst us have countermanded their orders for rifles and supplies of powder and bullets.—Athenæum.

CIVIL.—Mr. J. W. B. Dykes, whom the Madras Mail speaks of as the popular and energetic Collector of Nellore, is about to retire from the Civil Service. He arrived in India in 1844, and has spent the greater portion of his twenty years and nine months "actual service" between Salem and Nellore. His work on "Salem: an Indian Collectorate," will, in a measure, keep his good services to the State in mind for many a year. He will be succeeded, in all probability, at Nellore by Mr. C. G. Master, now acting civil and session judge of Calicut, who, meanwhile, is to be sent on special duty for two months to the Kistna district, in connection with the Irrigation Commission now sitting at the Presidency.

CONVERTS TO ISLAM.—Two of the four Europeans, who embraced the Mahomedan faith at Madras a few months ago, find they have had enough of their new creed. They now prefer the society to be met with at the Vagrants' Home to that of the "fair Mahomedan wives" found for them as the reward of their fortitude and fidelity during the process of perversion. The Madras Mail states that these "men with their two other companions started for Hyderabad, but on their journey began to tire of the pilgrimage, and so turned back to Madras. It is said they were disappointed with Mahomedan company—expecting probably to associate with Jahs, Khans, and Omrahs—though they were well fed and cared for, and even allowed to ride in vehicles when they wished to travel abroad."

DRINKING FOUNTAINS.—When the water distribution scheme is completed Madras is to have, in various parts, 137 drinking fountains. It has been estimated that these will cost 68,500 rupees, or on an average 500 rupees each. The President of the Municipal Commissioners, informing the Maharajah of Vizianagram that his Highness's sojourn in this city could not be better perpetuated than by his Highness erecting one of these fountains, applied to the Rajah to build the first of the fountains. His Highness, who had before proposed to Government to erect a fountain at Madras, and another at Kurnool, has consented to accede to Colonel Denison's wish, and has asked the Municipal President to furnish him with an estimate of the cost of the fountain. The fountain the Rajah proposed to erect at Kurnool was to cost 4,000 or 4,500 rupees, but his Highness thinks that the one required for Madras, to be the best of all the fountains, should be on a grander scale.—Madras Times.

Bombay.

MR. MOROBA CANNABA.—We have been particularly requested by Rao Bahadur Moroba Cannoba to state for the information of his caste that in consequence of very few applications from widows having been received up to this time he has been obliged to modify one of the terms of his advertisement. Instead of females between 20 and 35 years of age being qualified to apply, all widows of whatever age may make the necessary application until the evening of the 10th June—provided they have no children by their former husbands living.—Indu Prakash.

SIR S. FITZGERALD.—His Excellency the Governor was to leave Mahabaleshwar for Poonah on the 9th June.

DEATH OF A BARRISTER.—We regret to have to announce the death of A. L. Fernandes, Barrister-at-Law, and Portuguese Consul in Bombay, at his temporary residence on Bandora-hill. The deceased gentleman, who was the third son of the late Braz Fernandes (well-known in Bombay), was for a long time past suffering from some dropsical affection, which baffled all medical treatment. He was the first Portuguese of Bombay who entered the Bombay Bar after a successful course of study in England. He also held the honorary rank of Captain in the Portuguese army.

THE WEATHER.—Bombay was on Sunday evening blessed with a small share of the rains that have visited Poona, Lanowlee, Mahabaleshwar, and the Ghats generally. About half-past six the clouds thickened rapidly, and after a few peals of thunder a gentle rain began to fall, and continued for about an hour, cooling the atmosphere greatly. This can hardly, however, be regarded as the burst of the monsoon; the terrestrial and celestial phenomena that almost invariably precede or accompany that occurrence were altogether wanting. There was no dust storm, nor did the lightning exhibit any of that grandeur which we may expect it to do before the monsoon fairly sets in.—Times of India, June 1.

BOMBAY BANK COMMISSION.—The Bombay Bank report, which had been for some time in the hands of the Governor-General, has been sent home again to the Secretary of State. The report will, we fear, be rather disappointing to those who only want to know whom to hang. For piquant matter people must go back to the proces verbal of the examinations and to the disclosures brought to light in Bombay and England during the sittings of the Commission. The report is, we believe, confined almost entirely to an investigation into the actual and immediate causes of the loss of the bank's capital. It pronounces no opinion upon the honesty or dishonesty of individuals.—Pioneer.

MILITARY.—We regret to learn that the extreme heat of the weather at Kemptee was beginning to tell on the European troops there. As many as seven deaths occurred in one day among the soldiers, through heat apoplexy, and of these, five were found dead in their beds.—We learn from the Observer that his Excellency Lord Napier of Magdala, accompanied by the Quarter-Master-General, Colonel Gell, and his Excellency's personal staff, Col. Dillon, C.B., and Captain Scott, A.D.C., left Poonah on the evening of May 28, for Mander Deo, with the view of deciding positively on the site most eligible for the erection of barracks capable of holding a regiment of British infantry.

BRANCH RAILWAYS.—We trust it may not be anticipating some formal final decision when we mention that branch lines are to be made to connect the great cotton marts of Khamgaum and Oomrawuttee with the Nagpore extension of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway. The distances of these towns from the line are twelve miles and six respectively. We presume that the branch from Khamgaum will strike the line at or near Nandorah, which is several miles nearer Bombay than Shecagaum, which is a trifle nearer Khamgaum than the former place. The Oomrawuttee branch will probably run near to Budnaira, but the details of the plan are not yet made known. The country is level, and it is intended to make the line inexpensively. Many will wonder why those much required feeders have not been taken in hand ere this, especially the one to the more famous Cottonopolis of Khamgaum. Probably if we could describe the negotiations and discussions that have had to be gone through before this score of miles of rail could be sanctioned, the public would better appreciate the obstructions and impediments in the way of our obtaining proper branches and feeders to the trunk lines of railway. No doubt Mr. Rivett-Carnac will have exerted himself to the utmost to add these new facilities to the cotton field under his supervision; and before next hot season Bombay merchants may have a chance to appreciate the supersession of the two dusty cart roads along which some of their finest staple has hitherto had to travel. H.E. the Viceroy is, we believe, sincerely anxious to forward as many of these supplementary public works as possible; and we trust that the Veerunggaum branch from Ahmedabad and cart roads needed as feeders along great part of the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India line will gain a share of his Excellency's close attention.—Times of India.

QUESTIONS RELATING TO THE FURLOUGH RULES OF 1868.

No. 559.—The following paragraphs of a military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 104, dated April 15, 1869, are published:—

Para. 1. Your communications and resolutions [Military letter, No. 46, dated Feb. 2 last; ditto, No. 469, dated Dec. 4 last; and Resolution No. 489, dated Jan. 21 last] record your having decided as follows on questions relating to the Furlough Rules of 1868:—

That if an officer, while on furlough, be transferred to another appointment, he will still continue to draw the furlough pay as before, whatever the salary of the new appointment may be, but the officer acting in the latter will be restricted to half staff salary.

If, during his absence on furlough, an officer's appointment be abolished, he will forfeit his claim to half staff salary, and will revert to the furlough pay of his military rank, regard being had to any circumstances deserving special consideration.

The following will not form part of the aggregate of eight years' furlough, with pay and retention of appointment, to which an officer who may elect the furlough rules of 1868 is restricted by rule 16:—

1. All leave taken as local leave (not being furlough) in India;
2. All leave necessitated by wounds received in action, or by sickness contracted on field service, which may be allowed to reckon as service for pension, under the provisions of G.G.O. No. 1,113 of 1857;
3. All leave duly granted to England on extensions of furlough, or leave on medical certificate granted to England, if without pay;
4. All sick leave to England that may have been taken under the rules of 1796 on the old rates of furlough pay;
5. All sick leave granted to the colonies eastward of the Cape of Good Hope under the rules of 1796.

But the following will form part of the eight years referred to:—

1. Furlough with pay on private affairs under whatever rules it may have been taken;
2. Leave to England on medical certificate with pay under the furlough rules of 1854.

That if the twelve months' leave in India on medical certificate taken under clause 26 be exceeded, the whole leave must be reckoned as furlough, and allowances be adjusted accordingly.

That in the case of military officers in civil employment, on consolidated salaries, the acting allowances which have been drawn by such officers shall not be held to be special or extra allowances, but shall be taken into account as part of the salary on the average of which their furlough allowances are calculated under rule 5.

2. These decisions are approved.

PRIZE MONEY.

No. 560.—H.M.'s Secretary of State for India having brought to notice that, notwithstanding instructions to the contrary, shares of prize money continue to be sent home by officers commanding regiments through the miscellaneous remittance returns of their corps on account of men who have proceeded to England, it is hereby notified that shares of prize money should only be remitted to England by the prize departments through the Governments of their Presidencies. Commanding officers of regiments and detachments, to whom shares of prize money may have been passed on account of men who have become non-effective in their regiments, are therefore directed to return immediately such shares to the prize department, accompanied, if the men have proceeded to England, by a notification to that effect. The shares of such men will then be forwarded without delay by the Prize Department.

It is further notified that, in remitting shares of prize money, the distribution on account of which the remittance is made, should be distinctly stated, and also how the shares of former distributions, if any, have been disposed of. The shares of each distribution unclaimed in India should be remitted at the same time.

THE VICEROY OF EGYPT.

The Viceroy, who left Paris on Tuesday, June 22, for England, via Calais, accompanied by Nubar Pacha, arrived at Dover on board her Majesty's ship Enchantress, Captain Petley, at 1.40 P.M. The Viceroy, after taking luncheon, left Dover at 3.4 P.M., for Charing-cross, by special train, and alighted at the Charing-cross station at a quarter before five o'clock. A guard of honour of the foot guards, with the band and colours, was drawn up on the western platform, and an escort of Life Guards should have awaited the Viceroy at the entrance of the station. The escort, however, came too late.

Soon after four o'clock five of the royal carriages had taken up positions inside the station, and precisely at a quarter to five the royal train glided alongside the platform. At that moment the Prince of Wales drove into the station in a private carriage, and tendered a royal greeting in the name of the Queen to the Viceroy. The Prince and the Viceroy at once entered the first state carriage, and his Highness's suite having taken their seats in the other carriages, the illustrious party drove off to Buckingham palace, amid cheers from the crowd outside the station. A large number of persons also lined the route from Charing-cross, down Parliament-street, through the Horse Guards, and St. James's-park, and his Highness, as he passed along, gracefully acknowledged the salutations of the multitude. No preparations, however, had been made to keep the road clear. There were no pickets of Life Guards on duty; there was no escort; and the procession of closed carriages, headed by a single mounted inspector of police, was as little impressive as it is possible to conceive.

The Viceroy, accompanied by Nubar Pacha, Mustapha Bey, Abdul Kader Bey, Ratip Bey, Lord Alfred Paget, Sir John Cowell, Colonel Staunton, and Colonel Cavendish, honoured the Royal Italian Opera with his presence in the evening.

By command of the Queen a State concert was given on Wednesday evening, June 23, at Buckingham-palace, to which a party of nearly 800 was invited. His Highness the Viceroy of Egypt was present, attended by the members of his suite and by Lord Alfred Paget (clerk marshal) and Lieutenant-Colonel W. H. F. Cavendish (groom-in-waiting to the Queen). Their Highnesses Prince Hassan Pacha and Prince Tussoon Pacha were also present.

On Thursday evening, June 24, his Highness Ismail Pacha, Viceroy of Egypt, with a numerous suite, left Buckingham Palace for Windsor Castle on a visit to her Majesty the Queen. The Viceroy returned to Buckingham Palace on Saturday, and in the evening dined with the Prince and Princess of Wales at Marlborough-house. Previously to leaving Buckingham Palace a deputation from the Boards of Directors of the Anglo-Mediterranean and British Indian Submarine Telegraph Companies was received by his Highness. Lord William Hay, in introducing the deputation, briefly alluded to the valuable aid given by his Highness to all enterprises of public interest, including those which they represented, and expressed a hope that such aid would be continued. The Khedive, in reply to the address, expressed his gratification at receiving the deputation, and his anxiety to promote public works of every kind, whether telegraphic or otherwise, in which his country was concerned; but he could promise no exclusive favour to any one project over another, as Egypt, like England, was a land of free trade. Lord William Hay having explained that there was no intention of soliciting more than equal favour to that which might be shown to other possible enterprises, his Highness replied that on that equality the companies might confidently rely; and, with renewed expression of his Highness's satisfaction at having received the address, the deputation withdrew.

About 5,000 troops, under the command of Lord Lucan, were on the ground at the review on Saturday in Windsor Great Park. In the morning the Queen witnessed the operation of throwing a pontoon-bridge across the Thames at Datchet. The Royal party went to the review ground in the afternoon in six carriages, the first of which contained the Queen, the Princess of Wales, the Princess Christian, and the Viceroy of Egypt. The Prince of Wales accompanied the party on horseback.

The Viceroy on Saturday evening, after returning from the review at Windsor, went to the French plays at St. James's Theatre. On Sunday his Highness went to the Zoological Gardens in the afternoon, when the promenades were crowded with company. The Prince of Wales had arrived about half an hour before the Viceroy, and conducted his Highness through the Gardens.

On Monday afternoon the Queen gave a grand "breakfast" at Buckingham Palace in honour of the Viceroy.

Miscellaneous.

BOMBAY GAS COMPANY.—The report of the Bombay Gas Company recommends a dividend of 2 5-6ths per cent., free of income-tax, payable on the 12th July next, making, with the interim dividend of 1 2-3rds per cent., paid 1st January, 4½ per cent. for the year.

SCINDE RAILWAY.—The report of the directors of the Scinde Railway Company, to be submitted at the annual meeting on the 29th of June, states that the gross receipts in the half-year ending the 31st December last amounted to £39,053, and the working expenses to £27,743, leaving a net revenue of £11,310.

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY COMPANY.—The annual meeting of the East Indian Railway Company will be held on the 1st of July. An extraordinary meeting is called for the same day, "for the purpose of considering, and, if deemed advisable, of passing a resolution or resolutions, authorising the Board of Directors to create and issue debenture stock in lieu of ordinary debentures, under the powers of Act 31 Vic., cap 26."

COTTON IN INDIA.—Another discussion has taken place at a conference held at the Society of Arts on the subject of the cultivation of cotton in India. Mr. Cheetham, who presided, gave a brief history of negotiations entered upon with a view to induce the Indian Government to take the matter up, and said that all that had been done up to the present time was to obtain the appointment of one cotton commissioner and four gardeners for the purpose of maintaining a trade worth £30,000,000 a year. Unless the India-office change its views, Mr. Cheetham did not see any prospect of an increased supply of cotton from India.

DEPUTATION FROM THE P. AND O. STEAM COMPANY TO THE VICEROY.—The board of directors of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company have waited upon the Viceroy at Buckingham Palace to congratulate him upon again visiting this country, and to express their confidence that the friendly protection and assistance hitherto extended to the company by the Government of Egypt would be preserved. His Highness, in reply, said that from a sense of gratitude as well as from a regard for the interests of his country, he was disposed not only to continue to the company any favours it was in his power to confer, but to extend them. A new way of passing through the country would, his Highness added, probably soon become available, and the Peninsular and Oriental Company would profit by it as much as any one, perhaps more so.

SOLDIERS' DRESS.—The present uniform and clothing of our soldiers is to undergo at once some alterations, which will do much to remove the hitherto just stigma on our nation as "the worst military tailors in the world." The present tight tunic, which has so recently been noticed as a source of disease, will gradually fall into disuse, being, according to orders now to be published, reserved for the Queen's parades and purely special occasions. A loose, blouse-like, or "Norfolk" coat is to be issued to the troops, which will be worn on all duties, fatigues, and parades, usually comprised in the soldier's routine of duty; a band running on the inside of the coat will draw it into the figure, and add much to its appearance. An improvement is also to be made in another article, the shirt; about twenty specimens are to be at once issued to each regiment for trial and report; the material will be a mixture of cotton and wool in equal proportions, and in addition to the advantages of cheapness, lightness, and lessened roughness, the quality of not shrinking will be highly appreciated. The present great-coat, which weighs as much as four pounds, will be made much lighter, and it is also suggested that a waterproof cape might be advantageously added, to be used with or independently of the coat itself. These improvements in the soldiers' wardrobe will do much to benefit him on home service, and will doubtless lead to further considerations as to his requirements when on active service or abroad. —Pall Mall Gazette.

INDIA AND THE COTTON TRADE.—On Tuesday afternoon, June 22, a deputation waited upon the Secretary of State for India, from Bolton, Blackburn, and other places in Lancashire, to present and support memorials from factory operatives calling attention to the depressed condition of the cotton trade, and praying the Government to encourage the development of the resources of British India as a cotton-producing country, and to enable that dependency to compete on equal terms with the United States of America. The memorialists also prayed that the Indian import duty might be repealed, so that British manufacturers might find a better market in that country for their productions. The deputation, which numbered forty persons, consisted of employers and operatives, the mayors of Manchester and Bolton, and the following members of Parliament:—Messrs. Bazley, Jacob Bright, Birley, Sidebottom, Hibbert, Cawley, E. C. Egerton, Hermon, Mellor, Edmund Potter, R. Shaw, and Lieutenant-Colonel Gray. Mr. Bazley introduced the deputation. Mr. Mawdesley, who spoke for several districts where the cotton manufacture is carried on in Lancashire, said there were numerous mills standing quite idle, while some were at work only for two, three, or four days in the week. Distress among the operatives was general in those districts, so much so, that from sheer necessity many of them better circumstanced than the rest were emigrating, and those left behind could see no way out of their present difficulty unless the Government took some action on their behalf. Two courses were absolutely necessary to remedy the present state of things; the one was that every effort should be made to get an adequate supply of cotton, and the other course was to promote free trade; and the present Indian policy had a tendency to accomplish either or both of the objects the deputation sought at the hands of the Government. If the import duty were abolished, British manufacturers could then find a better market for their productions in India. Mr. Crossley, as a representative of the weavers, confirmed the previous speaker, and said the deep distress which prevailed among the workpeople was inadequately represented in the memorials. A large number had to depend upon the poor-rates for support, their small savings having been absorbed by want of employment. The deputation would call the attention of the Government to the desirableness of developing the resources of the colonies, and especially of India, with a view to the increased production of cotton and the provision of an adequate supply to the manufacturers in this country, and of consequent employment for the distressed operatives. They did not complain of the Indian tariff as being the first cause of the present distress, but they believed it to be one of the secondary causes. The Duke of Argyll, in reply, expressed his regret to hear that distress was so general in the districts represented by the deputation. He said, with regard to the encouragement of the growth of cotton, that the Government had this question before them, and that they were taking active steps, both directly and indirectly, to promote it. The extension of railways in India was a great necessity for the opening of internal communication, and at that very moment there was in the India-office a very large scheme for the promotion of the extension of railways and other public works. Instructions had also been given by the Government for the purchase of good seed, with a view to the production of cotton by the natives. All these steps were being taken. He did not mean to say there might not be others to be adopted; but attention was being directed to the subject generally. With regard to the tariff, he was not aware that it was at all protective, except for the purposes of revenue. He regretted that the expenditure was so enormous. The Government fully required the revenue obtained from all sources, and without carefully looking into the matter he was not prepared to answer an important question on so vast a subject as taxation. Mr. Bazley having thanked his Grace, the deputation retired.

ABOLITION OF THE BONUS SYSTEM.—When the lust of patronage caused the transfer of the armies of the East India Company to the Crown, the 6,000 officers of those armies, who, on condition of spending their lives in India, enjoyed certain advantages in pay, promotion, privileges, and pensions, had all those rights and privileges guaranteed to them by the 56th clause of the Act of 21 and 22 Vic., cap. 106, which was repeated in the Act 23 and 24 Vic., cap. 100, in the following words:—"And be entitled to the like pay, pensions, allowances, and privileges, and the like advantages as regards promotion and otherwise, as if they had continued in the service of the said Company." And "The advantages as to pay, pensions, privileges, promotion, and otherwise, shall be maintained in any plan for the reorganisation of the Indian army." One of the most cherished and important privileges which the officers had to set against the stagnation of promotion—subalterns being commonly fifteen or sixteen years before they got their companies by seniority—was the sanction given by the directors of the East India Company and by the Board of Control, and therefore by the British Government, to their contributing to a regimental retiring fund, from which a bonus might be paid to a senior officer to enable him to retire, without which aid he would have been unable to retire, and would remain a barrier to the promotion of his juniors. From this source officers frequently received large sums on retiring, and these were called their "expectations," which Lord Derby said were guaranteed to them. A lieutenant-colonel of cavalry received £7,000; the present military secretary at the India-office received £5,000; and the sums ordinarily ranged from £3,000 to £4,000 in the infantry. Officers cheerfully submitted to these contributions, which were often made with money borrowed from the Agra and other banks, knowing that their own turn must come, and they would get back again not only their subscriptions, but the value of the step they made as senior captain, major, or lieutenant-colonel of cavalry, engineers, or artillery. But the reorganisation of the armies of India in 1860 totally destroyed this system by the establishment of a staff corps to each Presidency, according to the rules of which every subaltern of twelve years' service was made a substantive captain, every captain of twenty years' service a major, and every major of twenty-six years' service a substantive lieutenant-colonel. These officers, therefore, had no longer any inducement to subscribe money to be paid to facilitate the removal of senior officers of the respective regiments from which they were drawn; but at the same time their names were ordered to remain on the cadre of their respective regiments, to block the promotion of those officers who had not been removed to the staff corps, and who thus lost not only their expectations of some thousand pounds, but the very sums they had contributed to their bonus funds. This unjustifiable breach of the guarantee raised the indignation of the regimental officers, and above 700 petitions were presented to the House of Commons, which, on May 2, 1863, determined, after a division, to present an address to her Majesty for inquiry. The result was that on August 8, 1866, a despatch was addressed to the Government of India directing inquiries to be made at each Presidency by a committee of officers, and to pay to claimants such sums as might be due, after deducting from each individual the difference of pay between one rank and another for any step he had gained. So far, therefore, from the expectations of officers being fulfilled, of which Lord Derby assured them, so far from being paid the money they had lost, one officer who had subscribed £500 to his bonus fund had £10 returned to him; others did not get anything at all; and others were brought in debtors to the Government! This mockery of redress has roused officers again to appeal to the House of Commons; and if the facts be as stated, which we learn from a pamphlet sent to us headed, "Abolition of the Bonus System," by Lieutenant-Colonel Phillips, retired list late Bengal army, we presume the House of Commons, with its usual sense of justice and love of fair play, will consider favourably the appeal of the officers.—Daily News, June 21.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS, FRIDAY, June 21.—INAM LANDS BILL.—The Duke of ARGYLL moved the second reading of this Bill, which he explained was intended to remedy some omission in a previous Act, under which a large number of grants of land in India had been made. This Bill would render those grants legal. The Bill was read a second time.

THE BENGAL BANK.—The Marquis of SALISBURY rose to ask the noble duke opposite whether the Government had sent out any instructions to the authorities at Calcutta to give directions for the closing of the branch of the Bengal Bank now at Bombay, and whether he would lay on the table any correspondence which had passed on the subject. He merely wished to ascertain what future policy the Government contemplated pursuing with reference to the branch banks in India.—The Duke of ARGYLL, in reply to the question of the noble marquis, stated that the Government had sent despatches upon the subject to the Government of India, desiring them to use all their influence with the Bank of Bengal for the purpose of inducing them to withdraw the agencies they had established in Bombay. He hoped that the noble lord would not press for the production of the correspondence, which was of rather a confidential nature.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, June 23.—ABYSSINIAN WAR.—On the motion that Sir S. Northcote be a member of the Select Committee on this subject, Mr. CRAWFORD moved that the order be discharged in order that the Committee might be nominated by the Committee of Selection.—The amendment was negatived, and the Committee was constituted as follows:—Sir S. Northcote, Mr. Grant Duff, Sir J. Hay, Mr. Seely, Mr. Eastwick, Major Anson, Mr. C. Denison, Mr. White, Mr. Howes, Sir P. O'Brien, Lord Elcho, Captain Beaumont, Mr. C. Turner, Mr. Mundella, Sir J. Elphinstone, Mr. Holms, Colonel Barttelot, and Mr. Candlish. Power to send for persons, papers, and records. Five to be the quorum.

PETITIONS PRESENTED DURING THE PAST WEEK.—By Major Morgan, from Lieut.-Colonel Newbolt, praying for compensation for loss of bonus on the amalgamation of the Indian armies; by Serjeant Simon, from the manufacturers and merchants of Dewsbury, praying that the period of service in the Council of India may be limited by the Government of India Act Amendment Bill to five years, with the power of extension by the Crown, in extraordinary cases, for a further term of two years; that the Council be reduced in number so as not to exceed twelve members, and that one-third of the number may be men who have not belonged to the Indian services, but men of manufacturing and mercantile experience in the United Kingdom, capable, in cordial intercourse with the rest of the Council and the Board of Trade, of rightly informing and advising the Secretary of State for India in all commercial matters affecting the United Kingdom and the national industries in connection with India and the other Asiatic portions of her Majesty's empire; by Lord Milton, from the Morley Chamber of Commerce, praying for certain amendments to the Government of India Act Amendment Bill; by Colonel Gray, from Bolton, praying for the repeal of import duties in British India, and for the development of resources in the production of cotton.—By Lord Holme-dale, from Colonel Impey, late Bengal Engineers, Colonel Kennion, Bengal Artillery, and Captain Urquhart, Bengal Artillery, complaining of grievances; by Colonel Gray, from Captain R. D. Gibney, late of the 59th Bengal Native Infantry, praying for consideration of his case, as altered by the recent changes of the East Indian Government; by Mr. Bazley, from Droydsden, praying for the revision of the East Indian and colonial tariffs, and for the promotion of the cultivation of cotton; by Sir T. Hesketh, from Preston, for repeal of import duties upon cotton fabrics into India, and for encouragement of growth of cotton there; by Mr. E. C. Egerton, from Hyde, in favour of alteration of the import duties on goods admitted into British India.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, June 28.—THE UMBEYLLA CAMPAIGN.—In reply to Mr. KINNAIRD, Mr. G. DUFF said the India medal of 1854 was to be given to the survivors of the troops who were engaged on the North-Western frontiers from 1845 to 1863. A clasp was to be given along with the medal for the North-West, and a special clasp for the Umbeylla Campaign.

THE RECEPTION OF THE VICEROY OF EGYPT.—In reply to Colonel BARTHELOT, who asked whether it was true that the Viceroy of Egypt was conveyed in a pair-horse fly from the steamer to the railway station at Dover, and, if so, why a Royal carriage was not sent for his accommodation, Mr. GLADSTONE said it was not true; that the Viceroy of Egypt, following the example of most of the illustrious Royal and Imperial personages who had arrived at Dover and proceeded from the steamer to the railway station, had been pleased to make use of those means of locomotion which nature had provided. (Hear, hear, and laughter.) It had never been the custom to send Royal carriages to Dover, to enable those distinguished persons to get over the difficulty of clearing the space between the steamer and the railway station; but, on one occasion within the memory of man, a Royal carriage had been sent to Dover, and that had been at the time the Emperor and Empress of the French had visited this country. The Emperor and Empress of the French, however, had not used the Royal carriage, but walked all the way to the station. (Hear, hear.) He presumed that the discouragement attendant on that occasion had been such that the experiment of sending another Royal carriage had never been made. As there was another rumour, entirely groundless, which had appeared in the papers, with respect to the Viceroy having been received at the side door of Buckingham Palace, he might say that it was entirely without foundation, and that the Viceroy had been received at the grand entrance.

THE INDIAN FINANCIAL STATEMENT.—In reply to Sir C. WINGFIELD, Mr. GRANT-DUFF stated that, so far as the Indian Office was concerned, there was no reason why the Indian financial statement should not be now made on any day which suited the convenience of the House. It was, however, the ancient constitutional practice that the Indian financial statement should be brought before the House at the end of July or the beginning of August, because, partly in consequence of the heat of the weather, and partly in consequence of the lassitude induced by a long succession of morning sittings, hon. members were supposed at that time of the year to be most in sympathy with their fellow-countrymen in the East. (A laugh.) Besides his hon. friend must be aware that, while such measures as the Park-gate Chapel Bill and other questions of equally transcendent interest remained undisposed of, it would be most imprudent to fritter away their time in considering a matter so insignificant as the balance-sheet of the Indian Empire.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S (Ex. Army Med. Staff)

C H L O R O D Y N E

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE. The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Remedial Uses and Action.

THIS INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of Opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which eminently useful Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Colic, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

Those exhaustive diseases—Fever, Ague—so common in tropical climates, are rapidly arrested, and the cold stage in a few moments checked by a timely dose, when warmth and a general glow of the system is established, and comfort secured.

As a Sedative, Neurotic, and Antispasmodic, it is unequalled by any other known Medicine, and not to be surpassed in its specific effects.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—“Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed.”

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec. 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered, the patient recovered.

Mrs. Forbes, wife of the Chaplain at Paris.—“I cannot speak too highly of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne; I have not in any single instance been disappointed with the result, even in aggravated cases of Indian Cholera.”

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—“Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not 'supply a want and fill a place.'”

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—“So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases.”

CHLORODYNE, the Great Remedy for CHOLERA.—See Report in the Times, Sept. 6, from the Malta Correspondent, who states, August 24th, that “109 cases and eighty-one deaths occurred at Messina; 50,000 people fled from the town, which is in a most deplorable condition: that Chlorodyne has been found most efficacious as a remedy, and a number of persons are reported to have been saved by its use.”

Now as there are various imitations sold under the name of Chlorodyne, containing Indian Hemp, Morphia, &c., ingredients highly adverse to the cure of Cholera, the public are cautioned against the use of any compound under the name of Chlorodyne, unless it bears the name of Dr. J. Collis Browne, who coined the word Chlorodyne to designate his wonderful discovery, which he fully tested for many years in her Majesty's Service before introducing it to the public, the wonderful success of which has given rise to various imitations totally different to genuine Chlorodyne. See the decision of Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood, reported in the Times, July 13th, 1864.

The extraordinary medical reports on the efficacy of Chlorodyne renders it a subject of most vital importance that the public should obtain the genuine, which is now sold under the protection of the Government of Great Britain, authorising a stamp, bearing the words “Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne,” without which none is genuine. Sold in bottles, 1s. 14d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d., by all Chemists. Sole Manufacturer, J. T. ## THE HISTORY OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA.

FROM THE APPOINTMENT OF LORD HARDINGE

TO THE POLITICAL EXTINCTION OF THE EAST INDIA COMPANY.

BY LIONEL JAMES TROTTER,

Late of the 2nd Bengal Fusiliers.

The first volume of this History embraces the period from Lord Hardinge's appointment in 1844 to the retirement of the Marquis of Dalhousie in 1856.

The second volume commences with the arrival of Lord Canning in India in 1856, and closes with his lordship's death in 1862. This being the most eventful period in the annals of the East India Company, including the Mutiny, great pains have been taken in its narration.

"Captain Trotter has done good service in providing the public with a sequel to a standard work. And in every way his performance is worthy to take rank with that of his predecessor. The thoroughly satisfactory manner in which the task has been performed is greatly to the author's credit. We take our leave of the work, congratulating its author upon having produced an addition to the 'History of India' at once permanent in purpose and popular in execution; acceptable in every way to the wants of the young members of the local service, to whom the modern annals of the country which they help to administer are of far more importance than the history of remote periods having little or no relation to the present day."—Standard.

"Both the plan and execution of the work are deserving of high praise. Full of interest and animation, and narrates with clearness and brevity all that took place during the period of which it treats. . . . The second volume of Mr. Trotter's history possesses the same merits by which the first was distinguished. It is written with great animation, and often with considerable graphic power. It tells its story with perspicuity and without needless or tiresome digressions. It avoids as far as possible that controversial vein into which Indian political and historians are alike prone to fall, and it is as times so near our own. . . . The narrative or the spirit-stirring events of the mutiny will of course have the greatest attraction for most readers, and it is in truth the best, as it is the principal part of the present volume. It appears to us that Mr. Trotter has been eminently successful in his treatment of a very exciting and interesting period of recent history."—London Review.

"The volume is full of interesting matter, comprising every event of importance during the exciting period of the rebellion, told in a concise, straightforward, and impartial manner, unincumbered by those copious extracts from documentary evidence which often serve no other purpose than increasing the bulk without adding to the usefulness of a work of this description."—Observer.

"Captain Trotter's reflections are few. He has his own views, though he does not force them upon us in detail. . . . All this proves him to be far above the narrowness of the average Anglo-Indian. He speaks out boldly, too, in defence of Lord Gough. . . . A word as to our author's descriptive powers; they are such as his lighter writings would lead us to expect. . . . Whatever he has to tell Captain Trotter tells it in an animated and picturesque style. The night on the field at Ferozeshuhur . . . is admirably painted; so is the grand success of Goojrat. The disarming of the veterans of the Khalsa . . . is a striking scene. Captain Trotter's book opens up many other interesting questions; it is full of notices of social changes; it points out the specially unfortunate way in which the annexation of Outh was managed."—Fortnightly Review.

"Here we have before us the first volume of an eminently readable history. . . . The arrangement of the matter, the style, and, above all, the spirit which pervades his pages, are worthy of great commendation. Mr. Trotter is singularly free from the faults of a partisan writer. . . . The volume concludes with a particularly criticism on Lord Dalhousie's character and services."—Calcutta Englishman.

"We cannot say that he has dealt unjustly by Lord Canning's memory. . . . A well-considered volume, in which the heartiest acknowledgments are paid to Lord Canning for his temperate wisdom at a time when there was no man more abused than he. . . . He writes thoughtfully, yet with a soldier's sense of the stir struggle is full and impartial. His history of this great follow him through his vigorous rehearsal of the well-known incidents. It forms a very lucid history, the several parts being well planned and well grouped, and no important point being omitted or misrepresented."—Examiner.

THE TEXTILE MANUFACTURES AND THE COSTUMES OF THE PEOPLE OF INDIA

Prepared under the Authority of the Secretary of State for India in Council.
By J. FORBES WATSON, Reporter on the Products of India.

Imperial quarto, morocco back, cloth, with numerous coloured Photographs. £3. 5s.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

THE TIMES.—"On no point, perhaps, in regard to India, has greater ignorance prevailed in England than in respect to the clothing of her vast population. Late as it is, and for the first time within the last hundred years of our Indian domination, the work just completed by Dr. Forbes Watson supplies this great and almost unaccountable want of information, and supplies it, too, in a most complete and intelligible manner. It would be impossible to follow Dr. Watson's work in detail; but, the interest throughout will continue unabated. His book is written in a clear and thoroughly intelligible style throughout; it is handsomely got up, and embellished with numerous coloured photographs, from which male and female, will be more readily understood than from mere descriptions."

THE ATHENÆUM.—"We may safely say that a more important work on the manufactures of India has never been given to the public, than the Industrial Museum, and this Commentary by Dr. Forbes Watson. Advantages are sometimes slow to follow, even when the channel for them has been skillfully made and clearly marked out, but we certainly do anticipate very great results from this work, and that before long its author will be acknowledged to deserve a place amongst the real benefactors of India."

THE EDINBURGH REVIEW.—"It is a matter of national importance to study and ascertain what the traditions of India in respect to dress really are. This task has been most ably performed by Dr. Forbes Watson in the volume before us. We call attention to the work and to the subject, not as a matter of mere curiosity, but as an inquiry of direct interest to the manufacturing industry of Europe. Dr. Watson has evidently brought his personal Indian experience to bear upon a mass of materials which, in less skilled hands, would most likely have proved wearisome and unintelligible. As he has arranged his details, they are as entertaining to the general reader as they are full of information and instruction to the manufacturer."

THE MORNING POST.—"The conception of this splendid work reflects the highest credit upon the wisdom of the department to which we are indebted for its publication; and the manner in which it has been executed by its author. No one can fully appreciate the value of this work without seeing it, because neither analysis nor extracts can give any idea of the immense mass of minute facts which it contains, and the admirable manner in which they are grouped and made subservient to the practical requirements of the manufacturer and the merchant, and the cravings of the student of ornamental art. The illustrations are as magnificent as they are appropriate. In fact, as mere productions of beauty and taste, they give the work the air of a book of art and luxury, and we have no doubt that from this feature it will find many admirers and purchasers beyond the ranks of trade and commerce."

THE ART JOURNAL.—"The work, indeed, is as well fitted, as far as embellishment is concerned, for the drawing-room table as it is for the study; and its contents will be found far more interesting to the general reader than its mere designation would lead to a supposition that it might be. The motive and purpose of its publication is highly creditable to the present Home Government of India."
